Mr. Lillard testified that on the morning of the shooting, as he approached the state house with Goebel and Jack Chinn, he noticed that the capitol grounds were clear, whereas on previous occasions, "mountain men" were numerous. He said he had left his two companions and reached the door of the main capitol building when he heard shots, and looking back saw Goebel fall. He declared that one of the front windows in the office of the secretary of state was partly raised at the time. At the conclusion of his testimony court adjourned.

Fruit Houses Burned.

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 15.—It is officially announced that the organization known as the Spanish-American War Veterans will hold its second national encampment in this city October 11 12.

STREET CAR DYNAMITED.

Four Passengers in the Car and Two of Them Were Badly Injured in St. Louis.

St. Louis, July 13.—The citizens' committee, of which John T. Wilson is chairman, is actively engaged procuring signatures to a petition urging that the street railway strike be settled by arbitration. Several hundred signatures have already been secured. Nearly every person approached has expressed his preference for a settlement of the strike by arbitration.

Attorney General Crow, on behalf of the minority stockholders of the Southern Electric railroad, has filed suit to annul the purchase of the Southern Electric railway by the St. Louis Transit Co. The case will be a test one, and if it wins will break up the entire deal by which the St. Louis Transit Co. was organized. The suit is brought in the interest of certain minority stockholders.

St. Louis, July 14.—General Manager George W. Bammhoff, of the St. Louis Transit Co., gave out a signed statement in reply to the published charges made by the strikers in which the latter charged that Bamhoff had violated the agreement entered into on July 2. General Manager Bammhoff denies that he violated in the slightest degree the agreement between the strikers' committee and the Transit Co. He says he has strictly adhered to that agreement and endeavored to act fairly with the strikers at all times.

Two thousand solicitors, engaged by the trades and labor unions to canvass the city and collect funds for the striking railway men's bus lines, began work. Chairman Blackmore, who is in charge of this work, reports that contributions are coming in rapidly, and he expects to have busses enough in a few days to meet the demands of the sympathizing public. Busses are now running on schedule time over three divisions of the Transit Co. line and are being well patronized.

The imported men now at work for the Transit Co. are becoming dissatisfied, and charges of unfair treatment have been made by them against the company. Fifteen men who came from Baltimore to St. Louis in May left the city for their eastern homes. They claim that they found conditions in St. Louis different from what had been represented, and that the Transit Co. failed to keep certain promises made to them.

The executive committee reported that a delegation of the present employes of the Transit Co. had waited on it and stated that 1,000 men would quit at once if the union would pay their transportation to their respective homes.

St. Louis, July 16.—As a Union line car on the Lee avenue division of the Transit Co. was passing the intersection of 22d street and Bremen avenue, at 11 o'clock at night, the wheels struck a charge of dynamite, which exploded with terrific force. The car was blown from the track, the flooring and sides were rent asunder and all the windows demolished.

There were four passengers on the car, two of whom, Edward English and Mollie Winthrop, were so badly injured that they had to be taken to the city dispensary. The others, although badly shaken up, were able to go home. The explosion was by far the worst that has occurred on the St. Louis Transit Co.'s line since the beginning of the strike.

TWELVE PEOPLE HURT.

A St. Louis Suburban Car Runs Into a Wagon Loaded With Returning Picnickers.

St. Louis, July 16.—A car of the Suburban Co.'s Webster division ran into and capsized a wagon loaded with picnickers returning from Forest park at Lindell boulevard and Sarah street, and 12 of them were hurt, two seriously. The wagon was broken into splinters and the horse was crippled. When the accident happened rain was falling heavily. Reuben Kaplan, who held the reins, urged his horse across the track as rapidly as he could, but the load was too heavy for him. The car was going at a rapid rate, and struck the rear wheel of the wagon, knocking it sideways and spilling the occupants.

FOREIGNERS ALL DEAD

Men, Women and Children Meet an Atrocious Death by the Sword in Peking.

With Ammunition Gone, They Make a Desperate, But Futile Effort, to Break Through Chinese Lines.

No News From Minister Conger, and Without a Doubt He Has Been Murdered With All the Rest of the Foreigners.

Shanghai, July 16.—An official telegram was received Sunday night from the governor of Shan Tung stating that a breach was made in the wall of the British legation at Peking after a gallant defense and when all the ammunition had given out. All foreigners were killed.

London, July 15.—The Shanghai correspondent, on the alleged authority of couriers who brought the story, gives a very sensational account of the massacre. He says:

"Maddened with hunger, after having been without food for many days, the members of the legations and the guards made a sortie on the night of June 30 and killed 200 Chinese in an unexpected attack. Gen. Tung Fuh Siang, enraged over the loss of so many men, brought heavy guns, and Prince Tuan gave the order that every foreigners must be destroyed. His words were:"

"'Destroy every foreign vestige and make China a sealed book to all western powers.'

"Prince Tuan had previously discovered that Prince Ching was supplying the foreigners with ammunition. He therefore ordered Gen. Tung Fuh Siang to fire on Prince Ching's troops, and it is reported that Ching was killed or seriously wounded.

"In the final attempt to cut their way through, the legationers formed a square, with the women and children in the center. When the Boxers realized that they were being attacked they became like wild beasts and shot each other with revolvers. Heavy guns bombarded all night until the buildings were demolished and in flames. Many foreigners were roasted in the ruins.

"The Boxers rushed upon them and hacked and stabbed both dead and wounded, cutting off their heads and carrying these through the streets on their rifles, shouting fiercely. They then attacked the native Christian quarters, massacred all who refused to join them, outraged the women and brained the children. Hundreds of mission buildings were burned."

The correspondent adds:

"All China is now aflame with revolt against foreigners. Only in the extreme west is there quiet.

"Every port, even Shanghai, is menaced. In the province of Hupe and Hunan thousands of native Christians have been untinted and tortured, the women being first outraged and then massacred."

St. Petersburg, July 11, via Paris, July, 15.—The czar has received with great emotion the dreadful details of the catastrophe at Peking. Tears coursed down his majesty's cheeks as he read the cablegram from Adm. Alexyeff at Port Arthur, confirming the horrible details of assassination of M. DeGiers, which merely in form of rumors had already reached Russia. The admiral declares that the Russian envoy was dragged through the streets by the Boxers, insulted, beaten and tortured, and even thrown into a great kettle and boiled to death. Then the remains were thrown to the dogs. While M. DeGiers was being disposed of, the funatic mob danced around the caldron.

Mme. DeGiers, Adm. Alexyeff's adtices declared, suffered a fate worse than death, and was beaten and tortured with sharp sticks until life was extinct.

The legation officials are said to have been tortured fiendishly until death ended their sufferings. M. De Giers and his legation officials resisted desperately and his brave bodyguard killed many of the attacking mob. In the midst of his tortures the envoy is said to have heroically proclaimed his faith in Christianity, encouraged by the wife who so soon shared his martyrdom.

"Tien-Tsin, July 9.—The enemy's position southwest of the settlement was attacked at 4 this morning. The Japanese by a flank movement drove the enemy out and captured four guns. Cavalry pursued and completed the rout of the enemy, killing large numbers of soldiers and Boxers.

"The allied forces shelled and occupied the western arsenal, capturing two guns. The arsenal was burned, as the allies were unable to hold it. The enemy's loss was 350 killed. The loss of the allied forces was small.

Baltimore Man's Crime.

HEALTHY WOMEN.

Mary J. Kennedy, manager of Armour & Co.'s Exhibit at the Trans-Mississippi Exposition at Omaha, Neb., writes the following of Peruna, as a cure for that common phase of summer catarrh, known as indigestion. Miss Kennedy says:

"I found the continual change of diet incidental to eight years' traveling completely upset my digestive system. In consulting several physicians they decided I suffered with catarrh of the stomach.

"Their prescriptions did not seem to help me any, so, reading of the remarkable cures effected by the use of Peruna I decided to try it and soon found myself well repaid.

"I have now used Peruna for about three months and feel completely rejuvenated. I believe I am permanently cured, and do not hesitate to give unstinted praise to your great remedy, Peruna."

The cause of summer catarrh is first, chronic catarrh; second, derangements of the stomach and liver; third, impure blood.

Such being the case, anyone who knows anything whatever about the operations of Peruna can understand why this remedy is a permanent cure for summer catarrh. It eradicates chronic catarrh from the system, invigorating the stomach and liver, cleanses the blood of all impurities, and therefore permanently cures by removing the cause, —a host of maladies peculiar to hot weather. The cause being removed the symptoms disappear of themselves.

MURPHY WAS MUCH PUZZLED.

He Managed to Give Satisfactory Answers to the Questions, However.

One of the New York enumerators called on an old Irishman who had his name, Murphy, chalked upon his door. He was very much perplexed, although he had been in the country long enough to go through several censuses.

"The cinsis?" he exclaimed suspiciously. "Phwat is it?"

I told him that it was a record of the tribe of Murphys in the United States that was being prepared for the government, whereat he was greatly relieved, and proceeded to tell me his family history as far back as he knew it. His memory, however, was defective, especially as to dates.

"The year we came to Murrth?" he repeated, scratching his head. "Sure an' I don't know at all, at all." Then, after reflecting awhile he brightened up and said: "Sure, an' it was the year the crops failed in Ireland."

"Was it in '37?" I suggested, at a venture. He looked to be about 60.

"Faith an' it was that very year," he replied, and I let it go at that.

He had forgotten, too, the year of his arrival in America; "but I remimber that Horace Greeley was runnin' for prisideut at the toime," he said.

Acrobatic.

After supper he procured his wife's best clothesline from the back shed, fastened one end of it to his St. Bernard's collar and the other to the handle bar of his bicycle. Then he went out into the middle of the road and mounted. For about four rods, that is until the St. Bernard espied a canine friend, the sensation was dreadlike, after that it became one horrible nightmare. In desperation the rider clutched handle bars, back pedaled and fairly bowled, until at last he became sufficiently cool to call to the dog to stop. It stopped all right, but the wheel had motions of its own. It went on till it struck the dog amidships, then it rose in the air, sending its rider toward cloudland. His head tried conclusions with the curb, and when they brought him to he promised his wife never to do it again.—Detroit Free Press.

THE STORY OF DORCAS

Dr. Talmage Draws a Lesson from a Noble Woman's Life.

Self-Sacrificing Work Assured of a Rich Reward Hereafter—Helpful Words for Those Who Alleviate Suffering.

[Copyright, 1900, by Louis Klopsch.]

Dr. Talmage, who is still traveling in northern Europe, has forwarded the following report of a sermon in which he utters helpful words to all who are engaged in alleviating human distresses and shows how such work will be crowned at the last; text, Acts 9:39: "And all the widows stood by him weeping and showing him the coats and garments which Dorcas made while she was with them."

Joppa is a most absorbing city of the orient. Into her harbor once floated the rafts of Lebanon cedar from which the temples of Jerusalem were built. Solomon's oxen drawing the logs through the town. Here Napoleon had 500 prisoners massacred. One of the most magnificent churities of the centuries was started in this seaport by Dorcas, a woman with her needle embroidering her name ineffaceably into the beneficence of the world. I see her sitting in yonder home. In the doorway and around about the building and in the room where she sits are the pale faces of the poor. She listens to their plaint, she pities their woe, she makes garments for them, she adjusts the manufactured articles to suit the best form of this invalid woman and to the cripple that comes crawling on his hands and knees. She gives a coat to this one, she gives sandals to that one. With the gifts she mingles prayers and tears and Christian encouragement. Then she goes out to be greeted on the street corners by those whom she has blessed, and all through the street the cry is heard: "Dorcas is coming!" The sick look up gratefully into her face as she puts her hand on the burning brow, and the lost and the abandoned start up with hope as they hear her gentle voice, as though an angel had addressed them, and as she goes out the lame eyes half put out with sin think they see a halo of light about her brow and a trail of glory in her bathway. That night a half naid shipwright climbs the hill and reaches home and sees his little boy well clad and says: "Where did these clothes come from?" And they tell him: "Dorcas has been here." In another place a woman is trimming a lamp. Dorcas bought the oil. In another place a family that had not been at table for many weeks are gathered now, for Dorcas has brought bread.

But there is a sudden pause in that woman's history. They say: "Where is Dorcas? Why, we haven't seen her for many a day. Where is Dorcas?" And one of these poor people goes up and knocks at the door and finds the mystery solved. All through the hamns of wretchedness the news comes: "Dorcas is sick!" No bulletin flashing from the palace gate telling the stages of a king's disease is more anxiously waited for than the news from this benefactress. Alas, for Joppa there is wailing, wailing! That voice which has uttered so many cheerful words is hushed; that hand which has made so many garments for the poor is cold and still; the star which had poured light into the midnight of wretchedness is dimmed by the blinding mists that go up from the river of death. In every forsaken place in that town, wherever there is a sick child and no balm, wherever there is hunger and no bread, wherever there is guilt and no commiseration, wherever there is a broken heart and no comfort, there are despairing looks and streaming eyes and frantic gesticulations as they cry: "Dorcas is dead!"

They send for the apostle Peter, who happens to be in the suburbs of the place, stopping with a tanner of the name of Simon. Peter urges his way through the crowd around the door and stands in the presence of the dead. What demonstration of grief all about him! Here stand some of the poor people, who show the garments which this poor woman had made for them. Their grief cannot be appeased. The apostle Peter wants to perform a miracle. He will not do it amid the excited crowd, so he orders that the whole room be cleared. The door is shut against the populace. The apostle stands now with the dead. Oh, it is a serious moment, you know, when you are alone with a lifeless body! The apostle gets down on his knees and prays, and then he comes to the lifeless form of this one all ready for the sepulcher, and in the strength of Him who is the resurrection, he cries: "Tabitha, arise!" There is a stir in the fountains of life; the heart flutters; the nerves thrill; the cheek flushes; the eye opens; she sits up!

We see in this subject Dorcas the disciple, Dorcas the benefactress, Dorcas the lamented, Dorcas the resurrected.

If I had not seen that word disciple in my text, I would have known this woman was a Christian. Such music as that never came from a heart which is not chorded and strung by Divine grace. Before I show you the needlework of this woman I want to show you her regenerated heart, the source of pure life and of all Christian charities. I wish that the wives and mothers and daughters and sisters of all the earth would imitate Dorcas in her discipleship. Before you cross the threshold of the hospital, before you enter upon the temptations and trials of to-morrow, I charge you, in the name of God and by the turmoil and tumult of the judgment day, O women, that you attend to the first, last and greatest duty of your life—the seeking for God and being at peace with Him.

Further, we see Dorcas the benefactress. History has told the story of the crown; epic poet has sung of the sword; the pastoral poet, with his verses full of the redolence of clover tops and a-rustle with the silk of the corn, has sung the praises of the plow. I tell you the praises of the needle. From the fig leaf robe prepared in the garden of Eden to the last stitch taken on the garment for the poor the needle has wrought wonders of kindness, generosity and benefaction. It adorned the girdle of the high priest, it fashioned the curtains in the ancient tabernacle, it cushioned the chariots of King Solomon, it provided the robes of Queen Elizabeth, and in high places and in low places, by the fire of the pioneer's back log and under the flash of the chandelier, everywhere, it has clothed nakedness, it has preached the Gospel, it has overcome hosts of penury and want with the war cry of "Stitch, stitch, stitch!" The operatives have found a livelihood by it, and through it the mansions of the employer are constructed.

Amid the greatest triumphs in all ages and lands, I set down the conquests of the needle. I admit its crimes; I mourn its cruelties; it has had more martyrs than the fire; it has punctured the eye; it has pierced the side; it has struck weakness into the lungs; it has sent madness into the brain; it has filled the potter's field; it has pitched whole armies of the suffering into crime and wretchedness and woe. But now that I am talking of Dorcas and her ministries to the poor, I shall speak only of the charities of the needle. This woman was a representative of all those who make garments for the destitute, who knit socks for the barefooted, who prepare bandages for the lacerated, who fix up boxes of clothing for missionaries, who go into the asylums of the suffering and destitute, bearing that Gospel which is sight for the blind and hearing for the deaf, and which makes the lame man leap like a hart and brings the dead to life, immortal health bounding in their pulses. What a contrast between the practical benevolence of this woman and a great deal of the charity of this day! This woman did not spend her time idly planning how the poor of the city of Joppa were to be relieved; she took her needle and relieved them. She was not like those persons who sympathize with imaginary sorrows, and go out in the street and laugh at the boy who has upset his basket of cold victuals, or like that charity which makes a rousing speech on the benevolent platform and goes out to kick the beggar from the step, crying: "Hush your miserable howling!" Sufferers of the world want not so much theory as practice; not so much tears as dollars; not so much kind wishes as loaves of bread; not so much smiles as shoes; not so much "God bless yous!" as jackets and frocks. I will put one earnest Christian man, hard working, against 5,000 mere theorists on the subject of charity. There are a great many who have fine ideas about church architecture who never in their life helped to build a church. There are men who can give you the history of Buddhism and Mohammedanism who never sent a farthing for evangelization. There are women who talk beautifully about the suffering of the world, who never had the courage, like Dorcas, to take the needle and assault it.

I am glad that there is not a page of the world's history which is not a record of female benevolence. God says to all lands and people: Come now and hear the widow's mite rattle down into the poor box. The princess of Conti sold all her jewels that she might help the famine stricken. Queen Blanche, the wife of Louis VIII. of France, hearing that there were some persons unjustly incarcerated in the prisons, went out amid the rabble and took a stick and struck the door as a signal that they might all strike it, and down went the prison door, and out came the prisoners. Queen Maud, the wife of Henry I, went down amid the poor and washed their sores and administered to them cordials. Mrs. Retson, at Matagorda, appeared on the battlefield while the missiles of death were flying around and cared for the wounded. Is there a man or woman who has ever heard of the civil war in America who has not heard of the women of the sanitary and Christian commissions or the fact that before the smoke had gone up from Gettysburg and South Mountain the women of the north met the women of the south on the battlefield, forgetting all their animosities while they bound up the wounded and closed the eyes of the slain? Dorcas, the benefactress.

I come now to speak of Dorcas, the lamented. When death struck down that good woman, oh, how much sorrow there was in the town of Joppa! I suppose there were women there with larger fortunes, women, perhaps, with handsomer faces, but there was no grief at their departure like this at the death of Dorcas. There was not more turmoil and upturning in the Mediterranean sea, dashing against the wharfs at that seaport, than there were surgings to and fro of grief because Dorcas was dead. There are a great many who go out of life and are unmissed. There may be a very large funeral, there may be a great many carriages and a plumed hearse, there may be high sounding eulogiums, the bell may toll at the cemetery gate, there may be a very fine marble shaft reared over the resting place, but the whole thing may be a falsehood and a sham. The church of God has lost nothing. It is only a nuisance abated. It is only a grumbler ceasing to find fault. It is only an idler stopped yawning. It is only a dissipated fashionable parted from his wine cellar, while on the other hand no useful Christian leaves this world without being missed.

The church of God cries out like the prophet: "Howl, fir tree, for the cedar has fallen!" Widowhood comes and shows the garments which the departed had made. Orphans are lifted up to look into the calm face of the sleeping benefactress. Reclaimed vagrancy comes and kisses the cold brow of her who charmed it away from sin, and all through the streets of Joppa there is mourning—mourning because Dorcas is dead. When Josephine of France was carried out to her grave, there were a great many men and women of pomp and pride and position that went out after her, but I am most affected by the story of history that on that day there were 10,000 of the poor of France who followed her coffin, weeping and wailing until the air rang again, because when they lost Josephine they lost their last earthly friend. Oh, who would not rather have such obsequies than all the tears that were ever poured in the lachrymals that have been exhumed from ancient cities? There may be no mass for the dead; there may be no costly sarcophagus; there may be no elaborate mausoleum, but in the damp cellars of the city and through the lonely huts of the mountain glen there will be [illegible] because Dorcas is dead: "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord; they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

I speak to you of Dorcas the resurrected. The apostle came to where she was and said: "Arise, and she sat up!" In what a short compass the great writer put that "She sat up." Oh, what a time there must have been around that town when the apostle brought her out among her old friends! How the tears of joy must have started! What a clapping of hands there must have been! What singing! What laughter! Sound it all through that lane! Shout it down that dark alley! Let all Joppa hear it! Dorcas is resurrected!

You and I have seen the same thing many a time; not a dead body resuscitated, but the deceased coming up again after death in the good accomplished. If a man labors up to 50 years of age, serving God, and then dies, we are apt to think that his earthly work is done. No. His influence on earth will continue till the world ceases. Services rendered for Christ never stop. A Christian woman toils for the upbuilding of a church through many anxieties, through many self-denials, with prayers and tears, and then she dies. It is 15 years since she went away. Now the spirit of God descends upon that church, hundreds of souls stand up and confess the faith of Christ. Has that Christian woman, who went away 15 years ago, nothing to do with these things? I see the flowering out of her noble heart. I hear the echo of her footsteps in all the songs over sins forgiven, in all the prosperity of the church. The good that seemed to be buried has come up again. Dorcas is resurrected!

But while these womanly friends of Christ will put down their needle forever. After making garments for others, some one will make a garment for them; the last robe we ever wear—the robe for the grave. You will have heard the last cry of pain. You will have witnessed the last orphanage. You will have come in worn out from your last round of mercy. I do not know where you will sleep, nor what your epitaph will be, but there will be a lamp burning at that tomb, and an angel of God guarding it, and through all the long night no rude foot will disturb the dust. Sleep on, sleep on. Soft bed, pleasant shadows, undisturbed repose! Sleep on!

Asleep in Jesus! Blessed sleep—
From which none ever wake to weep!

Then one day there will be a sky rending and a whirr of wheels and the flash of a pageant, armies marching, chains clanking, banners waving, thunders booming, and that Christian woman will rise from the dust, and she will be suddenly surrounded—surrounded by the wanderers of the street whom she reclaimed, surrounded by the wounded souls to whom she had administered, Daughter of God, so strangely surrounded, what means this? It means that reward has come, that the victory is won, that the crown is ready, that the banquet is spread. Shout it through all the ermbling earth. Sing it through all the flying Heavens. Dorcas is resurrected.

In 1855, when some of the soldiers came back from the Crimean war to London, the queen of England distributed among them beautiful medals called Crimean medals. Galleries were erected for the two houses of parliament and the royal family to sit in. There was a great audience to witness the distribution of the medals. A colonel who had lost both feet in the battle of Inkermann was pulled in on a wheel chair; others came in limping on their crutches. Then the queen of England arose before them in the name of her government and uttered words of commendation to the officers and men and distributed those medals, inscribed with the four great battlefields—Alma, Balaklava, Inkermann and Sevastopol. As the queen gave these to the wounded officers the bands of music struck up the national air, and the people, with streaming eyes, joined in the song—

God save our gracious queen!
Long live our noble queen!
God save the queen!

And then they shouted: "Huzza, huzza!" Oh, it was a proud day for those returned warriors! But a brighter, better and gladder day will come when Christ shall gather those who have toiled in His service, good soldiers of Jesus Christ. He shall rise before them, and in the presence of all the glorified of Heaven he will say: "Well done, good and faithful servant;" and then He will distribute the medals of eternal victory, not inscribed with works of righteousness which we have done, but with those four great battlefields dear to earth and dear to Heaven—Bethlehem, Nazareth, Gethsemane, Calvary!

BRITISH LOSS TWO HUNDRED.

Further Particulars of How the Boers Set a Successful Trap for Their Enemy.

London, July 15.—Lord Roberts has sent nothing further concerning the Nitral's Nek affair. Pretoria dispatches, however, show that the Lincolnshires lost half of their officers, including Col. Roberts, who was wounded and taken prisoner. Stragglers continue to arrive at the camp, but few further details can be gathered. The British fought stubbornly until nightfall, when the cavalry turned their horses loose. The Boer report of the engagement places the British casualties at over 200.

In the Derdepoort affair, mentioned in Lord Roberts' dispatch, the men in the front rank of the Boers wore khaki uniforms and helmets, and the dragoons passed them unsuspectingly, under the impression that they were hussars. The mistake was not discovered until the Boers opened a heavy fire, when the dragoons were [illegible] yards.

British prisoners who have escaped to Kroonstadt report that Gen. De Wet's force of 10,000 men, with ten guns, expelled from Bethlehem by Gen. Clements and Gen. Paget, have taken up a strong position 15 miles to the southward in the hills around Retief Nek. President Steyn is reported to be with them.

Another case of the Boers wearing khaki is reported to have happened at Lindley on June 26, when they surprised a picket of 25 men of the Yorkshire light infantry, 18 of whom were killed and wounded.

Driving Out the Boers.

Witpoor, Transvaal, July 15.—Gen. Clery's column, which has moved easterly, is now camped here. During the march the mounted infantry engaged 200 Boers, shelling a ridge occupied by the burghers. It is anticipated that this movement will clear the country from Standerton to Heidelberg, as the troops found but one remaining imager, from which the Boers retired hurriedly.

Cleveland, O., July 14.—An important political conference attended by a number of prominent republican leaders was held at Senator Hanna's office here Friday. The meeting was called by Mr. Hanna to discuss and decide upon the personnel of the new executive committee and to name a secretary of the national committee to succeed Gen. Charles F. Dick.

PERRY S. HEATH'S SUCCESSOR.

Curtis Guild, of Massachusetts, and Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow Mentioned.

Washington, July 15.—So far as known here, the appointment of a successor to First Assistant Postmaster General Heath has not been decided upon. Mr. Heath's retirement from the post office department, following his selection as secretary of the republican national committee has been contemplated for some time, and there has been some informal discussion as to his successor.

Curtis Guild, of Massachusetts, to whom the president at the close of the Spanish war tendered an appointment as member of the insular commission, has been considered for the office, and Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow, who investigated the Cuban postal system recently, has been mentioned.

Dallas Deluged.

Dallas, Tex., July 16.—Northern Texas has been deluged by rain for more than 12 hours, and the indications are that the storm has only begun. The downpour at Dallas was terrific. The streets are like creeks and many basements are flooded. The Trinity river is rising, and dispatches from Ft. Worth and other points indicate that large volumes of water are coming down from the upper parts of the river. Wire reports show that the rain has been general. Railroad operations are delayed because of washouts, and slow running is necessitated from water-soaked roadbeds.

A DANGEROUS BUG.

Its Bite Caused the Death of a Rockcastle County Farmer—Others Were Bitten.

Mt. Vernon, Ky., July 13.—Henry Brannamon, a reputable farmer, and others of the Wildie neighborhood, seven miles east of this place, bring in the report that Sam Cope, aged 18 years, died Sunday from the effects of the bite of a bug or insect. VAGRANCY LAW VOID.

A Kentucky Measure Providing for Punishment Akin to Slavery Pronounced Unconstitutional.

Somerset, Ky., July 14.—The vagrancy law was declared unconstitutional in the Pulaski circuit court. Josh Jones stood indicted under the vagrancy law, and when the case was called for trial a demurrer was entered by his counsel upon the ground that the law was unconstitutional.

Circuit Judge T. Z. Morrow, in passing upon the question, said: "This law, to my mind, materially conflicts with both the letter and the spirit of the constitution, which by the thirteenth amendment prohibits slavery and involuntary servitude except as a punishment for crime upon conviction by due process of law."

Goebel Election Law Missing.

Frankfort, Ky., July 14.—The volume of enrolled bills enacted into laws at the 1898 session of the Kentucky legislature is missing from the office of the secretary of state here. Among the bills contained in it is the official copy of the statute known as the Goebel election law. It is thought the volume was carried away during the occupancy of the state capital buildings by the soldiers after the shooting of Senator Goebel.

Castleman Wins Out.

Louisville, Ky., July 13.—Appellate Judge Durelle handed down an opinion here refusing to dissolve the injunction granted Adjt. Gen. Castleman against the board of aldermen to prevent an impeachment trial on charges of malfeasance. It was sought to remove Gen. Castleman from the board of park commissioners on the ground that he holds other offices also, in violation of the city charter.

To Straighten Out a Muddle.

Frankfort, Ky., July 12.—The democratic state central committee will probably be called together shortly to take up the matter of the Seventh district congressional muddle, which resulted in two conventions at Paris Tuesday. A petition for a call will be circulated at once, asking that a primary election be ordered.

Blue Grass Strings Sent to Detroit.

Lexington, Ky., July 14.—The racing strings of David Cahill and Fred McKee were shipped Friday morning to Detroit, Mich. In Cahill's stable is a wonderful trotter, Charley Herr, expected this season to equal his record of last year in the way of earnings.

Breckinridge Not A Candidate.

Lexington, Ky., July 14.—Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge, who has been mentioned as a probable fusion candidate, the fusion to be of republicans and bolting democrats, for congress, said: "I do not want the seat in congress. I am too busy to fool with congressional races."

Impeachment Proceedings.

Henderson, Ky., July 13.—Impeachment proceedings against Chief of Police W. H. Hinds were begun by the city council. Hinds is charged with giving city pauper orders to a local grocer for application on his individual account. Orders were retained by the grocer and credit refused.

Sweetheart Betrayed Him.

Louisville, Ky., July 14.—After being at liberty ten years, Luther Bailey, colored, was lodged in the county jail here to answer for the murder of Worthington Barrett, colored, in July, 1890. Bailey would be free if it had not been that his sweetheart inadvertently betrayed him.

Ex-Congressman Owens Injured.

Georgetown, Ky., July 14.—Ex-Congressman W. C. Owens, of the defense in the Powers case, was severely injured by falling over an embankment in trying to avoid an approaching street car. He was also struck by the car, and his injuries are such that he will be laid up for some time.

Going Crazy Pretty Fast.

Owensboro, Ky., July 12.—Clarence Riddle, aged 19, was committed to the asylum at Hopkinsville. He imagines he is running for president and will win easily. This makes 14 persons committed for lunacy from this county since January 1.

Paducah, Ky., July 13.—Another victim has been added to the list of towboat Peter Houtz, which blew up on July 3. George Sneed, the colored fireman, who was scalded, died in the hospital at Cairo.

KILLED BY A MADMAN.

Cynthiana, Ky., July 12.—Jack Whalen, of Sunrise, this county, who was mentally unbalanced, but thought to be harmless, killed his brother-in-law, Wm. Morgan, instantly by striking him on the head with an ax. Both men were in the harvest field repairing a machine and Morgan was stooping over, in the act of fixing a bolt, when Whalen dealt him the fatal blow from behind.

The murderer, after the deed, became a raving maniac, ran a mile and plunged into a river, but was persuaded by neighbors, who had by this time heard the news and were in pursuit. When captured it required the strength of several men to subdue him. Whalen was brought here, tried for lunacy and sent to the Lexington asylum. Morgan was a prominent and well known farmer.

ASLEEP ON THE TRACK.

A Man Crawled Home After Being Struck and Badly Hurt By a Train.

Corbin, Ky., July 12.—About midnight Sam McHargue was struck by a Louisville & Nashville passenger train while asleep on the track between this city and London. The train was immediately stopped and a search made, but nothing could be seen of him. His hat was lying near, and there was blood on the ground. After a search of 40 minutes train pulled out. Not until a late hour in the morning did McHargue come home. His absence had created considerable excitement, and searching parties were out. McHargue crawled home, being too badly hurt to walk. He gave no excuse for his absence, and it is believed that, crazed by the shock from the train, he lost his way in the bushes. He will die.

Finley Will Return to Kentucky.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 14.—Charles Finley, ex-secretary of state of Kentucky, said that he intends to go back to Kentucky to stand trial for complicity in the murder of Wm. Goebel. "I should like to go next week," he said. "My only plan for the future is to return to Kentucky to go through the form of a trial. Just as soon as I am satisfied that the rancor of our opponents has died down I shall return. I suppose I shall have to be guided by general observation in deciding that, but, knowing myself to be absolutely innocent, I can not bear the thought of allowing such an imputation as has been made against me to stand. Gov. Taylor feels just as I do."

Deadlock Broken.

Paris, Ky., July 13.—The democratic congressional convention finished its labors and adjourned after 39 ballots had been taken, each resulting in 21 for Allen and 28 for Moody. Col. Allen, through a delegate from Fayette, moved that the nomination of Mr. Moody be made unanimous. This was done, and Mr. Moody was declared the democratic candidate from the Ashland district for congress. A bolting convention having previously declared South Trimble the nominee, there will, undoubtedly be a lively fight in the old Ashland district.

Berry Howard Well Guarded.

Lexington, Ky., July 14.—County Surveyor Newman, who has just returned from a business trip in Bell county, says Berry Howard, wanted on the charge of complicity in the assassination of Wm. Goebel, is heavily armed at his home there. Crop and Stock.

Wheat is yielding well in some parts of Carroll county, and sells for 72 cents a bushel in the local market.

There was a small crowd in Paris Monday to attend the July court, and business in stock trading circles was slow. E. K. Thomas bought 67 yearling cattle at $24 60 each, and Frank Beford sold ten cattle to Squire Ball, of Millersburg, at $43 each. Good young stock sold at five cents a pound.—News.

Green & Lynam shipped from this city to the New York market 1,650 lambs, average weight, 82 lbs., for which they paid 5¼ cents. This firm has sold in that city within the past few days, 4,000 lambs that brought the highest price that has been paid for lambs this year—$4 62½ and $7 75 a hundred.—Winchester Democrat.

Mrs. J. W. Hutcheson on Saturday presented the Outlook man a sample of the very fine ripe peaches that she grew in her yard this year. They were a cling-stone variety and dead ripe already, which shows that this town isn't much if any behind the famous Georgia peach producing section in either season or quality with regard to that luscious fruit.—Owingsville Outlook.

Mexico has quite a curious animal in the shape of a mule-footed hog. This single footed hog is called Chinngah-Koto by the Indians, meaning pig mule. He is regarded as far superior to the razor-back and not at all like him. "The mule footed" hog's home is in the mountains. He is a very small legged, blocky little fellow, black, or black and white, nearly as woolly as a sheep, small boned with a small head and a short snout, grazing well and fattening on a very little allowance of maize. Two or three ears of corn, given three times a day, make the usual fattening ration, and he fattens quickly on that allowance. He is with the cuino—a cross between a ram and a cow—the kind of a pig preferred for the production of lard. As for the hoof itself, it is one solid piece, with a smooth surface, rather long and narrow, the end cut squarely by wear. This is a domesticated animal—"there are no wild pigs in the country."

In Memory of Miss Lizzie Kipp.

The funeral of "Our Miss Lizzie Kipp" on the 4th of July is deserving of special notice. The morning which in all the years gone by has ever been ushered in with incessant explosions of firearms, boy's artillery and shooting crackers, was free from noise of any kind, and what was strange, nearly all of the boys were on the street. Asking one little fellow, who was known to have received a lot of fireworks, why he was not celebrating the Fourth, he rather reproachfully answered, "why Mr. C., you know our Miss Lizzie's funeral is to day and we all agreed to keep our things till some other time and to march in procession with flowers. Do you know where we can get some, and will they let us march?" The school children had decided for themselves on showing this respect for their beloved teacher and over a hundred of them were in the procession. It was the largest funeral ever known here Bro. Hill was very happy in his remarks in the course of which he said, "No one ever heard of any-one saying anything disparaging of her." Moore's beautiful lines :

"No pearl ever slept under Oman's green water, could have been only such as she.

Bro. Hill also said of Miss Lizzie that she had by her perfect life erected her own monument more beautiful and enduring than any that could be formed of stone or metal. Her loss is mourned by all and more deeply by her scholars than can be imagined.

The Best Remedy for Stomach and Bowel Troubles.

"I have been in the drug business for twenty years and have sold most all of the proprietary medicines of any note. Among the entire list I have never found anything to equal Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for all stomach and bowel troubles," says O. W. Wakefield, of Columbus, Ga. "This remedy cured two severe cases of cholera morbus in my family and I have recommended and sold hundreds of bottles of it to my customers to their entire satisfaction. It affords a quick and sure cure in a pleasant form." For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington; Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg; O. N. Grant, Bellevue, C. S. Balsly, Bullittsville.

Lancaster is a local option town, but 30 government liquor licenses are held there.

A barn and 12,000 bushels of blue grass seed belonging to Miss Oliva Buckner, of Bourbon co., burned.

Good music was furnished by Ed Arnold and Dick Hoard on the violin and Joe Snell on the organ, and all present pronounced it an enjoyable evening.

The patriotic citizens of this place, as they are wont to do, read the Declaration of Independence early in the morning of the 4th, to a large draught of ice cool lemonade and reveled: let others do as they may, as for them they saw no other way to perpetuate the principles of the ancient document than to elect Bryan and Stevenson.

Geo. Kite, hard working young farmer near Beaver, celebrated the 4th in a manner the very recollection of which grieves him sorely. He went seining, and put his wallet containing $30 with someother trinkets in his shoes, and when he came out of the creek he found the trinkets all right, but the valuable purse could not be found.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, JULY 25, 1900. NO. 40

JUDGE EVANS, of the United States Court, has laid the McCord railroad law on the shelf for the present.

JUDGE TARVIN'S victory, in the convention, over the opposition to him in Kenton county, was complete.

THOSE Democrats who aspire to leadership in Covington, have dragged the party into a fierce and bitter factional fight.

THERE are ten presidential tickets in the field, consequently the voter who cannot find a ticket to suit him is certainly very hard to please.

MAYOR NELSON, of Newport, drew and presented the election law paragraph in the platform, and upon which factions agreed they could unite.

THE counties of Campbell and Kenton were on hand at Lexington, last week, with the contesting delegations as usual. The factions in these two counties are unrelenting in their war on each other.

IF China should be dismembered the United States could not consistently accept any part of her territory, as Congress, a few years since, passed a law prohibiting Chinese from coming to this country.

THE Owenton News is carrying the announcements of forty-six candidates for county offices. The primary election will be held September 1. All other crops in Owen county may be a failure, but that of candidates is exceedingly abundant.

INCENDIARY politics prevail in North Carolina, and the torch has begun getting in its work thus early in the game. The pistol and shot-gun will, doubtless, be heard from later on. A redshirt Democrat was the first victim of the torch.

MR. FINLEY, recently of Kentucky but now of Indiana, sees nothing in the evidence given in the trial of Caleb Powers at Georgetown to convict the accused. A man of Finley's make-up is not expected to know damaging testimony when it is given.

THE Louisville Courier-Journal is giving an unbiased account of the Powers trial now in progress at Georgetown, and is not trying to prejudice public opinion by distorting evidence and publishing it in immense black type, as some of its contemporaries are.

THE question as to who will be the next Democratic nominee in this district for Congress is badly mixed. The friends of each of the candidates have been endeavoring to induce the district committee to take such action as they construe most favorable to their favorite, and considerable strife has been engendered that will result in no good to the party organization.

THE Lexington convention was a much more harmonious affair than was expected it was possible for it to be. Beckham was virtually nominated by acclamation, and the friends of the other candidates returned to their homes his enthusiastic supporters. The young Governor's official deportment during the trying times of last winter and spring had gained for him the admiration and confidence of his party, and when the time came to choose a standard bearer in the State he was looked to as the safest person to whom to entrust the grave responsibility.

THERE never was a political party that kept more thoroughly organized for all elections than does the Republican party. As soon as its nominations for office are made it is ready to march up to the polls and cast a solid vote for its candidates, and that is exactly what it will do in this Senatorial district on the sixth day of next August, and the apathy on the part of the Democrats because of their large majority in the district may get them into trouble; therefore, every Democrat ought to consider that his vote is needed for the nominee and turn out and vote.

Editorial Paragraphs.

China wasn't represented at the Hague peace conference. Next time the western powers will know better than to leave her out.

There is a difference between just punishment and vengeance and it will be observed by the allies, if Christian civilization is a living force.

If McKinley is responsible for the great wheat crops of Kansas and Iowa, who is responsible for the utter failure of the same crop in Minnesota and the Dakotas?

The question isn't whether we should send troops to China. It is whether the President should again usurp the authority of Congress to involve the country in a foreign war.

The Boer war has been going on for nine months and bids fair to continue for several more. However, the British have accomplished one thing: they have silenced Alfred Austin.

Nearly four weeks of the month delay that the Sultan asked to enable him to collect that $100,000 has passed and no further chirp has been heard. Can it be that he has forgotten all about it?

Both parties are watching the German voter with much anxiety. If he follows his leaders and leaves the Republican party in the middle west in any considerable proportion, Bryan will be elected by a tremendous electoral majority.

General Miles wants to go to China and it is possible that the administration will let him go. You see, the nominations have been made and the President's ambition can no longer be blocked even if the general should make a great military reputation.

The President has decided not to call Congress in extra session, badly as it is admitted to be needed. Naturally. He prefers to carry things on imperially, of his own motion, rather than to trust the Representatives of the people and he will do so as long as he can keep up the pretense that we are not at war with China.

Secretary Gage does justice to Mr. Bryan when he says that the gold standard law will surely be observed by that gentleman, if elected president, until it is repealed by Congress. The idea that Mr. Bryan would deliberately disobey the law is worthy of the hysterical shouters who did so much to embitter the last campaign.

Now comes the wise editor and warns people against taking shelter under trees during thunderstorms and thereby running the risk of being struck by lightning. Yet, it's dollars to doughnuts that the aforesaid wise editor would go under a tree in a minute rather than spoil his new straw hat. And on the theory of probabilities he would be entirely right in doing so.

There seems to be some doubt as to just what this country gets from Germany in return for admitting certain of its products free. It is stated that we now get the benefits of her "minimum" tariff column, but then we have been getting them all along. This is admitted, but it is alleged that if we didn't make the concessions, Germany would put us in her "maximum" column. Can it be that the Kaiser has bluffed us?

LET every Democrat in the county be on the firing line early in the day, August 6th.

AN organization calling itself Anti-Imperialists is thinking very strong of nominating ex-Speaker Thomas B. Reed as its candidate for President.

THAT Newport Republican who has sued for ten thousand dollars damages because of being read out of his party, has very peculiar ideas of what constitutes damages.

A TRAGEDY AT ERLANGER.

Coronor's Jury Returns a Verdict of Self-Defense.

Horace Greenwell, an industrious blacksmith, of Erlanger, shot and killed his step-father-in-law, W. C. Franks, of Mt. Zion, Grant county, last Thursday afternoon. The shooting was in the Greenwell residence at Erlanger. A few weeks ago Mrs. Greenwell took her two children to Mt. Zion, and leaving them with her mother, Mrs. Franks, she went to Cincinnati where she obtained employment as a domestic. After an absence of several days Greenwell discovered where his wife was located, and visiting her induced her to return home. In a few days they agreed upon terms of a final separation, and Mrs. Greenwell went back to Mt. Zion.

Last Thursday W. C. Franks accompanied Mrs. Greenwell to Erlanger to assist in the division of the household goods, and during the progress of this business the two men fell out, and William Griffin, Greenwell's brother-in-law, the only eyewitness to the tragedy testified at the coroner's inquest, that Franks had attempted to remove some of the furniture, and when Greenwell remonstrated he became abusive and began striking at Greenwell, who retreated backwards, Franks pursuing and striking him in the face until they reached another room, when Greenwell discovered the door was fastened and he could not get out. At this point he drew his pistol and fired four shots, at the conclusion of which Franks was a corpse. One ball struck Franks in the mouth, and the others in the forehead, right breast and stomach. He says the men were clinched when the firing began. Upon Griffin's evidence the coronor's jury decided that the shooting was done in self-defense and Greenwell, who had surrendered to the proper authorities, was discharged from custody.

Friday morning Mrs. Greenwell went before Esq. T. J. Childress and swore out a warrant charging the witness, Griffin, with being an accessory to the killing of Franks.

Long on Gold, Short on Men.

America's greed will dig America's grave.

History teaches us that whenever a nation has made its idol, at last it has fallen under its idol and died.

Greece focalized her life and centralized her entire being in her literature, and at last poor old Greece turned up her toes and died under a book.

Rome centralized her whole life in her military power, and nothing but a spear tothy marks the last resting place of Rome.

America has centralized her life and power on the dollar, and we will lie toes upward under the silver dollar some future day. We have exchanged our God for Gold, swapped our characters for chattles and traded our manhood for money.

We have inverted God's order of things and we have dwindled into a nation of Klondikers.

The country is full of lawyers, doctors, politicians, bankers, merchants, farmers, preachers, etc., but we have run short of men.—Sam Jones.

White Man Turned Yellow.

Great consternation was felt by the friends of M. A. Hogarty, of Lexington, Ky., when they saw he was turning yellow. His skin slowly changed color, also his eyes, and he suffered terribly. His malady was Yellow Jaundice. He was treated by the best doctors, but without benefit. Then he was advised to try Electric Bitters, the wonderful Stomach and Liver remedy, and he writes: "After taking two bottles I was wholly cured." A trial proves its matchless merit for all Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles. Only 50c. Sold by W. F. McKim, Burlington; J. G. Oelsner, Florence; M. J. Crouch, Union.

FROM the announcements published elsewhere in this impression it will be seen that the candidates for State Senator in this district are to meet three times in joint discussion. It is hoped that the voters will turn out and give these gentlemen a good crowd at each of their appointments.

Elections in 1900.

All the states of the union, now forty-five in number, will choose presidential electors and members of congress on Nov. 6, except Oregon, whose two congressmen were chosen on June 4. All the territories will elect delegates on the same day, and the following state elections will be held in November:

Colorado, to choose a successor to the present Democratic governor, and Democratic-Populist state officials.

Connecticut, to choose a whole state ticket. The present governor is a Republican.

Delaware, a governor for four years in place of the Democratic incumbent. There is no lieutenant governor in Deleware.

Idaho, a state ticket for four years.

Indiana, a state ticket for 4 years.

Iowa, a secretary of state.

Kansas, a governor and state ticket for two years.

Kentucky, through the legal complications arising from the shooting of Senator Goebel, a governor in place of Beckham, the present governor,

Michigan, a state ticket for two years.

Minnesota, a state ticket for two years. The present governor is a populist and his associates in the administration are Republicans.

Missouri, a governor and state officers, over the election of whom there will be a hard fight. The term of office is four years.

Montana, a governor and other state officers, now divided between the Clark and Daly faction of Democrats.

Nebraska, which has a populist governor and a Populist-Democrat state administration, will fill all these places, besides choosing legislators who will have the selection of the United State senators.

New Hampshire in which a governor and state officers will be chosen.

North Carolina, in which a governor and all state officers will be elected for the period of four years, and a constitutional amendment be submitted to the voters.

North Dakota, in which a governor and state officers will be voted for.

Ohio, in which a secretary of state will be the highest office voted for.

Pennsylvania, in which two congressmen at large will be chosen.

South Carolina, in which a complete state ticket will be elected for two years.

South Dakota, in which a governor and state officers will be chosen for a like period.

Tennessee, in which a governor, treasurer and auditor will be voted for. There is no lieutenant governor in Tennessee.

Texas, in which a whole state ticket will be chosen.

Utah, in which a governor and state ticket will be chosen. Utah has not had a state election since '95.

Washington, in which a governor and state officers will be elected for four years. The present administration there is Populist.

West Virginia, in which a governor and state officers will be elected for a like period. The present administration is Republican.

Wisconsin, in which a governor and state officers will be elected.

The states in which there will be no general election for state officers this year are Maryland, Mississippi, Nevada, New Jersey and Virginia. The states which have already held their state elections are Rhode Island which chose a governor and state officers in April; Lonisiana, which holds its state election in the same month, and Oregon, which voted in June.

If afflicted with any throat or lung trouble, give it a trial for it is certain to prove beneficial. Democratic State Platform.

We, the Democrats of Kentucky in convention assembled, do make the following declaration of principles:

We heartily indorse the platform enacted by the National Democratic Convention at Kansas City on July 4, 1900; also the splendid ticket named by said convention, and pledge the Democracy of Kentucky to an earnest, cordial and active support of said ticket. The entire history of the Democratic party has demonstrated that it has always been the champion and defender of the rights of the great common people; that it has ever insisted that the will of the majority shall control and that the minority must cheerfully and willingly acquiesce therein. It has always advocated and still does that all elections shall be fairly conducted and the result honestly ascertained.

We recommend that the election law of 1898, which was enacted to prevent the repetition of Republican frauds in certain districts of this State, and which was a marked improvement upon the then existing law, but which has not proved sufficient for that purpose, be amended so as to secure this end so thoroughly that the most hypercritical can find no excuse for charging fraud or unfairness to our party in the conduct of any election.

Until such amendments can be enacted by the General Assembly, we declare that the Republican party shall have representation upon both the State and all County Boards of Election Commissioners.

We present the people of Kentucky the picture of an army of intimidation, unlawfully quartered in the public buildings of the State; a State Senator, while in the discharge of his duty to the State, stricken down by an assassin's bullet, fired from ambush from the Executive building, then occupied by his political adversary, who hoped to profit by his death; that adversary arming, filling and surrounding the building with armed men instructed to defy the civil authorities and prevent search for the assassin; the same political adversary and Republican pretender by force dissolving the Legislature in violation of the Constitution; attempting by military power to force the Legislature to meet in a veritable slaughter pen for the Democratic members; driving its members through the streets of Frankfort at the point of the bayonet; forcibly preventing the Legislature from meeting in its lawful and proper place; keeping armed, riotous and disorderly men under the very window of the room where lay dying the assassin's victim; driving the court of Appeals from the capitol by military force defying the writ of habeas corpus; aiding with soldiery and spurious pardons those lawfully accused of capital crimes to flee from justice; the same Republican pretender fleeing from the State after indictment and remaining a fugitive from justice, protected by an open violation of the Constitution of the United States, after having declared to the people of the State: "I am a citizen of the State, amenable to its laws. I am not a criminal, neither shall I ever be a fugitive from justice. Whenever indicted I shall appear for trial."

And we confidently declare our belief that a majority of the people in Kentucky favor the preservation of law and order; of both civil and personal liberty, and the maintenance of the constitutional rights of the people—Democratic doctrine which is the hope and inspiration of every true Democrat.

We denounce the action of Gov. William O. Bradley in using and personally commanding the military force of the State to control the election, and intimidating the voters at the election of 1899 in violation of the Constitution and laws of the Commonwealth.

The Democratic party expresses the deepest and sincerest grief over the untimely end of its distinguished leader and friend of the great common people, Gov. William Goebel. His name and fame will remain a sacred heritage of the Democrats of Kentucky.

We earnestly invite the support by voice and vote, of every sincere lover of civil and personal liberty, to join with us in this campaign against the forces gathering under the banner of government by assassination. The true manhood of Kentucky can not and will not indorse the assassins' means to obtain possession of office, and we appeal to every Democrat and every citizen of Kentucky to unite with the Democratic party and thus express his detestation of the foul crime.

We declare to the world that the mob and the assassin shall not be the arbiter of the rights of the citizens of Kentucky, nor shall the penalty of appeal to the law and the regularly constituted authorities be left to the hands of the assassin. Law and order must and shall prevail in Kentucky.

We indorse the administration of Gov J. C. W. Beckham, and point with pride to his submission and steadfast fealty to the law during the most troublesome, exciting and perilous days of the Goebel month.

Prof. Claud C. Adams.

[Williamstown Courier.]

In the Courier last week, appeared the announcement and appropriate editorial mention of the candidacy of Prof. Adams for the office of County Superintendent of Schools, and a promise to give our readers a cut of his features this week, so that they could see what a handsome, presentative young man he is. He was born in Boone county, May 4, 1877, and moved to Grant in 1891. Like most of our coming youngsters he was raised on a farm and obtained his earlier intellectual training in the common schools. He has, however, the added advantage of having graduated from the National Normal University at Lebanon, Ohio, in April, 1896. He holds first-class certificates from three different county boards, and a State certificate, obtained in examination last fall, with a grade average of over 91 per cent.

He has recently taught at Sherman and Crittenden, and besides took a course in Nelson Business College, and spent last winter in the University of Cincinnati.

Prof. Adams is an active, enthusiastic democrat, has been a toiler and a student all his life, and has had experience in teaching and institute work. He is not only a student of books, but of affairs and of educational affairs in particular. If elected he promises to devote his whole time and energies to the duties of the office and give his personal attention to the needs of the rural schools, and to encourage the attendance of the idle and indifferent among the children of school age.

He is a one term man, and in favor of reforms in Institute management, Teachers' Reading Circles and missionary crusades, for instruction and encouragement among the illiterate children of neglected neighborhoods. He is a modest, moral, christian gentleman, and will make an active canvass for the nomination in the December primary.

The English market, by last accounts, was, as it had been for some time, quiet, but a strong undertone was springing up, consequently on the advices from this side of the excessive rains of the West.

Considering the unquestionably large percentage of loss the crop has sustained in the dark tobacco sections, extending from Henderson down to the Clarksville district, as well as in Daviess and other counties in the Green river district, and in Indiana, the English market ought to change very materially for the better.

At the beginning of the season the acreage planted was large, and a large and good crop looked for, whereas the present outlook promises anyting but that. Stemmers will undoubtedly hold their Strips firm for higher prices than they would have accepted not long ago, as the whole situation is now changed, more particularly in counties producing Cutting Tobacco Leaf, the area of which is much more circumscribed than that for the heavy bodied dark spinning kind of leaf.

The export of strips this season is only a moderate sized one—with fewer of filler grades—probably than ever known before.

We anticipate a strong fight between buyers and sellers during the next twelve months in the English market—certainly the situation gives every indication of it.

Our farmers are being badly imposed on in the purchase of field seeds. Jacob Warner and the writer of this article each sowed in the spring of 1800 a lot of clover seed that they bought for the best quality and paid for accordingly, and nearly half of their crops from the same were a new kind of thistle, that appears to be a very troublesome weed. Others report that their crops of clover and oats are largely white mustard, the seed of which is very much like clover seed. If there is no law against such adulteration it may be necessary to enact one for the people's protection.—Owingsville Outlook.

In the manufacture of tobacco St. Louis has long led all the rest of the world. From the Missouri district, chiefly in its principal city, the government draws far more revenue from tobacco manufacture than it does from any other quarter in the country.

In San Diego county, California, recently, there died, at the great age of 153 years, Augustine, chief of the Sequoia tribe of Indians. He has ruled the tribe over 100 years, and in all that time had never been incapacitated by sickness for more than one day at time.

The oldest living recipient of an honorary degree from Harvard is ex-Gov. George S. Boutwell, of Massachusetts, who received the LL. D. degree in 1851, when it was the custom to so honor the governor of the state, a custom which stopped with the election of Benjamin F. Butler.

The insurance people will soon take up the matter of having cotton baled in the new-fashioned round bale, instead of the old square bale, which has always been more or less of a tinder box. The new style is almost proof against the careless use of fire, and the increased cost of baling is not worth taking into consideration. No doubt the necessary legislation will be forthcoming soon.

Baron Hayashi, the new Japanese minister to the court of St. James, is regarded as one of the ablest among Japanese junior statesmen. He passed the early part of his official career in the department of public works, but he was subsequently transferred to the rank of vice minister, holding that post throughout the war with China and receiving a patent of nobility for distinguished service.

When Trinity college, Dublin, confers the degree of doctor of divinity upon Rt. Rev. William Croswell Doane, according to its announced intention, it will make the third time the bishop of the diocese of Albany has been honored by educational institutions in Great Britain. He now holds a similar degree from Oxford, while Cambridge has dubbed him doctor of laws. Bishop Doane is a son of Boston, having born there in 1832.

On a bet of $2,000 James Clayton, of Gulf Mills, Pa., has started to tour the United States awheel. He must not use any other means of progress not even walking unless the road shall be absolutely impasable, and must return by March 28, 1901, having meantime visited every city of 500,000 inhabitants or over, getting the signature in each city of either the mayor or chief of police. Mr. Clayton is not an expert rider.

Thirty-one cases of divorce, separation or annulment of marriage, there being no defense in any of them, were disposed of by Justice Andrews, of the supreme court, New York, a few days ago at an average speed of ten minutes to the case. The character of the evidence in a number of the cases favored expedition. Several defendants appeared as witnesses for the plaintiffs and admitted their guilt. Evidence in some of the cases had been taken on commission in other states.

One of the most striking objects at the military service institute museum on Governor's Island, N. Y., is the identical black charger, Winchester, on which Gen. Philip Sheridan took his celebrated ride during the civil war. The animal is stuffed, of course, because he died in 1876, but the taxidermist has done his work so well that the horse is almost as natural as in life. He was prepared and mounted at Gen. Sheridan's own expense and presented by him to the museum.

Cutting the sudd on the Upper Nile has released a mass of long-stagnant water which is working its way down the river, killing the fish as it goes. At Assouan, where the great dam is being built, the dead fish have been cast ashore in millions and the odor is unpleasant. The Nile water is all the workmen have to drink, and though, when filtered, it seems to have no ill effect upon them, eels plunged into the filtered water are suffocated in a few minutes.

Fifteen-year-old William Van Allman, while picking berries west of Altoona, Pa., was nipped by a rattlesnake, which he failed to observe under a bush. The fangs of the reptile caught one of the boy's fingers near the end. First killing the snake, the lad drew his pocketknife, and, with Spartan courage, cut off the injured finger at the second joint. He bound the wound with his handkerchief and hastened to Altoona, where the injury was dressed. The physician say he is in no danger.

The magnificent granite state capitol at Austin, Tex., has become infested with centipedes of great size. These poisonous insects are to be found in every department of the state government. A few days ago one was seen in the governor's private office and after a lively chase it was killed. It measured 7¼ inches. The cause of this sudden pest of centipedes is unknown. They are particularly fond of damp places and large numbers of them have been seen about the sinks and lavatories of the building.

THE WORST IS OVER.

The Chinese Minister in London Says the Rebellion is Being Suppressed.

He Says That Messages From the Foreign Ministers There May Be Expected at Any Time.

British Officials, However, Doubt This Good News and Say It Is Only a Subterfuge to Hide the Real Situation.

Washington, July 21.—The Chinese minister has just received a cipher cable dispatch from United States Minister Conger. It is in the state department cipher, and is transmitted through the Tsung Li Yamen and the Shanghai Taotai. It contains about 50 words and is signed in English with the name "Conger."

The minister took the dispatch to the state department.

At a quarter of ten Minister Wu handed the Conger dispatch to Secretary Hay, who immediately called his assistant secretaries and private secretary and work was begun in translating the cipher. This is now in progress, and the message being quite brief, the text will soon be out. No doubt is expressed by state department officials as to the authenticity of the message. It is understood that the message is dated the 18th.

Mr. Conger's telegram is as follows:

"In British legation. Under continued shot and shell from Chinese troops. Quick relief can only prevent general massacre."

The message is not dated, but it is understood was sent from Peking on the 18th.

"On the 11th of this month the state department communicated a brief message asking tidings of Minister Conger in the state department code. Minister Wu undertook to get this into Minister Conger's hands, if he were alive. He has succeeded in doing this. This morning the state department received a telegram from Consul General Goodnow at Shanghai, saying:

"'The governor of Shanghai informs me that he has received to-day a cipher message from Conger of the 18th.'

"A few minutes later Minister Wu appeared at the state department with a telegram from Taotai Shang dated July 20, which had been received by Minister Wu at 8:30 o'clock this morning, reading as follows:

"'Your telegram was forwarded and as requested I send reply from the Tsung Li Yamen as follows: "Your telegram of the 15th date of this moon (11th) received. The state department telegram has been handed to Minister Conger. Herewith is Minister Conger's reply to the state department.

This reply was in the state department cipher, and it is regarded by the state department as genuine, inasmuch as forgeries seem under the circumstances impossible.

Washington, July 22.—The Chinese minister communicated to the secretary of state Saturday morning two important telegrams. The first is from Sheng, the director of posts and telegraphs in Shanghai, and says:

"Fortunate that Minister Conger's telegraphic reply has come. Imperial decree of the 22d, this moon (corresponding to July 18), stated that all ministers were safe. Insurgents are fighting and killing each other. Li Hung Chang is proceeding northward to suppress riot; will find it difficult to go."

The second telegram is from Li Kuh Yi, viceroy of Nanking, dated July 21, and received by Minister Wu at 10 o'clock the same day. It is as follows:

"According to edict of 22d, of this moon (July 18), with the exception of the German minister, who was killed by anachists, with regard to which rigorous measures are being taken to investigate and punish the guilty parties, all the other ministers, for whom strenuous efforts are being made for their protection, are, fortunately unharmed."

Li Kin Yi, the viceroy of Nanking, is one of the great officers of China, and stands next in rank among diplomats to Li Hung Chang.

Paris, July 22.—Yu Keng, the Chinese minister here, Saturday handed to the minister of foreign affairs, M. Delcasse, an imperial edict, dated July 9, giving the assurance that all the foreign ministers in Peking, except Baron Von Ketteler, the German minister, were safe and sound, under the protection of the imperial court.

London, July 23.—Sir Chih Chen Loh Feng, the Chinese minister in London, took the unusual step of paying a Sunday call at the foreign office. As Lord Salisbury was absent, the visit was without special result, but its importance may be gathered from an interview with the secretary of the Chinese legation, Sir Halliday Macartney, in which the legation officials seem to have assumed at last something like personal responsibility. Sir Halliday admitted that communication had been practically reopened with Peking and that messages from Sir Claude MacDonald, the British minister, and the other foreign envoys might be expected almost immediately. He said he hoped the trouble would soon be over, since the Chinese government was doing its utmost to overcome the difficulties and to check the lawless element.

In his opinion, the Americans had taken the most common-sense view of the situation, and he insisted that China ought not to be misjudged. Against the suspicion that Li Hung Chang had any but a sincere pacific object in view, he protested warmly, declaring that all stories about the perfidy and treachery of Earl Li were "absolutely baseless."

With regard to the prospects in the southern provinces, the secretary admitted that there might be small outbreaks, but he said there would be nothing serious, and that Europeans would be quite safe in treaty ports. The long silence he explained as "due probably to the rebels, who have cut the wires and blocked the roads."

Thus, according to the secretary of the Chinese legation, a few days more should bring a solution of the great mystery.

Nevertheless no one in England believes that the alleged disputches and edicts are anything but subterfuges to hide the real situation as long as possible and to avert retribution by sowing discord among the powers.

From Shanghai comes a report that the empress dowager and the court are moving to Hsian-Fu, in the province of Shan Si, to which large stores of rice are being sent, and that when these arrangements are completed the remaining viceroys will declare against foreigners.

According to the Che-Foo correspondent of the Daily Mail, the fall of Tien-Tsin has so disheartened the Chinese that they are seeking terms of peace. He says that several attempts have been made to send messages to Peking, but so far without any known results, and adds that rumors are again current that the Russians are pending Peking from the north. It is impossible to confirm or deny these statements, but either one might explain China's efforts to gain time.

The Shanghai correspondent of the Daily Mail declares that the Chinese officials are thoroughly frightened by the fall of Tien-Tsin and desire to open negotiations. "Therefore," he continues, "although all are aware of the horrible Peking massacres, every official down to the humblest retainer has been sworn to secrecy upon the penalty of wholesale execution should the details leak out. They hope, if the powers once begin negotiations, to stop the military operations and that matters might cool down."

There is the usual crop of Shanghai rumors at hand. One is that Prince Tuan has been abducted and that the empress dowager is again supreme. Another is that the notorious Kang Yi, president of the board of war, has been appointed viceroy of Canton.

The Tien-Tsin correspondent of the Daily News says the allies have issued a proclamation announcing that they are not fighting China, but only the rebels who have been guilty of attacks on the foreigners.

All foreign women and children have been advised to leave the forts on the Yang Tse Kiang.

Slight skirmishes are reported from Manchuria between the Russians and Chinese.

Washington, July 22.—The secretary of the navy received a cable message from Adm. Remey Saturday afternoon in response to his instructions to use and urge every effort for the relief of the beleaguered ministers at Peking, but for some unexplained reason declined to make it public. From other sources it was learned, however, that Adm. Remey's message related to the military condition on the part of the allied forces in the direction of Peking. It is understood that Adm. Remey says that a strong expedition composed of representatives of all the powers will start from Tien-Tsin on the 30th inst. for the rescue of the foreigners imprisoned at the Chinese capital. The strength and composition of this force as well as the personnity of the officers in command are not definitely known. There is reason, however, for the belief that Adm. Remey counts upon having a good force of Americans in the column. This will be in consequence of the arrival of expected reinforcements at Taku before the date named.

The 9th infantry, under Lieut. Col. Coolidge, numbering about 1,200 men, is now at Tien-Tsin. The 14th infantry, under Col. Daggett and a battery of the 5th artillery, numbering about 1,000 men, from the Philippines, are expected to arrive at Taku Sunday or Monday. The transport Grant, carrying two squadrons of the 6th cavalry, and a battalion of the marines, and Maj. Gen. Chaffee, who is to command the entire force, is expected to arrive at Taku about the middle or end of next week. There are about 1,000 men on the Grant, including about 500 marines now in the vicinity of Taku, there will be about 3,700 American troops available for the proposed expedition to Peking, provide it does not start before the 30th instant.

Shanghai, July 23.—Li Hung Chang, who arrived here on the steamer Anping from Hong-Kong, was coldly received. The native officials sent an escort of 300 armed troops, but as the French consul objected to their passage through the French settlement, they were withdrawn, and Earl Li landed under an escort of 12 French police. Once out of French jurisdiction, he was handed over to the cosmopolitan settlement police, who escorted him to his place of residence.

St. Petersburg, July 23.—An imperial ukase issued orders that a state of siege be proclaimed in the military districts of Siberia, Turkestan and Semiretchiask, and that all reservists in those districts be called to the colors.

Berlin, July 23.—The German consul at Swatau telegraphs, under date of July 21, that all the German missionaries from the interior of the province of Kwang Tung have arrived there safely.

APPEALS TO AMERICA.

China Asks Good Office of the United States in Restoring Order.

Friendly Relations With the Chinese Government Will Be Kept Up as Long as Such a Thing Is Possible.

Washington, July 23.—President McKinley has received what purports to be a direct appeal from the Chinese imperial government to use his good offices to extricate that government from the difficult and dangerous position in which it has been placed as a result of the Boxer uprising and the ensuing hostile attitude of the great powers. The communication was made through Minister Wu to the state department. Thus far a final answer has not been returned. The United States government is consciously proceeding upon an entirely different line of policy in the treatment of the Chinese than the European powers. The point of difference between the state department and the European governments is that the latter are proceeding upon the belief that all of the foreign ministers and missionaries and guards at Peking have been killed, and insist upon dealing with the Chinese government on that basis, thereby assuming a hostile attitude that tends to destroy the last chance of availing of whatever friendly sentiment may yet exist among the powerful Chinese viceroys and the imperial government itself.

Our government, while not guaranteeing the truth of the advices from the Chinese government as to the safety of the foreign ministers, is willing to accept the statements temporarily, in the meantime remitting none of its efforts to get access to Mr. Conger through the use of military force if need be. By following out this policy the state department argues that it retains two chances instead of one. It may reach Mr. Conger with troops and it also may secure his deliverance through the friendly offices of some of the powerful Chinese officials, which the powers are not likely to obtain for their own people by following out their present policy. It may be stated also that the United States government has not and does not intend to relinquish any part of its claim for compensation and reparation in the ultimate settlement. Its position in that respect, it holds, will not be affected unfavorably by prosecuting its efforts to make use of the friendly sentiments of the Chinese officials.

A particularly deplorable effect of the reasoning of the European governments on this point, in the estimation of our government, is the abandonment of the idea that there is particular need for haste and for taking even desperate chances in the effort to get the international relief column through to Peking. It is true that the latest advices from Taku indicate that, whereas it was originally estimated by the foreign commanders that the expedition could not be started before August 15, it is now regarded by them as possible to make a beginning about the first of August. But the military experts here who have been closely scanning all the reports from Tien-Tsin that appear to be worthy of credit feel that even now the way is open to Peking and that the march should begin with the force at present on the Pei-Ho, leaving the powers to bring up reinforcements to reopen the base, should the first expedition be cut off. According to the latest official reports, the country around Tien-Tsin is clear of hostile Chinese.

The administration is determined to keep aloof from any movement that would unnecessarily entangle the government of the United States in Chinese affairs. It, of course, must join heartily with the other powers in the effort to get to Peking, but it does not follow from that co-operation that it will be led into taking part in any bickerings or dissensions that ensue over the future of China after our people have been taken care of. It is the intention of the administration to withdraw our forces, military and naval, after the Americans in Peking have been relieved, and wash its hands of Chinese affairs, looking only to the preservation of such privileges as it has a right to retain for Americans.

A brief cablegram was received by Secretary Long from Rr. Adm. Kempff at Taku. He announced that the Newark was going over to Nagasaki to be docked and cleaned. Although he did not say so, it is assumed that he is going with her, as she is his flagship.

OUR FOREIGN COMMERCE.

An Enormous Increase in Trade in the United States During the Fiscal Year 1900.

Washington, July 22.—The total foreign commerce of the United States during the fiscal year 1900 exceeds 16 2-3 per cent. that of any preceding year, being $320,000,000 greater than that of 1899, the heaviest one on record preceding the one which has just ended. The total commerce of the year, as shown by the figures of the treasury bureau of statistics, is $2,344,193,343. The exports are $1,394,479,214, or $163,000,000 in excess of those of 1893, which held the record of the largest exports until the record of 1900 was made. All of the great classes show an increase in exportation.

Fisheries show $1,000,000; mining and forestry, nearly $10,000,000 each; agriculture, nearly $100,000,000 over the phenomenal year 1899.

Imports are also heavy, especially in the class designated as "Articles in a crude condition which enter into the various processes of domestic industry." Of the five grent classes of imports, articles in a crude condition for use in manufacturing show by far the largest growth.

Manufactures show a gain of about $20,000,000 over last year; articles of voluntary use, luxuries, etc., also about $20,000,000; articles of food, about $15,000,000; articles wholly or partially manufactured for use in manufacturing, $25,000,000, and articles in a crude condition which enter into the various processes of domestic industry, over $75,000,000.

PITCHED BATTLE.

Four Persons Killed in a Fight Between Deputy Sheriffs and a Gang of Railroad Hands.

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 22.—Four persons were killed in a battle between deputy sheriffs and a gang of railroad hands on the Cincinnati Southern in Scott county. Deputy Sheriffs Pemberton and Reid went to the camp to arrest Will Walker for illegal whisky selling. The whites and blacks had been drinking and mudertook to prevent the arrest. In the fight that ensued two negroes were instantly killed and both deputies fatally wounded, Pemberton being shot through the head. Montaineers gathered with Winchester, threatening to wipe out the camp. J. W. Cronk, inspector of the camp, at whose hands warrants were issued, fled to Chattanooga. Walker, who has been making much trouble with his illicit whisky selling, escaped arrest.

DUEL WITH SWORDS.

Count Boni de Castellane Wounded Count Orlowski in the Outskirts of Paris Saturday.

Paris, July 22.—Count Boni de Castellane, who married Miss Anna Gould of New York, fought a duel with swords Saturday, with Count Orlowski, in the outskirts of Paris. In the first assault Count Orlowski was wounded in the thorax, and the duel was stopped by the doctors.

The conditions of the duel were that the contest should continue until one of the combatants was absolutely unable to continue. The cause of the duel war a newspaper article reciting a quarrel between the two, occurring in Count Boni de Castellane's house. Count Orlowski charged Castellane with responsibility for the article.

The seconds failed to reach a satisfactory arrangement, and decided that a meeting was necessary.

Suicided in a Vacant Lot.

A man living near by heard a shot an hour before Coles's body was found, but paid no attention to it. No note of farewell was found on the body.

IT'S ALL IN A NAME.

One Reason Why the Conservative Negro Whitewasher Lost His Occupation.

"What's in a name?" asked Shakespeare. Everything, may be answered, and no one has made the answer more plain to the ordinary mortal than Booker T. Washington, the noted colored orator, says the Chicago Times-Herald. While lecturing in Omaha last winter he paused in the midst of his remarks and asked:

"How many negro boys in Omaha are learning a mechanical trade?"

"Not one."

Then Mr. Washington proceeded to tell the negro boys what they should do. The old colored man with his brush and pail of whitewash once made a good living. But he was a whitewasher. The first thing he knew a white man came along with an assortment of brushes and several colors of wash under fancy names. The white man called himself an "interior decorator," and the old colored man's job was gone forever.

"You negro boys," continued Mr. Washington, "must become interior decorators, for the whitewashing job is done."

OVARIAN TROUBLES.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cures Them—Two Letters from Women.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I write to tell you of the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me. I was sick in bed about five weeks. The right side of my abdomen pained me and was so swollen and sore that I could not walk. The doctor told my husband I would have to undergo an operation. This I refused to do until I had given your medicine a trial. Before I had taken one bottle the swelling began to disappear. I continued to use your medicine until the swelling was entirely gone. When the doctor came he was very much surprised to see me so much better."—MRS. MARY SMITH, Arlington, Iowa.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was sick for two years with falling of the womb, and inflammation of the ovaries and bladder. I was bloated very badly. My left limb would swell so I could not step on my foot. I had such bearing down pains I could not straighten up or walk across the room and such shooting pains would go through me that I thought I could not stand it. My mother got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and told me to try it. I took six bottles and now, thanks to your wonderful medicine, I am a well woman."—MRS. ELSIE BRYAN, Otisville, Mich.

NOAKS ON THE STAND.

Most Damaging Evidence Yet Produced in the Powers Trial.

Witness Knew Goebel Was Going to Be Killed, But Thought the Killing Would Occur in a Fight.

Georgetown, Ky., July 20.—Culton resumed the stand again Thursday. In regard to the preparations for bringing the big crowd of mountaineers to Frankfort, witness said Powers told those in the conference that in the event of any trouble growing out of the importation of the men the leaders would be indicted for conspiracy and asked if they were willing to take the risk. In the discussion of the question of transportation witness said Henry Paynter, a Middlesboro railroad lawyer, suggested that trains be captured on several railroads.

Witness was asked about visiting Col. Campbell and others of the prosecution. He denied that he had been promised immunity. He admitted that he did not tell Campbell the truth when he said that he had told all he knew, but as a matter of fact he knew, told just such as he was forced to tell.

Mr. Owens asked a number of questions to show that the testimony given by Culton on the stand Thursday and Wednesday was at variance on some points with that given in his application for bail at Frankfort. Witness said he had omitted some things in his testimony, but that he had not done so intentionally. His memory had been refreshed by the questions of the lawyers, and this recalled the additional matter he had told.

The cross-examination of Culton was continued at the afternoon session. He was asked to again relate the conversation between him and ex-Gov. Bradley, regarding a report that Goebel was to be killed. Bradley told witness he understood 12 men had been picked for that purpose, and said, "that must not be done under any circumstances." He was asked if Powers did not come to him after the assassination, and ask him if he knew anything that would lead to discovery of assassin. Witness could not recall such a conversation.

Georgetown, Ky., July 21.—The most sensational and damaging testimony yet given in the trial of ex-Secretary of State Caleb Powers was given by Robert Noaks, an L. & N. railroad conductor, of Corbin, Whitley county.

Noaks said that early in January he met Caleb Powers on a train. Powers asked him to raise a military company at Corbin, and told him "to take in only such men as would stand by us in any emergency. Powers also asked me where he could get smokeless powder cartridges. I told him I guessed he could only get them in a United States arsenal. He then asked me if I could go to Ft. Thomas and make an effort to get them. After that John Powers asked me about the cartridges, and I told him I could not get them. He said it made no difference, as he thought they would be too large for the purpose anyway. Also talked with Caleb Powers again about the military company, and he cautioned me to only take into it republicans who would fight."

Witness had another talk with John L. Powers, who said "this is a life and death struggle with us, but we intend to hold our own even if we have to kill some one. I found a company of the kind suggested, and Gov. Bradley sent us a man who mustered the company in."

On January 22 witness received a telephone message from Caleb Powers, who asked him to get his company ready and take it to Frankfort. Powers said it had been arranged to capture train No. 80 of the Cumberland division and train No. 26 of the Knoxville division to take the men to Frankfort. It was intended to send 1,500 in all.

Witness said Finley went to Louisville, saying that, rather than capture trains, he would pay for them himself. That day a telegram from Louisville was received, asking if Finley's check was good for $1,000. Caleb Powers heard of it and said Finley "was getting too d—d shaky."

"Did Powers ever say anything to you about Goebel?" was asked.

"Yes. He was on my train one day," said the witness, "I asked him about the contests, and he said, 'The contests won't amount to a d—n, and when Goebel is dead and in h—l there is not another man in the state who can hold his party together."

Witness, continuing his story, said: "Finley sent us the train from Louisville which carried the men there January 25. We had 15 coaches. When we got to Richmond, Culton got on the train and told us that when we arrived at Frankfort we should give it out that we were going to petition the legislature. When we got there I told the boys to scatter out and to carry their guns as naturally as if hunting, and not in military position. After we got there I was standing out in the state house yard talking to John Powers. He told me to stand closer to the executive building, as I might get hurt. He said: 'Some of our men are upstairs, and when Goebel and those other fellows come in they are going to do the wave for them.'

"This excited me and I told him this must not be done. He tapped me on the shoulder and told me to keep cool. A few minutes later I started to the capitol hotel. My purpose in going there was to prevent Goebel from being killed. On the way I met John B. Hurst and we stopped to take a drink. We also sat down and took a lunch. I was very nervous and took a seat where I could see the state house. I went back to the state house, as the actions of two men who followed me made me think I was in danger. I went back into the secretary of state's office. Caleb Powers called me over and said: 'Bob, I understand you have two men in your company who would kill a man if you wanted them to do it.' I told him I did not believe I had such a man in my company, and he then mentioned Chadwell and Jones. I told him I did not believe they were men of that kind. That afternoon, when the men were being sent home, Caleb again came to me and told me to keep 10 or 12 of our best men there, and to be sure and keep Chadwell and Jones.

"My military company was taken with me. They wore citizens' clothes, with their uniforms under them. We were told by Powers to do this so we would be ready for military service as soon as called out by the governor. W. H. Culton came to me and told me that I must keep six of my men under arms all of the time. I later went to Assistant Adjt. Gen. Dixon and told him I wanted to turn over my company, as I had become satisfied they were going to seat Goebel as governor, and I did not want to serve under him. Dixon told me not to be discouraged, as Goebel would not be governor. I also saw Powers again. The men were drunk and getting disorderly. I was tired of it and asked Powers how long this was going on. He said not much longer, as Goebel was going to be killed and that would settle it. That morning I checked two large pistols and a rifle for Berry Howard."

Georgetown, Ky., July 22.—Capt. Robt. Noaks, the railroad conductor, whose sensational testimony in the Powers murder case, commenced Friday, resumed the stand Saturday.

Judge Tinsley conducted the cross-examination. The witness said he had made a complete statement of his testimony to Col. Campbell, of the prosecution, and also one to J. C. Mayhor, attorney for the witness, prior to going on the stand. Asked if he had been accused at the time he had made the first statement, he said that he made it when he found that detectives had been at Corbin looking up matters against him. Witness had a conference with Col. Campbell at Big Stone Gap, Va., prior to his arrest. Campbell passed himself off as Mr. Kamar, and witness did not know who he was till he had partially committed himself.

Witness was arrested on June 30 at 4 o'clock a. m. Campbell did not promise witness immunity or anything else.

Witness said Campbell, claiming to be Mr. Kamar, passed himself off as a prospector in mineral lands of that section. Witness and Campbell discussed minerals, and finally matters drifted on to politics and the Goebel assassination, and it was in this that witness gave himself away. He denied that he ever told ex-Gov. Bradley that he had Campbell's assurance that he was only to be used as a witness and would not be prosecuted.

Asked how his men were armed the day they went to Frankfort, witness said they carried guns, the property of the state militia; about half of those in his squad were militiamen in citizens' clothes. Witness repeated that John Powers told him "to stand close to the building, as some of our fellows are up in the lobby and are going to do the work for Goebel and those other fellows when they come in."

Witness said he had an idea previous to this that Goebel was to be killed, but he thought it would be in a fight and not by assassination.

"Where were you going when you met John B. Hurst?" was asked.

"I was going to the Capitol hotel to prevent Goebel, Senator Trimble, Jack Chinn and Eph Lillard from being killed. It was the common talk that they were going to be killed."

"You were only objecting to the method of killing Goebel, were you?" asked Judge Tinsley.

"I was not in favor of assassination," responded the witness.

"But you wanted a free, open fight, did you not?"

"I am always ready for a free fight," said Noaks.

Noaks was re-examined regarding the trip of himself and his men to Frankfort at the time of the meeting of the election commissioners in December. He repeated that Powers had instructed him to have his men crowd into the state house so the governor would have an excuse to call out the militia. When they got there, however, Gov. Bradley blocked their game by telling them "to keep off the grass," as the witness expressed it. Witness reiterated that the object of Powers and others was to intimidate the commissions.

Noaks was still on the stand when court recessed.

The cross-examination of Noaks was not completed Saturday, but he was withdrawn from the stand on motion of the defense who asked him to produce the muster-roll of his military company, and the cartridge which John Powers gave him. He did not have them in his possession, and was excused till Monday, when he promised to bring them into court.

Boers Make an Attack.

London, July 23.—The war office has received the following dispatch from Lord Roberts, dated at Pretoria, July 22: "The Boers made a determined attack yesterday to destroy a post at the Rail Head, 13 miles east of Heidelberg, which they attacked with three guns and a 'pompom' and surrounded. They were, however, beaten off after a sharp engagement, before reinforcements summoned from Heidelberg had arrived."

BECKHAM NOMINATED.

An All-Night Session Held By the Kentucky Democrats—The Platform Adopted.

Lexington, Ky., July 20.—The democratic state convention met here and, after an all-night session, nominated W. H. Beckham for governor on the first ballot.

It was after 1 o'clock when the committee on resolutions reported and the platform adopted.

The platform in substance is as follows:

1. We heartily indorse the magnificent platform adopted by the national democratic convention at Kansas City.

2. The entire history of the democratic party has demonstrated that it has always been the champion and defender of the rights of the great common people, that it has ever insisted that the will of the majority shall control and that the minority must cheerfully and willingly acquiesce therein. It always advocated and still does that all elections shall be fairly conducted and the result honestly ascertained. We recommend that the election law of 1898, which was enacted to prevent the repitition of well-known republican frauds in certain districts of this state, and which was a marked improvement upon the then existing law, but which has not proved sufficient for that purpose, be amended so as to secure this end so thoroughly that the most hypercritical can find no excuse for charging fraud or unfairness to our party in the conduct of any election. Until such amendments can be enacted by the general assembly we declare that the republican party shall have representation upon both the state and all county board of election commissioners.

The third plank denounces the assassination of Gov. Goebel in unqualified terms, drawing a vivid pen picture of the horrible acts of the republican party in the months succeeding the November election, and declares for a preservation of law and order, civil and personal liberty, and the constitutional rights of the people, democratic doctrine, which is the hope and inspiration of every true democrat. The action of Gov. Bradley in using the military force of the state to control the election of November, 1899, is denounced as a violation of the constitution of the commonwealth. The death of Gov. Goebel is deplored. The support of every true lover of civil and personal liberty is invited in a campaign against the forces gathered under the banner of a government of assassination. It is declared to the world that the mob and the assassin shall not be the arbiters of the rights of citizens of Kentucky. Law and order must and shall prevail. Gov. Beckham's administration is indorsed.

At 2:10 o'clock Congressman Wheeler began his speech nominating Beckham. It was one of the most eloquent efforts of Kentucky's most polished orator.

At 2:30 B. F. Graziani began his speech nominating Judge Tarvin.

At 2:40 W. B. Brouston, of Lexington, seconded Beckham's nomination, and a roll call of the convention was begun.

When McLean county was reached at 3 a. m. Beckham had the 547 votes necessary to nominate.

Black's name was withdrawn by Charles Metcalfe, of Bell county. Tarvin withdrew his name, thanking the convention for giving him a "narrow escape from being nominated," and moved to make the nomination unanimous. The motion carried. The band played "Dixie." Beckham was called to the stage amid much enthusiasm to make his speech of acceptance. Beckham was introduced by Tarvin, who said that he would "guarantee that he would be elected governor and remain in Kentucky for the next four years."

Gov. Beckham thanked the convention in a brief speech, and the convention adjourned sine die.

Shooting at a Convention.

Nashville, Tenn., July 20.—A fatal shooting affray at Cookeville, Tenn., terminated for the day the deliberations of the democratic senatorial convention of the Tenth district. Lil Cleek and W. C. Cleek, it is alleged, was advancing on Crawford with a knife, when the latter opened fire with a revolver, killing Cleek.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

John W. Yerkes, of Danville, Nominated for Governor Without Any Opposition.

Louisville, Ky., July 18.—The republican state convention nominated for governor Hon. John W. Yerkes, of Danville, adopted a platform declaring the issue of the election to be the Goebel election law and adjourned within three hours. There were some anti-Goebel democrats in the convention but as to how many figures differ. In the Shelby county delegation there were, according to a statement made from the platform 19 democrats. A feature of the speeches was that they all paid tributes to what the democratic party has done in the past, though they unsparingly denounced the present democratic state administration and the democratic legislature, thus indicating a purpose to welcome into the republican party all democrats who are opposed to the Goebel election law.

There was no nomination to be made by this convention except for governor, as this year's election in Kentucky is an extraordinary one to fill the vacancy in the governorship made by the death of William Goebel. The present governor, Beckham, will hold this office only until his successor is elected and qualifies unless he should himself be elected governor.

Hon. John W. Yerkes, the nominee for governor, is a lawyer and one of the most prominent republicans in Kentucky. He is at present a collector of internal revenue, but before holding this place had not been an office-holder. He was a strong candidate for United States senator when Senator Deboe was elected. After W. S. Taylor announced that he would not be a candidate for renomination Mr. Yerkes announced himself as a candidate and no other name has since been mentioned for the place.

The platform which was unanimously adopted contained three planks, the second and third respectively endorsing the Philadelphia convention and its nominees and urging the government to protect Americans in China and the first one dealing with the state campaign. It was as follows:

"The republican party of Kentucky is confronted with a special and extraordinary duty in the election of a governor. The events of the past 12 months draw together all the friends of social order and civil liberty. Republican officials elected by the people at the polls have been denied their offices and the people of Kentucky deprived of the right of choosing their state officials. Republican members of the legislature were unlawfully unseated, the city of Louisville deprived of the right to any part in the conduct of the government, the counties of Johnson, Magoffin and Martin have been denied all voice in the choice of our officers. The courts declare that the only remedy for this invasion of personal liberty rests with the people at the polls. We declare that the only tolerable government is self-government. We declare that in this state all men must be free and equal and that the will of the people must be the supreme law of the state. We demand for each child a free school but we deny that education or accumulated property alone confers the right of suffrage. The first duty of Kentucky citizens is to repeal the Goebel election law which is the source and continuing strength of the wrongs done in this state. A vote of confidence next November in men who are all usurpers of office and who have for a year been acting together to thwart the declared will of the people will be accepted as a vote of confidence in the election law that is a blot on our statute books. The Goebel law must be abolished or republican institutions must be surrendered. The convention invites all friends of civil liberty and social order to unite with the republicans of Kentucky in securing the repeal of the Goebel election law and the preservation of the liberties of the people. We congratulate the republican party on the efforts made by Gov. Taylor and his co-officials in securing this right to the people and thereby preventing the state from having as officers men defeated at the polls."

Bradley Declines a Nomination.

Louisville, Ky., July 18.—Former Gov. W. O. Bradley declined a formal tender of the republican congressional nomination from the Eighth district.

Three-Handed Duel.

Owensboro, Ky., July 18.—In a three handed duel at Hawesville, Hancock county, between Allen and Frank Pulliam, and Jack Hesson, Hesson was killed instantly and Allen Pulliam died three hours later. The trouble grew out of a gambling affair. Hesson killed Jack O'Daniel, December 25, 1897. The Pulliams are nephews of Judge A. M. Pulliam, who killed a James Miller in Hardinsburg, and brothers of Ed. Pulliam, who killed Rev. W. B. Swope several years ago.

STATE NEWS PICK-UPS.

CLAIMS SELF-DEFENSE.

Mark Stevens Shot and Instantly Killed at Lexington, Ky.—An Eye-Witness' Story.

Lexington, Ky., July 21.—Mark Stevens was shot and instantly killed by J. H. Ludwig. Ludwig claims that the deed was done in self-defense. The testimony of Sam Tillet and James Murphy, the only eye-witnesses, gives the tragedy another color. They say Stevens was ramming post holes at the Armour Packing Co.'s building on Rose street, Ludwig was seen to walk across the street and grab Stevens by the collar, at the same time drawing a knife. Stevens drew back his rammer as if intending to strike, but let it fall. Ludwig dropped the knife, drew a revolver and fired. The ball hit Stevens over the heart. Ludwig tried to escape, but was captured by William Burke.

Ludwig is a railroad carpenter, and is a native of Boyle county. He came here about three years ago from Cincinnati, having been employed, he claims, on the Monon. Ludwig claims that Stevens, for some cause, attacked him with the rammer and knocked him down.

SARDINE BOX ON THE TRACK.

Louisville, Ky., July 20.—Train No. 102, of the Illinois Central, left the rails near Millside, Ky., 128 miles from Louisville, and the road officials are inclined to believe that it was the result of another attempt at train robbery. Luckily only the engine and the mail coach left the track, and, as the train was not running at a high rate of speed, no one was injured.

A sardine can filled with rocks had been placed on the track, and when the engine struck the impediment it ran into the ditch. John Devinney was at the throttle, and after applying the airbrake he jumped. The engine was badly damaged, and carried with it the mail car, which fared even worse.

Gov. Beckham Taking a Rest.

Frankfort, Ky., July 24.—Gov. Beckham returned from the Lexington convention and spent the day here, but left at night for his home at Bardstown, where he will remain till Tuesday, freshening up. A meeting of party leaders will be held here next week some time, at which campaign plans will be decided upon. An early campaign opening is assured. Gov. Beckham had no statement to make regarding an extra session of the legislature, and opinion is divided as to whether he will call one.

Wilson, the prominent young lawyer of London, who was recently sentenced to five years in the state penitentiary from the Rockcastle circuit court on a charge of having performed a criminal operation upon Miss Mary Cloyd, of this county, causing her death, has applied to Gov. Beckham for a pardon and a petition of remonstrance is being circulated here, and largely signed, asking the governor not to pardon. Wilson is in jail, having taken his case to the court of appeals.

Howard Willing to Give Bond.

Corbin, Ky., July 19.—Berry Howard, who is charged with being an accessory to the assassination of Gov. William Goebel, has written to Hon. R. C. Ford, a prominent democratic politician of Middlesboro, stating that he would submit to arrest on condition that he be released upon his giving bond. AN EXTRA SESSION.

The Legislature Will Be Called for the Purpose of Amending the Goebel Election Law.

Lexington, Ky., July 20.—At the conference in Senator Blackburn's room which lasted till about 3 o'clock Thursday morning, and at which Gov. Beckham was represented, it was agreed to recommend an early extra session of the legislature for the purpose of amending the Goebel election law. The result of this conference has been generally accepted Thursday by the Beckham men and it has relieved them from embarassment over the only plank in the platform that was in dispute. This plan leaves the whole matter to the legislature without any specific declaration by the convention as to how the modification of the election law shall be made, meantime the opposition say that the Beckham men have made this concession under protest, and will not work sincerely in the legislature for a satisfactory modification of the law. They also insist that the concession indicates weakness on their part, and that the fight will proceed from a test vote on temporary chairman in which Judge J. E. Robbins is the Beckham candidate and R. Frank Peake, the candidate on the opposition.

No Trouble to Raise the Money.

Middlesboro, Ky., July 21.—Some time ago John D. Rockefeller agreed to give the Lincoln Memorial school at Cumberland Gap $100,000 if a like sum was raised from other sources. Ninety thousand dollars has been raised, and it is said there will be no trouble in raising the balance. The directors of the school have bought the Cumberland Gap inn, the Harrogate inn, the sanitarium, the Arthur residence and the site of the Four Seasons hotel. They have also bought about 500 acres of land.

A large crowd attended church at Hopeful, last Sunday morning. Those present from a distance were Prof. J. H. Craven, of Verona, and William and Miss Lillie Thornton, of Covington.

A series of meetings will begin at Hopeful church next Saturday the 28th inst. The pastor, Rev. H. Max Leutz, will be assisted by his uncle, Rev. D. S. Leutz, of Altoona, Pa. The meeting will continue for two weeks and probably longer.

According to our measurement there was 4 inches of rain fell here, last week, and those that were not through harvesting had rather a hard time to do anything in that line of business, and the hay that was cut the first part of the week could not be handled until the latter part and it was damaged considerably. The oats crop, no doubt, has been greatly damaged by the continuous wet weather, but the corn is booming and the prospects fattening.

J. S. Surface, whom we might term a natural genius, after considerable study, and no doubt, worry, and possibly loss of sleep, has invented a pleasure boat. We have never seen the structure, but will give the description of it as given to us. He first got a large barrel, corked the bung hole, making it air tight. He then fastened some planks on each side of the barrel, which he thought would keep it from rolling—this completed the p. b., and he looked upon it with great pride and flattered himself with a wonderful achievement, and said, the only thing to do was to go aboard and launch it out upon the deep. He concluded to try it and mounted the barrel, and before he had sailed many knots the structure gave way and left him astride the barrel, which wasrolling and bobbing about when he lost his balance and was completely submerged. He still has faith in the success of his craft, and says if he had been more graceful the trial trip would have been a success. Will Graves, of Bullitsville, saw the boat collapse, and told John his invention was a first-class failure.

The lightning "cut up jack" as the boys would say, in and about Union, last Thursday, and several people were considerably shaken up by it. Mrs. Harriet Taliferro, Miss Apha Riley and Lan Norman being most seriously affected.

Perry Aylor is having his residence paluted. Mr. Aylor has trouble to account for his hogs (pure Poland China) becoming Red Berkshires and his chickens (pure White Leghorns) turning into Buff Cochins when he has painting done.

Rev. Davis has preached seven years for the Presbyterian church here and during that time has gained the esteem and affection of every member. His work has been done faithfully and conscientiously and never for a second has he wavered from the line of true gospel teaching to gain popular applause. We venture the assertion, however, that no minister in the county is held in higher esteem by all denominations and all classes of people. On the 3d Sunday evening a congregational meeting was held and Mr. Davis presented his resignation, but the church refused to accept it and used every effort to hold him.

The Union baseball club went up and played the Walton team, Saturday, and defeated them, the score reading, Union 17, Walton, 13. The Union boys are not gushing over with praise of the methods adopted by the Walton aggregation in conducting baseball games. They claim the Walton fellows kicked for all that was out (and lots were out) and kicked for all that was in (and few were in.) They refused to accept any old threadbare schemes for winning, such as kicking bases out of position, &c., but would have put up with modern, up-to-date tactics, even if they were unprofessional. They beat them and got the ball, however, and that settles it.

It has been intimated that your Cor. tells too much some times. If so be it so ! but in palliation of this generous fault let us say we do not tell it all just the same. We never told of a popular young citizen running over eleven cows in 11 seconds at full speed horseback and not breaking his neck. Why? because he only run over 8. We would be tortured and garrotted before telling about the man who uses sandpaper to trim his corns with. Why? because he told us in confidence and we cant. We would refuse to tell about how a good woman boiled her teeth in rhubarb to cleanse them, and discovered later on that they had evaporated or melted, as you like it. Even if a Chinaman had us by the windpipe with one hand while he held a tin god in the other and prayed that we might be dissected too. Never have we shown a kodac picture or spoken a line about the good housewife who baked three cats for breakfast and burnt up two pair of gloves at the same time. No, we never and neither will we ever, even if we have to do duty on a canvas boat and board at a Norwegian restaurant the balance of our life. We have not even whispered to the stars (afraid to) even a line about the fellow that mistook our coal house for a free distribution library, last winter, and walked off with 129lbs. 3oz & 5dr of coal, besides insulting the wately dog. No, we never! and will not do so if coal gets to 45c per bu. and natural gas sells at 70c per ton. Talk about telling too much if you please, my dear reader! but if we were to tell but one-half that we do not tell this earth that is to us now a very fair sized and comparatively pleasant dwelling place would become a seething, boiling mass of demolished expectations and we would be looking for something to happen.

We had a hearty hand shake with Mr. James Riddell, of Williamstown, last Saturday—not having seen each other for many years. It was remembered by both that we enlisted in the same Cavalry Company for the Mexican war. That cavalry company was not wanted and we both had ideas that we were not fleet enough of foot for some of war's emergeucies, particularly, in maneuvering to get out of the way fast enough in case of a retreat "to rally around the flag" in the rear, (as the boys phrased it during the civil war.)

The Masonic Anniversary Celebration was a magnificent success, the lowering clouds and 24 hours rain from 9 o'clock to the contrary notwithstanding. About 12 m. Bro. Lafayette Johnson began speaking in the Opera House which was filled to its utmost capacity. The eloquent preacher had not more than got into the merits of his discourse, when the music of the band coming from the Southern depot escorting the visitors from Ciucinnati lodges, made the welkiu ring. The rain had ceased, and the sun breaking thru the clouds, at high noon, proved to be the harbinger of a bright afternoon. "To the grounds—to the grounds!" came from huudreds of loud-mouthed voices, and to the grouuds they weut, and soon the grove was alive with happy hearted throngs—many harkening to Bro. Johnson, who continued his discourse as if nothing had happened to interrupt it.

Bro. Rogers, of Walton, was the next speaker, and was listened to with marked attention. The Ohio Principal of a High School, Geo. W. Burns, came next on the list, and was a surprise and delight to every body. As he went on his audience grew larger with every sentence and from the looks of eagerness in the faces turned on him it was evident that all were willing to listen as long as he was inclined to talk. Messrs. Davis and Keller also held the audience in rapt attention. It was the most orderly and well behaved multitude that ever assembled in Walton, and it created a profound sensation among all classes. So large a crowd and no disorder or rioting has never been seen in the memory of the oldest inhabitant. Verily! Masonry is a wonderful institution.

And why should it not be wonderful? Coeval, as it appears to intelligent members to be with the Creation, from the significant language of two of the most illustrious writers, it antedates the Jewish or anyother religion. Moses says in the first verse, chapter 1, of Genesis: "In the beginning God made the heavens and the earth." St. John, the Evangelist, in the first verse and the first chapter, says: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the word was God." Almost any bright Mason can see the connection. And again God said: "Let there be light, and there was light." I have not made any research for further coincidences, nor urged the facts of the discovery in Egypt of Masonic emblems and inscriptions in the excavation of temples built and now sunk far below the surface of the earth. These reflections have come to me but recently, and have not been fully digested. Thoughts sometimes flash on the minds of men that lead to peculiar modifications of existing manifestations.

There was one attempt at rowdyism on the grounds Saturday but it was squelched by Eskew, who was a committeeman, landing his fist on the fellow's jaw so heavily that he laid for a few counts unconscious. This prompt action put a quietus on any further manifestations of an elevated aucient parrot aud Monkey time.

Heard, a few days ago, a good joke on one of the county officials. He loves to hunt, but owing to a failure of eyesight hunting has been no pleasure to him of late years. On one occasion he was visiting a friend who invited him to take a hunt, when he declined because of his defective vision. His friend told him he could furnish him with spectacles that would surely overcome the trouble. The spectacles were provided and a very successful hunt had, in which the county officer did some excellent shooting. During the hunt and after the hunters reached home, the c. o. frequently declared the spectacles he was using to be the best he ever had on. The friend refrained from laughing as long as he could, and when he told the c. o. that the spectacles were actually glassless there came near being a serious encounter right then and there.

The Grangers at Union will give an entertainment and ice-cream supper at the historic "Stone House," the lovely home of Mr. R. O. Smith, on Saturday evening, Aug. 4, beginning at 8 o'clock. A very fine Graphophone is to be one of the attractions. Ice-cream at ten cents, and cake at five cents will appeal to all, especially, when it is known that the proceeds are to be applied to the purchase of books for the circulating library Golden Grange is establishing. A large and careful selection of books, embracing works of history, science, biography and fiction has been made with a view to the culture of our young men and women. Every body is asked to aid the work.

Mr. Editor: — I had the exquisite pleasure and delightful privilege of spending a most enjoyable afternoon, last Sunday, with two distinguished young artists, at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Gaines. Miss Helen Merel Schuster, the foundress and principal of "Miss Schuster's School of Elocution" in Covington, is an artist in her line whose fame extends over many States of our union. Her gestures are appropriate and manner of delivery artistic in accord with the strictest rules of the art of elocution. She favored the few guests present with three of her choice selections—the first was rendered so pathetically that it filled the eyes of your scribe with tears of sympathy—noting the embarassing position in which she had placed him, her sympathetic nature prompted her to recite a very humorous piece, which dispelled his tears and caused him to laugh as he had not done for years.

Miss Gretchen McCurdy Gallagher is at the head of the violin department in Miss Schuster's school. She possesses the distinguished honor of being reputed the finest lady violinist in America. She is certainly the finest performer on the violin, male or female, I ever heard; her touch is so soft and the music so full of melody that it would melt a heart of stone and cause the most degraded reprobate to turn his eyes heavenward. These ladies are charming conversationalists and it is a rare privilege to enjoy their wit and humor. They will spend this week with Mr. and Mrs. Gaines, who have become so popular in Covington and Cincinnati society as host and hostess.

A MISSION OF CHRIST

Dr. Talmage Discourses on the Great Surgeon.

Efficacy of the Divine Power in Healing the World's Wounds and Deformities—Relations of Surgery and Theology.

In this discourse Dr. Talmage (who is now traveling in Europe) puts in an unusual light the mission of Christ and shows how Divine power will yet make the illnesses of the world fall back; text, Matthew xi, 5: "The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed and the deaf hear."

"Doctor," I said to a distinguished surgeon, "do you not get worn out with constantly seeing so many wounds and broken bones and distortions of the human body?" "Oh, no," he answered; "all that is overcome by my joy in curing them." A sublimer and more merciful art never came down from Heaven than that of surgery. Catastrophe and disease entered the earth so early that one of the first wants of the world was a doctor. Our crippled and agonized human race called for surgeon and family physician for many years before they came. The first surgeons who answered this call were ministers of reugion—namely, the Egyptian priests. And what a grand thing if all the clergymen were also doctors, all D. D.'s were M. D.'s, for there are so many cases where body and soul are treatwented at the same time, consolation and medicine, theology and therapeutics. As the first surgeons of the world were also ministers of religion, may these two professions always be in full sympathy! But under what disadvantages the early surgeons worked, from the fact that the dissection of the human body was forbidden, first by the pagans and then by the early Christians! Apes, being the brutes most like the human race, were dissected, but no human body might be unfolded for physiological and anatomical exploration, and the surgeons had to guess what was inside the temple by looking at the outside of it. If they failed in any surgical operation, they were perseeuted and driven out of the city, as was Archagathus because of his bold but unsuccessful attempt to save a patient.

But the world from the very beginning kept calling for surgeons, and their first skill is spoken of in Genesis, where they employed their art for the incisions of a sacred rite, God making surgery the predecessor of baptism, and we see it again in II. Kings, where Ahaziah, the monarch, stepped on some cracked latticework in the palace, and it broke, and he fell from the upper to the lower floor, and he was so hurt that he sent to the village of Ekron for aid, and Aesculapius, who wrought such wonders of surgery that he was deified and temples were built for his worship at Pergamos; and Epidaurus and Podelirius introduced for the relief of the world phlebotomy, and Damocedes cured the dislocated ankle of King Darius and the cancer of his queen, and Hippocrates put successful hand on fractures and introduced amputation, and Praxagoras removed obstructions, and Herophilus began dissection, and Erasistratus removed tumors, and Celsus, the Roman surgeon, removed cataract from the eye and used the Spanish fly; and Heliodorus arrested disease of the throat, and Alexander of Tralles treated the eye, and Rhazas cauterized for the prevention of hydrophobia, and Percival, that came to combat diseases of the spine, and in our own century we have had, among others, a Roux and a Larray in France, an Astley Cooper and an Abernethy in Great Britain and a Valentine Mott and Willard Parker and Samuel D. Gross in America and a galaxy of living surgeons as brilliant as their predecessors. What mighty progress in the baffling of disease since the crippled and sick of ancient cities were laid along the streets, that people who had ever been hurt or disordered in the same way might suggest what had better be done for the patients, and the priests of olden time, who were constantly suffering from colds received in walking barefoot over the temple pavements, had to prescribe for themselves, and fractures were considered so far beyond all human cure that instead of calling in the surgeon the people only invoked the gods!

I notice this Surgeon had a fondness for chronic diseases. Many a surgeon, when he has had a patient brought to him, has said: "Why was not this attended to five years ago? You bring him to me after all power of recuperation is gone. You have waited until there is a complete contraction of the muscles, and false ligatures are formed, and ossification has taken place. It ought to have been attended to long ago." But Christ the Surgeon seemed to prefer inveterate cases. One was a hemorrhage of 12 years, and he stopped it. Another was a curvature of 18 years, and He straightened it. Another was a cripple of 38 years, and he walked out well. The 18-year patient was a woman bent almost double. If you call a convention of all the surgeons of the centuries, their combined skill could not cure that body so drawn out of shape. Perhaps they might stop it from getting any worse, perhaps they might contrive braces by which she might be made more comfortable, but it is, humbly speaking, incurable. Yet this Divine Surgeon put both His hands on her, and from that doubled up posture she began to rise, and the empurpled face began to take on a healthier hue, and the muscles began to relax their rigidity, and the spinal column began to adjust itself, and the cords of the neck began to be more supple, and the eyes that could see only the ground before, now looked into the face of Christ with gratitude and up toward Heaven in transport. Straight! After 18 weary and exhausting years, straight! The poise, the gracefulness, the beauty of healthy womanhood reinstated. The 38 years' case was a man who lay on a mattress near the mineral baths at Jerusalem. There were five apartments where lame people were brought, so that they could get the advantage of these mineral baths. The stone basin of the south is still visible, although the waters have disappeared, probably through some convulsion of nature. The bath, 120 feet long, 40 feet wide and eight feet deep. Ah, poor man, if you had been lame and helpless 38 years, the mineral bath cannot restore you. Why, 38 years is more than the average of human life. Nothing but the grave will cure you. But Christ the Surgeon walks along these baths and I have no doubt passes by some patients who have been only six months disordered, or a year or five years and comes to the mattress of the man who had been nearly four decades helpless, and to this 38 years' invalid said: "Wilt thou be made whole?"

The question asked not because the surgeon did not understand the protractedness, the desperateness, of the case, but to evoke the man's pathetic narrative. "Wilt thou be made whole?" "Would you like to get well?" "Oh, yes," says the man. "That is what I came to these mineral baths for. I have tried everything. All the surgeons have failed, and all the prescriptions have proved valueless, and I got worse and worse, and I can neither move hand nor foot nor head. Oh, if I could only be free from this pain of 38 years!" Christ and surgeon could not stand that. Bending over the man on the mattress, and in a voice tender with all sympathy, but strong with all omnipotence, he says: "Rise!" And the invalid instantly scrambles to his knees and then puts out his right foot, then his left foot, and then stood upright as though he had never been prostrated. While he stands looking at the doctor, with a joy too much to hold, the doctor says: "Shoulder this mattress, for you are not only well enough to walk, but well enough to work, and start out from these mineral baths. Take up thy bed and walk!" Oh, what a surgeon for chronic cases then and for chronic cases now!

This is not applicable so much to those who are only a little hurt of sin and only for a short time, but to those prostrated of sin 12 years, 18 years, 38 years. Here is a surgeon able to give immortal health. "Oh," you say, "I am so completely overthrown and trampled down of sin that I cannot rise." Are you flatter down than this patient at the mineral baths? No. Then rise. In the name of Jesus of Nazareth, the surgeon who offers you His right hand of help, I bid thee rise. Not cases of acute sin, but of chronic sin—those who have not prayed for 38 years, those who have not been to church for 38 years, those who have been gamblers, or libertines, or thieves, or outlaws, or blasphemers, or infidels, or atheists, and all these together, for 38 years. A Christ for exigencies! A Christ for a dead lift! A surgeon who never loses a case!

In speaking of Christ as a surgeon I must consider him as an oculist or eye doctor, and an aurist or ear doctor. Was there ever such another oculist? That he was particularly sorry for the blind folks I take from the fact that the most of His works were with the diseased optic nerves. I have not time to count up the number of blind people mentioned who got His cure. Two blind men in one house; also one who was born blind; so that it was not removal of a visual obstruction, but the creation of the cornea and ciliary muscle and crystalline lens and retina and optic nerve and tear gland, also the blind man of Bethsaida, cured by the saliva which the Surgeon took from the tip of His own tongue and put upon the eyelids; also two blind men who sat by the wayside.

In our civilized lands we have blindness enough, the ratio fearfully increasing, according to the statement of European and American oculists, because of the reading of morning and evening newspapers on the jolting cars by the multitudes who live out of the city and come in to business. But in the lands where the Divine surgeon operated the cases of blindness were multiplied beyond everything by the particles of sand floating in the air, and the night dews falling on the eyelids of those who slept on the top of their houses, and in some of these lands it is estimated that 30 out of 100 people are totally blind. Amid all that crowd of visionless people, what work for an oculist! And I do not believe that more than one out of a hundred of that surgeon's cures were reported.

That is the oculist we all need. Till he touches our eyes we are blind. Yea, we were born blind. By nature we see things wrong, if we see them at all. Our best eternal interests are put before us, and we cannot see them. The glories of a loving and pardoning Christ are projected, and we do not behold them. Or we have a defective sight which makes the things of this world larger than the things of the future, time bigger than eternity. Or, we are color blind and cannot see the difference between the blackness of darkness forever and the roseate morning of an everlasting day. But Christ the Surgeon comes in, and though we shrink back, afraid to have Him touch us, yet He puts His fingers on the closed eyelids of the soul and midnight becomes midnoon, and we understand something of the joy of the young man of the Bible who, though he had never before been able to see his hand before his face, now by the touch of Christ had two headlights kindled under his brow, cried out in language that confounded the jeering crowd who were deriding the Christ that had effected the cure and wanted to make Him out a bad man, "Whether He be a sinner or not, I know not. One thing I know, that whereas I was blind, now I see."

But this surgeon was just as wonderful as an aurist. Very few people have two good ears. Nine out of ten people are particular to get on this or that side of you when they sit or walk or ride with you, because they have one disabled ear. Many have both ears damaged, and what with the constant racket of our great cities and the catarrhal troubles that sweep through the land, it is remarkable that there are any good ears at all. Most wonderful instrument is the human ear. It is harp and drum and telegraph and telephone and whispering gallery all in one. So delicate and wondrous is its construction that the most difficult of all things to reconstruct is the auditory apparatus. The mightiest of artists have put their skill to its retuning, and sometimes they stop the progress of its decadence or remove temporary obstructions, but not more than one really deaf ear out of 100,000 is ever cured. It took a God to make the ear, and it takes a God to mend it. That makes me curious to see how Christ the Surgeon succeeds as an aurist.

We are told of only two cases He operated on as an ear surgeon. His friend Peter, naturally high tempered, saw Christ insulted by a man by the name of Malchus, and Peter let his sword fly, aiming at the man's head, but the sword slipped and hewed off the outside ear, and our Surgeon touched the laceration and another ear bloomed in the place of the one that had been slashed away. But it is not the outside ear that hears. That is only a funnel for gathering sound and pouring it into the hidden and more elaborate ear. On the beach of Lake Galilee our Surgeon found a man deaf and dumb. The patient dwelt in perpetual silence and was speechless. He could not hear a note of music or a clap of thunder. He could not call father or mother or wife or children by name. What power can waken that dull tympanum or reach that chain of small bones or revive that auditory nerve or open the gate between the brain and the outside world? The Surgeon put his fingers in the deaf ears and agitated them and kept on agitating them until the vibration gave vital energy to all the dead parts, and they responded, and when our surgeon withdrew His fingers from the ears the two tunnels of sound were clear for all sweet voices of music and friendship. For the first time in his life he heard the dash of the waves of Galilee. Through the desert of painful silence had been built a king's highway of resonance and acclamation. But yet he was dumb. No word had ever leaped over his lip. Speech was chained under his tongue. Vocalization and accentnation were to him an impossibility. He could express neither love nor indignation nor worship.

Our Surgeon, having unbarred His ear, will now unloose the shackle of His tongue. The Surgeon will use the same liniment or salve that He used on two occasions for the cure of blind people—namely, the moisture of His own mouth. The application is made, and the rigidity of the dumb tongue is relaxed, and between the tongue and teeth was born a whole vocabulary and words flew into expression. He not only heard, but he talked. One gate of his body swung in to let sound enter, and the other gate swung out to let sound depart. Why is it that, while other surgeons used knives and forceps and stethoscopes, this Surgeon used only the ointment of His own lips? To show that all the curative power we ever feel comes straight from Christ. And if He touches us not we shall be deaf as a rock and dumb as a tomb. Oh, Thou greatest of all artists, compel us to hear and help us to speak!

What a grand thing for our poor human race when this Surgeon shall have completed the treatment of the world's wounds! The day will come when there will be no more hospitals, for there will be no more sick, and no more eye and ear infirmities, for there will be no more blind or deaf, and no more deserts, for the round earth shall be brought under arboriculture, and no more blizzards or sunstrokes, for the atmosphere will be expurgated of scorch and chill, and no more war, for the swords shall come out of the foundry bent into pruning hooks, while in the Heavenly country we shall see the victims of accident or malformation or hereditary ills on earth become the athletes in Elysian fields. Who is that man with such brilliant eyes close before the Throne? Why, that is the man who, near Jericho, was blind and our Surgeon cured his ophthalmia! Who is that erect and graceful and queenly woman before the Throne? That was the one whom our Surgeon found bent almost double and could in nowise lift herself up, and He made her straight. Who is that listening with such rapture to the music of Heaven, solo melting into chorus, cymbal responding to trumpet, and then himself joining in the anthem? Why, that is the man whom our Surgeon found deaf and dumb on the beach of Galilee and by two touches opened ear gate and mouth gate. Who is that around whom the crowds are gathering with admiring looks and thanksgiving and cries of: "Oh, what He did for me! Oh, what He did for my family! Oh, what He did for the world!" That is the Surgeon of all the centuries, the Oculist, the Aurist, the Emancipator, the Saviour. No pay He took on earth. Come, now, let all Heaven pay Him with worship that shall never end and a love that shall never die. On His head be all the crowns, in His hands be all the scepters and at His feet be all the worlds!

MEANING OF IMPERIALISM.

Entirely at Variance with the True Principles of Freedom and Fairness.

If definitions in the dictionaries will not aid much the platform adopted at Kansas City may. It is understood that Mr. Bryan had something to say about the construction of the platform. We may presume, therefore, that Mr. Bryan means about what the platform means by the word "imperialism." The second paragraph of the platform reads:

"We declare again that all governments instituted among men derive their just powers from the consent of the governed; that any government not based on the consent of the governed is a tyranny, and that to impose upon any people a government of force is to substitute the methods of imperialism for those of a republic."

This declaration seems to convey a pretty clear idea of what the framers of the platform mean by "imperialism" and we may safely assume that what they mean Mr. Bryan means. The idea is more fully set forth, perhaps, by the words quoted than it would be by a formal definition.

Essentially, imperialism is arbitrary power exercised over a people without their consent. It is the power that the British government asserts in many places, though in general it exercises the power with such moderation that the people over whom it is asserted are practically self-governing. At bottom it is a flat denial of the right of self-government.

It is entirely immaterial whether the power to govern without the consent of the governed is asserted by a person called an emperor or by a person called a president or by a parliament or by a congress.

The material thing is the assumption of supremacy—of sovereignty—by some person or number of persons over other persons whose consent is not given and who are not consulted.

It is the utter negation of the American doctrine that sovereignty resides in the people and not in others assuming by divine right or the right of mere might an authority above that of the people.

This is the imperialism which has been set up in Washington over distant peoples. It is an imperialism which the American people cannot permit to be exercised in their name over other peoples of the earth without incurring great risk that it will soon be exercised over themselves.

To quote once more from the platform:

"We assert that no nation can long endure half republic and half empire, and we warn the American people that imperialism abroad will lead quickly and inevitably to despotism at home."

Substantially the same thing was said by Abraham Lincoln, but it is not the mere dictum of any man or body of men. It is an eternal truth rooted clear down at the bottom of human nature.

He who accepts the principle of despotism is a fit subject of despotism.

Men may laugh at that, but let them remember that some things are regarded with tolerance to-day which would have been rejected with indignation and horror hardly more than two years ago.—Chicago Chronicle.

Clear and Straightforward.

Upon all phases of all the questions involved in the issue of imperialism the democratic platform is clear, straightforward, admirable. There is no evasion, no juggling. After reading these vigorous yet moderate and sane utterances no one can have the slightest doubt either as to the principles laid down or as to how the democratic party interprets those principles into policies. The evils are defined and the remedies of justice, liberty and American fair-dealing are proposed explicitly and fearlessly. Upon the other great issue, monopoly, the platform is again clear, straightforward, admirable. Instead of incoherent ravings and indefinite promises, there is sanity of statement, avoidance of confusion between corrupt and legitimate uses of capital and a demand for real reforms—for publicity, for the constitutional extension of law, and above all for the ending of monopoly-fostering tariffs. — Cincinnati Enquirer.

SCANDAL UPON SCANDAL.

Another Instance of Republican Rottenness in Public Office.

It is well known that the present head of the treasury bureau of statistics is preparing the campaign text-book of the republican party. Such a scandalous disregard of the proper duties and dignity of that bureau has never before been shown. There have been charges made of partisan use in the past, but these charges have never been proved to such an extent as to affect the correctness of the returns issued by the bureau. There have been issued, under official sanction, interpretations of commercial and industrial returns, favoring a particular policy or measure, and when Charles Foster was secretary of the treasury the head of the bureau permitted a violently protectionist interview to be circulated as a treasury document although it was well known at the time that the matter had been prepared by another hand. Such exhibitions of improper political activity by the bureau have been rare, however, and have never failed to bring down criticism on those who were responsible.

Secretary Gage must bear the full responsibility of causing the present scandal. He removed a man of experience to make room for a political hack, whose only qualification was his service during the campaign in running a "literary bureau" for the republicans. From the beginning this partisan has used the bureau for partisan purposes, and he is now occupied in preparing the campaign handbook. Such a function is as remote from those proper to the collection of commercial statistics as they would be from the conduct of a church, and the knowledge that this hack is engaged in the task is sufficient to bring into discredit his activity in statistics of trade as issued by the treasury. Since Mr. Austin has been in office he has not added a single feature to the tables as formerly issued, save that of throwing discredit on the whole by his evident intention to make himself useful to his party. The worst feature of it is that the tables are discredited abroad as well as at home, and it is not strange that so little regard is paid by statisticians of Europe to the work now done under our government.—N. Y. Post.

"THE DOLLAR BEFORE THE MAN."

Where Bryan Is Strong.

Bryan shows his greatest personal strength in the fact that he is today, as he has ever been, utterly without a political machine. Other men in American politics stand or fall for reasons outside of their personality. David Hill, for instance, is a geographical location. Mr. McKinley is a kind of syndicate. Roosevelt stands for an ideal of civic righteousness. Mr. Croker is an impudent appetite. Quay is a system of wireless telegraphy. But Bryan is Bryan, and Bryan is his prophet. More power for good or evil rests under Bryan's black slouch hat than under any other single headpiece in America. Bryan is machineless, not because he abhors the machine, but because he ignores it. He would not know what to do with captains and lieutenants. If his party should begin to turn from him, Bryan could not call: "What, ho, warder, let the portcullis fall," in a score of states and check the stampede. If oratory would not stop the panic, the multitude would have to leave him as it came to him. After which he would go on lecturing until that gave out, and running for the senate till that gave out, and for congress till that gave out, when he would return to his law office and continue as he was in the beginning, an honest, hard-working, ordinary country lawyer, with an extraordinary voice and a forceful, direct, plausible way of putting short Anglo-Saxon words that often move juries but are not so thrilling in briefs.—Will Allen White, in McClurg's Magazine.

—If the republican congress postpones the reduction of the war tax, the people will not postpone the reduction of the republican vote in congress.—Albany Argus.

THE GREAT WORLD'S CRISIS.

At Cabinet Meetings the Policy of the United States Was Definitely and Fully Decided Upon.

Washington, July 21.—As a result of the cabinet meetings held Tuesday and Thursday, the policy of the United States concerning the great world crisis in China is fully and definitely decided upon. The substance of this policy is as follows:

1. The United States will under no circumstances join in the partition of China among the powers.

2. The United States will use all its influence, to the utmost extent, short of war with European nations, to prevent the dismemberment of the Chinese empire.

3. The United States proposes to have a voice in the settlement of the Chinese trouble, and its voice will ever be against spoliation and in favor of preservation of China's territorial and governmental entity along the lines set forth in Secretary Hay's note to the powers dated July 3.

4. The United States will not declare war upon China on the present showing of facts, no matter what other powers may do.

5. The United States, acting independently and for itself, will co-operate with the other powers in restoring order in China, in punishing all officials, high or low, found guilty of crimes against human life, in setting up a stable government that may give guarantees of security of life and property and freedom of trade.

MORE MARINES FOR CHINA.

A Battalion of 340, Officers and Men, Will Leave New York for San Francisco Next Sunday.

New York, July 21.—Gen. Heywood, commandant of the marine corps, and Maj. Denny, quartermaster, were in consultation with Secretary Long at the navy department Friday with respect to the immediate transportation of the marine battalion about to be mobilized in this city for service in China.

These marines, numbering fifteen officers and 301 men, under command of Maj. Dickins, will leave this city next Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock for San Francisco. They are scheduled to sail on the transport Hancock, which will leave San Francisco within an hour or two after their arrival, either on the 27th or 28th instant.

EMPEROR OF CHINA.

Asks for Mediation of France With the Foreign Powers—Communication Received to That Effect.

Paris, July 21.—The Chinese minister at Paris has transmitted to M. Delcasse, minister of foreign affairs for communication to President Loubet a telegram from the emperor of China, which was dispatched by the governor of Shangtung, Thursday, July 19, asking the mediation of France with the foreign powers. The telegram makes no allusion to the foreign minister at Peking.

M. Delcasse informed the minister that President Loubet's reply would be addressed to the French legation at Peking, where the imperial government can obtain it, but first, the government of the republic will wait until it is certain that the French minister at Peking is safe and sound.

TROUBLE IN PERSIA.

Three Thousand Christians in Immediate Danger—Several Hand-to-Hand Conflicts.

Peoria, Ill., July 21.—George Shimoon, a Persian student, who has been attending a college in Illinois for several years and is passing the summer in Peoria, Friday received a cablegram from his home at Oroomia, Persia, stating his brother had been murdered by Mohammedans, and that a general massacre of the 3,000 Christians in Oromia was expected. The cablegram states that the feeling of the Mohammedans against the native Christians is growing and that there have been several hand-to-hand battles with fatalities on both sides. Mr. Shimoon's father is a native missionary, and this fact adds to the wrath against him and his family.

BOXERS WELL ARMED.

A Heavy Reward Promised by Leaders for Each White Head They Bring In.

New York, July 21.—A dispatch from Che-Foo says:

It is reported that after the allied armies recaptured the native city of Tien-Tsin last Saturday their shells set fire to the town. The Chinese before they fled killed all their own women, it is reported, to prevent their falling into the foreigners' hands.

Native Chinese report that there are in and around Peking at least 300,000 Chinese troops, and that the Boxers are armed with the best and most modern weapons. From all sources come the same tidings that the Boxers have enormous supplies of modern arms and ammunition.

Was Pullman's Cousin.

Noblesville, Ind., July 21.—Chas. C. Pullman died northeast of this city of consumption, aged 29. He was buried by the county. He once had considerable money, but spent it in searching for health. He was a cousin of the late Geo. M. Pullman.

Stamp Books Sell Well.

Washington, July 21.—A profit of $20,000 has been realized by the post office department on the sale of postage stamp books up to the present time. About 2,250,000 of these books of all kinds have been sold.

FIGHTING IN THE PHILIPPINES

Two Hundred Insurgents Killed and One Hundred and Thirty Captured Last Week.

Manila, July 23.—It is officially reported that last week 200 insurgents were killed and 130 surrendered or were captured. One hundred rifles were taken. Twelve Americans were killed and 11 wounded. This includes the casualties of Col. Wm. S. Birkhimer's engagement with a force of the 28th volunteer infantry, who attacked 200 insurgent rifles intrenched two miles east of Taal, killing 38.

Capt. Chas. D. Roberts, of the 35th volunteer infantry, who was captured by the Filipinos last May, has arrived here on parole. He will not return to captivity.

Senor Buencamino last Thursday sent to Aguinaldo, by means of Aguinaldo's brother, the amnesty resolutions adopted by the meeting of representative Filipinos here on June 21, together with Gen. MacArthur's answer to them and other documents bearing upon the restoration of peace. It is understood Aguinaldo will summon his advisers and that a reply may be expected within a month.

Filipinos here will give a banquet next Saturday in celebration of President McKinley's order of amnesty.

SUPPLIES FOR OUR TROOPS.

A Commissary Depot Will Be Established at Taku—Provisions Being Sent.

Chicago, July 22.—A commissary depot for supplies for American troops now in China, or to go there, has been established at Taku, under command of Maj. Gallcher, of the department of subsistence of the Philippines. This announcement is made by Col. W. L. Alexander, chief of the subsistence bureau of the department of the lakes. No time has been lost in getting supplies to the new depot, heavy shipments having been forwarded from Manila, and 30 more carloads, comprising canned, dressed and salted beef, will be dispatched by Col. Alexander next Friday.

The 30 carloads will be divided between Manila and Taku. The latter depot will be made the base of supplies for American troops in case of operations against Peking, and a refrigerator ship, of which there are three in the service of the commissary department of the Philippines, will be sent there to care for the supplies of refrigerated beef.

VESSEL CUT IN TWO.

Seven of the Crew Saved, but It Is Believed That the Eleven Others Perished.

London, July 23.—A dense fog hung over the Irish channel Sunday morning, and the Cunard line steamer Campania, en route from New York for Liverpool, struck the Liverpool bark Embleton, bound for New Zealand, amidships, cutting her in twain.

The Embleton sank immediately. Seven of the crew were rescued, but it is believed the other 11 members of the ship's company, including the captain, were drowned.

Farmers Kill Each Other.

Aberdeen, S. D., July 23.—A terrible encounter occurred between two Russian farmers, whose names have not yet been learned, in Emmons county, which resulted in the death of both. There was no witness to the battle, but it is supposed the men quarreled over a tract of hay land and attacked each other with pitchforks. Their bodies were found in the field where the fight took place. There was evidence of a terrible struggle, the bodies of both men being pierced by the fork tines and covered with blood from their many wounds.

Killed By a Policeman.

Menominee, Mich., July 23.—Joseph Mitchell, a cigar maker, was shot and instantly killed by Chris Eck, a Marinette policeman. The former was intoxicated and resisted arrest. Eck gave himself up. He claims that Mitchell had a companion who attempted to take the prisoner away from him, and he says that in discharging his revolver to call assistance Mitchell got within range and was accidentally killed.

Army Corps Offered.

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 22.—The adjutant general of the Spanish-American War Veterans' association has written to the secretary of war offering, in the event of war with China, a regiment of ex-Spanish war men from each department of the organization. Were the plan carried out it would furnish an entire army corps.

Chinamen Coming to America.

Fort Worth, Tex., July 22.—Reports from the border say hundreds of Chinamen are being landed in the republic of Mexico and are making their way to the border in an effort to get into the United States. It is said thousands of Chinamen are coming to America to escape the war raging in the Chinese empire.

TAKING THE CENSUS.

An Enumerator Meets with One Woman Who Didn't Withhold Any of the Details.

"Oh, yes, I know you are the census man. Warm day, take a seat. I've gotten all the facts for you. My husband, John Moore, is 40; I am 32; we have seven children; they are all well now."

"But—" put in the census man, relates the Pittsburgh Chronicle.

"Yes, yes; you needn't ask me any questions. I'm telling you fast as I can. Tommy, our oldest boy, had the measles when he was three. He first began to walk when he was eight months old and the day after he was ten months old he could walk clear around the room without holding on to anything. He fell down the stairs when he was four years three months and thirteen days old, but it didn't hurt him any, and he liked ice cream from the first time he ever tasted it. I can't get him to eat gravy, but he had his first piece of steak when he was 15 months old. Johnnie, the next to the oldest—"

"Madam, stop, stop," cried the enumerator, "answer my questions. I don't want to know any more about your children."

Millions for Baseball.

A million of dollars are spent every year upon the game of baseball, but as large as this sum is, it cannot begin to equal the amount spent by people in search of health. There is a sure method of obtaining strength, and it is not a costly one. We urge those who have spent much and lost hope to try Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It strengthens the stomach, makes digestion easy and natural, and cures dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness and weak kidneys.

Better Than a Doctor.

Palmer's Lotion, if properly used, is often better than the prescriptions of a regular physician. Under date of July 2, 1900, Mr. Lester A. Fawcett, 30 Carleton Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "After being treated several days without benefit for sore eyes and eyelids by a regular M. D., I was relieved in two minutes by Palmer's Lotion, and now, at the end of four days, am a well man." Palmer's Lotion has also cured a number of cases of granulated eyelids which physicians had treated without success. Palmer's Lotion Soap should be kept in every household. It possesses the medicinal properties of the Lotion and is the only soap to be used in connection with it. If your druggist does not keep it, send his name to Solon Palmer, 374 Pearl St., New York, and receive free pamphlet of testimonials with sample of Lotion or Soap.

STORY OF MANDY HIGGINS' BABY.

"Have you heard how Mandy Higgins' baby is?"

"Oh, she is better, and just as clean and sweet as any baby ever was."

"Well, I'm mighty glad to hear it. It's about time the poor little critter had some rest. I tell you what it is, if Mandy had washed its head with CUTICURA SOAP first-off, and put on some CUTICURA Ointment when her baby's head began to get crusted, she'd have saved herself heaps of trouble, and the poor little kid would have been a different being. Think of the days and nights Mandy's walked the floor with that baby. I ain't got no kind of patience with people that has to be told about a thing a hundred times before they begin to believe in the virtue of it.

"Now, I told Mandy more'n three weeks ago about CUTICURA SOAP, and she knew just as well as you do, Liz, that we'd used it here going on five years or more, and that none of our family ever had a pimple, or any kind of irritation of the skin since we first begun using it. She was that contrary that I could n't get her to try it on her baby, even though I offered to give her a cake of the soap and some of the ointment from our box.

"But now she comes here about every day to thank me. Fact is, the youngster's head is as clean as a whistle, and her skin is just as pretty as you ever see on any baby."

MOTHERS: Mothers, to know that a warm bath with CUTICURA SOAP, and a single anointing with CUTICURA, the great skin cure and purest of emollients, will afford instant relief, permit rest and sleep to both parent and child, and point to a speedy cure, in the most torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, bleeding, crusted and scaly humors, rashes, and irritations, with loss of hair, and not to use them is to fail in your duty. Think of the years of suffering entailed by such neglect. Cures made in childhood are speedy, permanent, and economical.

Mr. Vic F. Snell, who lives on the Summers farm, was engaged in threshing wheat. A negro man lighted a pipe and threw the lighted match in the straw, which set fire to a straw stack. Some six or eight hundred bushels of wheat and other property were burned. There was no insurance.—Georgetown Times.

The largest and best wheat crop ever harvested in Clark county is now nearly all threshed and safely housed. Fully 220,000 bushels were grown in Clark county this season and the quality is of the finest, nearly all of it grading No. 2, unless it contains cheat, cockerel, rye or other deleterious substances. The average crop is less than 150,000 bushels. This year the price has varied from 70 to 80 cents, a few crops selling for more and a few others for less than these prices. This will bring at least $175,000 to our farmers. Kentucky wheat is considered the best in the country when a good crop is secured. It grinds better and makes better bread. While a number of buyers are at work in the county, the most of this wheat will be ground here, the capacity of our local mills being about 200,000 bushels yearly. Winchester is a good local wheat market, the Clark county farmers generally getting from two to five cents more per bushel than those of Madison or Montgomery counties. Lexington frequently pays a cent or two more than Winchester, but the latter generally pays more than Richmond, Mt. Sterling or Paris. In the latter city this season there is a better contest among local dealers and the price is a little higher than here.—Winchester Democrat.

It affords a quick and sure cure in a pleasant form." For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington; Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg; O. N. Grant, Bellevue, C. S. Baisly, Bullittsville.

There seems to be a considerable fog in front of the Neely trial,—Atlanta Constitution.

Strange things are constantly and unexpectedly happening on this sublunary sphere. At the Louisville Reunion of Confederates, I wrote, by request of Col. Allen, 7th Ohio Cavalry, a short account of Morgan's brief fight and retreat from Cynthiana Sunday morning June 12, 1864. Col. Allen was writing a description of the fight from his standpoint, he having been on the other side, and he wanted to interpolate in his story my version—how things looked that morning to a Confederate. Col. Allen published the story—his and mine—in the National Tribune. In my part of the story I mentioned the fact that seeing a nice looking young Federal soldier among the many prisoners, who was limping along in evident distress, I invited him to climb a stone wall and get up behind me to ride. He gratefully did so, and rode "double" with me a number of miles to Clay village, where we paroled the prisoners. I had often thought of that young fellow, speculating as to his subsequent fate. Soon after the appearance of the story in the "Tribune" I received a letter from Isaiah Garretson, of Lima, Ohio, formerly of the 12th Ohio Cavalry, now a well-to-do real estate broker in Lima. He had read the Tribune story, and immediately identified me as having been his "friend in need" that morning at Cynthiana. Several letters have passed between us, it being a great pleasure to renew an acquaintance begun under such peculiar circumstances. Garretson only weighed 117 pounds when he "rode behind" me. Like Col. Allen, it was his fortune to often meet our Kentucky cavalry in battle array. He ordered a copy of my book, it being descriptive of much of his soldiering. He is an intelligent gentleman, and of course ingratitude is not a trait of his character.—Dallas in Carrollton Democrat.

[Williamstown Courier.]

H. M. Kendall tells of a brave battle made by Mrs. J. C. Elliott, a neighbor's wife, against a mad bull, for the life of her little baby girl, one day last week. The way Hade tells it would bring tears to your eyes.

It happened something like this: One day, the latter part of last week, Mrs. Elliott took two little girls, one of them her own, and went blackberrying on the Hume place, which Mr. Kendall's farm adjoins. In the field where they stopped to gather berries there chanced to be a number of large fat steers and a full grown bull. Mrs. Elliott's little girl wore a red dress, and it was not long before this attracted the attention of the bull, and he at once came charging madly down on the little gang of berry gatherers, bellowing and pawing the earth as mad bulls do. The little party started on a run for the nearest fence about one hundred and fifty yards away, the mother encouraging and assisting the children forward as fast as she could. The bull gained on the fleeing party rapidly and his hot breath was on the smallest child, when she screamed in terror. "Mamma, oh, mamma, save me!"

The mother turned, and seizing a chunk of decaying wood which chanced to be at hand, dashed it with all her frenzied strength full in the face of the oncoming beast. The dirt and fragments filled his eyes and the suddenness of the stroke seemed to surprise and partially stun him, which gave the child time to pass her mother in the race for the fence, and for life, leaving the now thoroughly aroused woman face to face with the furious animal. She shouted to the children to hurry them in their flight, and seeing a pile of split oak pickets close at hand, she dodged the bull's next charge, and seizing one of the pickets with both hands, and turning it edgewise, she began a battle royal not only for her children but for her own life.

Yielding little by little, and always in the direction of the fence, she fought the furious bull, beating his face and nose till they were covered with froth and blood, and until the children first, and then finally she, too, reached and crossed the fence where she fell exhausted and unconscious at the children's feet.

After reviving somewhat she made her way to Hade's house, a half mile or more distant, and he hitched up his horse and buggy and conveyed her home. Hade says "she's the bravest little woman in the world," and most of us will promptly agree with him.

The Sultan of Sulu is not yet fully assimilated. He objects to the punishment of those of his subjects who have murdered American soldiers. Possibly his indignation is merely a play for an increase of the salary we are paying him to be good.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

THE CALEB POWERS TRIAL.

[Notes from Georgetown Times.]

With more than 300 witnesses to examine the attorneys say they cannot hope to finish the trial within five weeks.

This case must be tried in the court room and not in the newspapers," said Judge Cantrill in his lecture to the reporters.

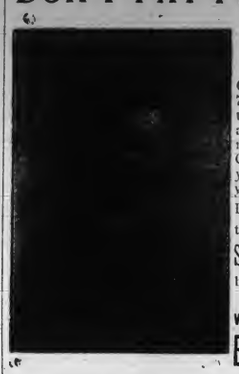
Col. Campbell is not a very captivating speaker, but a pointed one.



Judge Cantrill couldn't be recognized from some of the pictures that are appearing in the papers. One, that is going the rounds, was made from an old photograph, taken twenty years ago.

On account of the noise from the streets, which sometimes interrupts proceedings, watchmen have been placed at the intersection of Broadway and Hamilton streets with Main to warn all drivers of vehicles to pass the court House in a walk.

Some of the pictures which are printed in the city papers are purely imaginary—notably one in the Cincinnati Times-Star, depicting a "scene in the wash-room of the Court House." in which four strapping fellows, friends of the prosecution," with coats off and big pistols buckled round 'em, are engaged in hand and face washing. There is no wash room in the Court House.

The jury was finally made up on Friday—the 13th day of the month. Some of the superstitious claim that the figure 13 is following Powers. He was nominated for Secretary of State on the 13th of July last; that 1,300 mountaineers were summoned to Frankfort before the murder of Goebel; that 13 men (including Powers) have been indicted for the conspiracy and that Powers is defended by 13 lawyers.

[News]

The potato crop in Owen is above the average.

Wheat is being threshed at a rapid rate, and the yield and quality of grain is reported to be above the average.

A large quantity of tobacco is being shipped from Owenton at present. The recent advance on the weed has caused our farmers to hurry their tobacco on to the market.

Through the influence of our Congressman, Hon. June W. Gayle, Mr. Archibald H. Jones, of Rockdale, this county, has been granted a pension of $8 per month, with 3 years back pay amounting to $300.

Many farmers were busy with their hay and wheat crops, and the crowd in town Monday was small for a court day. Auctioneer Ben D. Peak reports 200 cattle on the market. Good yearlings sold at 4 3-4 to 5 cents; common slow at 4 cents; heifers, 3½ to 4¼ cents; horses $60 to $100; sheep, common ewes, $3.25 to $4 per head. No mules on the market.—Georgetown Times.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 1, 1900. NO. 41

ZACK PHELPS, of Louisville, has resigned as a member of the Gold Democratic National Committee. In his letter to the committee, tendering his resignation, he says:

"Born and raised in Kentucky, I am, above all things, a sincere Kentuckian at heart. You will recall the fact that the events of the past six or eight months in Kentucky have given rise to political issues which appeal to loyal Kentuckians with a force and an eloquence which is stronger than that of the usual issues contained in party platforms.

"Our people are called upon at the next election to give approval or disapproval to an administration of affairs in this State which countenanced, if it did not direct and advise, the commission of one of the most cruel assassinations which the history of our country has ever known; they are called upon to say whether they approve or disapprove of the use of armed troops and Gatling guns on election day for the purpose of controlling the election; and of the use of State militia for the purpose of protecting the assassins and aiding them in their escape, as well as for the purpose of driving the duly accredited members of the General Assembly from the legislative halls of the State, and of denying and putting at naught the sacred right of the writ of habeas corpus; issues which seem to me to be paramount to any that may be raised upon mere questions of money or financial policies.

"I believe that these issues appeal directly to all the people of our State, and that, whether we be of the Republican, the Democratic, the Temperance, the Populist or the National Democratic parties, we, as Kentuckians should —and, indeed, if we love our State, must—stand together upon a platform which expresses disapproval of such courses; and this in such a positive way as will vindicate the fair name of our State before the nation."

Zack hits from the shoulder as he comes back to the party camp.

THE tobacco market has remained about the same figures for several weeks past. The rains during the latter part of July visited many sections of the tobacco district where the crop was suffering, and a great change for the better has resulted, and at present everything indicates a large crop of the weed for this fall, and this change in the condition of the crop may have an effect on the prices.

KING HUMBERT, of Italy, was assassinated Sunday evening in Monza, Italy. He was shot three times, one bullet piercing his heart, killing him instantly. Attempts to assassinate King Humbert had been made twice before. The assassin was captured, and gave the name of Angelo Bressi, and narrowly escaped being lynched.

THEY are having a redhot campaign down in South Carolina. The Dispensary Law is the issue, and Senator Tillman, father of the law, has arroused the ministers of the State by charging an "unholy alliance of preachers and barkeepers."

THE Democratic State Executive Committee will meet in Covington, to-morrow, when it will seek to adjust the trouble in the Seventh Congressional District.

EVERY Democrat who fails to vote next Monday will help the Republicans to decrease the majority of the Democratic candidate for State Senator.

THE first election of 1900 in Kentucky, is for State Senator in this the twenty-third district, and Democrats should not fail to vote that day.

THE peach crop in Southwestern Virginia, East Tennessee and Southeastern Kentucky is said to be immense.

But it will not be until after the election.

Dr. George C. Lorimer, in an article on "Living Beyond One's Means," says: "Some one has said that our children desire to begin where we leave off. Consequently if they can procure the elegancies of life in no other way they will secure them on the credit system and pay interest on a cut-throat chattel mortgage, a form of finance that would bankrupt the Rothschilds and lead to a panic on every exchange in the world. For it is a fact that the poor pay far higher for the accommodations they receive than do the rich for theirs. The not usual outcome of this kind of house keeping is that the debtor falls behind in his payments, is annoyed by duns, borrows a trifle from a friend to ward off the evil day, and at last abandons hope, losing furniture and all that has been paid as interest and principal.

"In happy contrast was the course adopted by a bright-eyed wife in Chicago. Calling at the house, I remarked, 'Your home looks very pretty.' She replied emphatically, 'It is pretty, for we have paid for everything in it.' Then she told me that before her marriage her intended requested her to select a carpet and he would buy it on trust; but that she stoutly refused, and assured him that the bare floor was good enough for her until he could afford to pay for what he purchased. I exclaimed, 'Bravo' and I am persuaded the little woman has made a good business man of her husband by this time."—Evangelical Messenger.

There is much said about the necessity of specializing in the poultry business, but the fact remains that nearly all the successful youltrymen are uniting the egg and market poultry branches. The necessity for keeping up the plant the year around and employing all the time and facilities seems to make it necessary to raise broilers and market chickens as well as layers. Besides, the broiler men who depend upon others to furnish satisfactory eggs for hatching are likely to be disappointed.—Farm and Home.

The horror of being buried alive, which numerous events of the past have shown to be a possibility, has resulted in the organization, in this city, of the American Society for the Prevention of Premature Burial. The society has formally applied for a charter and expects soon to demonstrate the usefulness of such a body.

It would appear on first thought as if the incorporators of the new organization are disposed to question the professional ability of the family physician, when pronouncing his patient dead, to determine satisfactorily as to whether life is really extinct. But the theory of the society, judging from the statements of some of its members, is that doctors and surgeons are apt to issue certificates of death carelessly or, in other words, without subjecting the body to an exhaustive physical test, in order to ascertain unmistakably the absence of life.

The proposed charter of the Society for the Prevention of Premature Burial provides that physicians certifying to the death of persons in the State of New York shall sign a certificate, prepared by the society, stipulating that the following tests, or as many of them as may be decided upon, have been applied to the body of the supposed dead without having produced any indication of life:

Two or more incisions of an artery.

The palm of the hand exposed to the flame of a candle not more than five inches away.

A mirror of crystal held to the lips and no sign of respiration.

It is also recommended that chapels be established for the repose of remains during a given number of hours.

In explaining the need of their society, the founders of A. S. P. P. B. quote the opinions of various doctors of eminence in this country and abroad to the effect that the instances of mistaken death are much more frequent than is generally supposed. The Doctor Regent of the Faculty of Paris is said to be authority for the alarming statement that one third or one half of those who die, or rather are pronounced dead, indeed, are still alive when buried. Another doctor expresses the belief that, out of every thousand persons who pass away, one is buried alive. It has been estimated that in England and Wales between 2,000 and 3,000 persons have been interred while life was still present. One physician declare that bodies buried before life is extinct live from half an hour to an hour after being placed in the coffin. Members of the organization cite cases in our own country and elsewhere of life being restored after patients have been declared dead and arrangements made for their burial.

In spite of the apparently strong arguments in favor of the long-named society, it is somewhat doubtful if the propositions of its promoters will appeal forcibly to the rank and file of the medical fraternity. Nevertheless, it can truthfully be said that most people would probably find more comfort in the thought that the question of their death was to be decided by heroic means before burial rather than by methods more or less untrustworthy afterward. Contemplation of awaking in one's coffin and having to depend upon the successful operation, automatic or otherwise, of some mechanical device to reveal the fact above ground, surely is not altogether agreeable.—New York Sun.

NEWPORT, KY., July 25th, 1900.
To the Democratic Voters of the Sixth Congressional District:

—I am a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress in this the Sixth Kentucky District, and would be grateful to you for your support at the Democratic primary election to be held in the respective counties of the district on Saturday, Sept. 22nd, 1900, the polls opening at 7 o'clock a. m., and closing at 4 o'clock p. m., said primary election being held for the purpose of nominating a Democratic candidate for Congress in this district. As your congressman for the past several years I have early and late most zealously worked for the interest of my district, and everything calculated to benefit the district I have sought to secure. It may be that I have not pleased everybody—no man could, but I have not purposely offended anyone, and in the discharge of my duties I have endeavored to do that which would be best for my district. Should I receive the nomination and election I shall be found as heretofore, ready and willing to serve my people to the best of my ability, the poorest having the same consideration at my hands as those of wealth and influence, and I will do my best to meet the approbation of all. My record as your congressman for the last several years is before you; if I have been efficient in securing recognition and aid for my district, you know it; if upon the other hand I have neglected your interests you are aware of this fact. I have done the best I could and it is for you to say if or not you prefer as your future Representative in Congress an experienced man or some one who must first learn before he can so well serve his people. Trusting that I may have your support at the primary Sept. 22nd.

I am respectfully yours.

"I had a severe attack of bilious colic, got a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, took two doses and was entirely cured," says Rev. A. A. Power, of Emporia, Kan. "My neighbor across the street was sick for over a week, had two of three bottles of medicine from the doctor. He used them for three or four days without any relief, then called in another doctor who treated him for some days and gave him no relief, so discharged him. I went over to see him the next morning. He said his bowels were in a terrible fix, that they had been running off so long that it was almost bloody flux. I asked him if he had tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and he said 'No.' I went home and brought him my bottle and gave him one dose, told him to take another dose in fifteen or twenty minutes if he did not find relief, but he took no more and was entirely cured." GALLATIN COUNTY.

(From Warsaw Independent.)

The rain Tuesday and Wednesday was of great benefit to vegetation in this quarter as it was the first "soaker" we have had since July 7th. Everything looks very promising.

Tuesday evening about 6:30 o'clock, a terrific wind storm visited here and wrought considerable destruction, tearing down trees and giving some of our people a severe fright. The storm appeared to be not over a half mile in width and followed the course of the river. Many of the fruit trees were stripped of their fruit. On the river it was a perfect gale and the rear end of the wharfboat cabin was wrecked, most of it being torn to pieces. There were quite a number of passengers on board the boat waiting for the steamer City of Pittsburg, but fortunately no one was hurt. Mrs. Willie Bledsoe who intended going to Cincinnati had her hat blown off into the river and lost, and had to postpone her trip. The City of Pittsburg was forced to the bank at Florence, but escaped injury. It was remarkable that no greater damage was done considering the velocity of the wind.

Last Saturday morning a terrible accident happened at McDanell Sons' saw mill in which Richard Boggs was instantly killed. A belt on one of the pulleys had gotten loose and the machinery was stopped to lace it up. Jesse Dyke, Isaac Wakefield, who is Boggs' uncle by marriage, John Salyers, and the deceased, were standing by the pulley fixing the belt. Mr. Dyke, who is the foreman, spoke about starting the machinery to pull up some logs and Mr. Boggs said certainly, there was no use waiting on the belt being repaired, and the machinery was started up again. It had been running for some time, when Mr. Boggs, who was standing with his back to a revolving belt and pulley, was suddenly thrown into the belt by it catching his loose shirt sleeve. In less than a minute his left arm was jerked from its socket and his body was being beat to pieces by the machinery against the heavy wood work. When he was thrown down his body struck Mr. Wakefield and hurled him to the ground giving him painful injuries. The machinery was stopped as quick as possible but young Boggs was dead. His arm, torn from his body, was with difficulty gotten out of the belt. Nearly every bone in his body was broken and his remains were a sickening sight. He never gave a single cry, and the terrible affair was over in less than a minute.

The most prosperous bootblack in New York has long since given up any active share in the work that made him a wealthy man, but he began in the customary way and worked for some years before the tide of fortune set so strongly in his favor that he became the owner of a racing stable. He conducts half a dozen establishments in various parts of the city, but direct supervision of them has recently been handed over to a superintendent, and the visits of the boss in these days are rare. His earnings last week on one race won by a horse from his own stable were $40,000, and as it would take a great many shines to make up that amount his greater interest in the racing stable may easily be understood. His wealth has made this young Italian a figure regarded almost with superstition by his poorer compatriots in this city. They have come to believe that he cannot fail, and are prepared to see him accumulate millions. Every boy who started in to earn his living as a bootblack has before his eyes the example of this man.—New York Sun.

Prevented a Tragedy.

Timely information given Mrs. George Long, of New Straitsville, O., saved two lives. A frightful cough had long kept her awake every night. She had tried many remedies and doctors but steadily grew worse until urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle wholly cured her; and she writes, this marvelous medicine also cured Mr. Long of a severe attack of pneumonia. Such cures are positive proof of its power to cure all throat, chest and lung troubles. Only 50c and $1. Guaranteed. Trial bottles free at McKim's, Burlington; Oelsner's, Florence and Crouch's, Union.

Some scalawag who had nothing else to do, or a very hard heart beneath the skin, was cruel enough to cut a long gash in Frank Cunningham's horse a few nights ago, from which the poor animal suffered considerably.—Williamstown Courier.

A meeting of the Democratic Executive Committee of the Sixth Congressional district was held at Walton. John M. Lassing, of this county as the District Committeeman, called the meeting to order and presided, and B. F. Menefee officiated as secretary. A resolution was adopted calling a primary election on the 22nd day of September, 1900, to be held in each precinct in the Sixth district between the hours of 7 a. m., and 4 p. m., standard time. All persons who were entitled to participate in the recent precinct meetings to select delegates to the gubernational convention at Lexington are entitled to vote, the committee prescribing the same qualifications as were set forth in the call by the State Central Committee. Each candidate is entitled to select officers of election and the committee will apportion the election officers as equally as possible. Each candidate is also entitled to a challenger at the voting places and an inspector of the count. All persons desiring to become candidates must make their intention known to the committee on or before August 22nd, 1900. Each candidate is required to pay his assessment on or before September 1st, 1900, and failing to do so, his name will not be printed on the ballots. The expense of holding the primary is estimated to be between $2,000 and $3,000. There are 196 precincts in the district and it is estimated that each precinct will cost $20. The vote shall be canvassed on Monday, September 24th, at 10 a. m., and the result certified by the county chairman of the Executive Committees, and the District Committee will meet at Walton on September 29th, and vote certified to by the various County Committees will be canvassed. In the event that only one person shall declare himself a candidate or that no one shall so designate himself the committee will meet and declare a candidate. The candidates announced are: Hon. A. S. Berry, of Newport, D. Linn Gooch, Mayor Jos. L. Rhinock, and perhaps B. F. Graziani, of Covington, and Judge John H. Westover, of Williamstown. All the candidates were present at the committee meeting Tuesday afternoon and were perfectly satisfied with the proposed method of nomination.

Half a dozen years ago the farmer considered the value of his corn crop to be practically terminated with the husking of the corn. What was left was worth a very small sum an acre as fodder. Many experiments, however, working along different lines have established the value of the by-products of the corn crop, and there is now a home market where the farmer can get from $3 to $5 a ton for corn stalks, so that their value is now from $6 to $12 an acre.

The American Agriculturist recently gave the following list of what can be made from corn stalks;

First, cellulose for packing cofferdams on our ships.

Second, pyroxyline varnish.

Third, cellulose for nitrating purposes for making smokeless powder and other explosives.

Fourth, as a packing material.

Fifth, for paper pulp and the various forms of paper made therefrom, both alone and mixed with other grades of paper stock.

Sixth, as a stock food made from the fine outer shells or shive of the corn stalks and also from the nodes or joints. The leaves or tassels also furnish a shredded or bale fodder.

Seventh, mixed feeds for stock containing fine ground shell or shives as a base and in addition thereto various nitrogenous materials and concentrated food substances, or blood, molasses, distillery and glucose refuse, sugar beet pulp, apple pomace and other by-products.

Dr. Talmage, who has been spending a few days in St. Petersburg, sends the following report of a discourse which will be helpful to those who have an appetite for literature and would like some rules to guide them in the selection of books and newspapers: Text, Acts 19:19: "Many of them also which used curious arts brought their books together and burned them before all men, and they counted the price of them and found it 50,000 pieces of silver."

Paul had been stirring up Ephesus with some lively sermons about the sins of that place. Among the more important results was the fact that the citizens brought out their bad books and in a public place made a bonfire of them. I see the people coming out with their arms full of Ephesian literature and tossing it into the flames. I hear an economist who is standing by saying: "Stop this waste. Here are $7,500 worth of books. Do you propose to burn them all up? If you don't want to read them yourselves, sell them and let somebody else read them." "No," said the people; "if these books are not good for us, they are not good for anybody else, and we shall stand and watch until the last leaf has burned to ashes. They have done us a world of harm, and they shall never do others harm." Hear the flames crackle and roar!

Well, my friends, one of the wants of the cities is a great bonfire of bad books and newspapers. We have enough fuel to make a blaze 200 feet high. Many of the publishing houses would do well to throw into the blaze their entire stock of goods. Bring forth the insufferable trash and put it into the fire and let it be known in the presence of God and angels and men that you are going to rid your homes of the overtopping and underlying curse of profligate literature.

The printing press is the mightiest agency on earth for good and for evil. The minister of the Gospel, standing in a pulpit, has a responsible position, but I do not think it is as responsible as the position of an editor or a publisher. At what distant point of time, at what far-out cycle of eternity, will cease the influence of a Henry J. Raymond, or a Horace Greeley, or a James Gordon Bennett, or a Watson Webb, or an Erastus Brooks, or a Thomas Kinsella? Take the overwhelming statistics of the circulation of the daily and weekly newspapers and then cipher if you can how far up and how far down and how far out reach the influences of the American printing press.

What is to be the issue of all this? I believe the Lord intends the printing press to be the chief means for the world's rescue and evangelization, and I think that the great last battle of the world will not be fought with swords and guns, but with types and presses, a purified and Gospel literature triumphing over, trampling down and crushing out forever that which is depraved. The only way to overcome unclean literature is by scattering abroad that which is healthful. May God speed the cylinders of an honest, intelligent, aggressive, Christian printing press.

I have to tell you that the greatest blessing that ever came to the nations is that of an elevated literature, and the greatest scourge has been that of unclean literature. This last has its victims in all occupations and departments. It has helped to fill insane asylums and penitentiaries and almshouses and dens of shame. The bodies of this infection lie in the hospitals and in the graves, while their souls are being tossed over into a lost eternity, an avalanche of horror and despair! The London plague was nothing to it. That counted its victims by thousands, but this modern pest has already shoveled its millions into the charnel house of the morally dead. The longest rail train that ever ran over the tracks was not long enough or large enough to carry the beastliness and the putrefaction which have been gathered up in bad books and newspapers in the last 20 years.

Now, it is amid such circumstances that I put a question of overmastering importance to you and your families. What books and newspapers shall we read? You see I group them together. A newspaper is only a book in a swifter and more portable shape, and the same rules which will apply to book reading will apply to newspaper reading. What shall we read? Shall our minds be the receptacle of everything that an author has a mind to write? Shall there be no distinction between the tree of life and the tree of death? Shall we stoop down and drink out of the trough which the wickedness of men has filled with pollution and shame? Shall we mire in impurity and chase fantastic will-o'the-wisps across the swamps, when we might walk in the blooming gardens of God? Oh, no! For the sake of our present and everlasting welfare we must make an intelligent and Christian choice.

Standing as we do, chin deep in fictitious literature, the question that young people are asking is: "Shall we read novels?" I reply: There are novels that are pure, good, Christian, elevating to the heart and ennobling to the life. But I still have further to say that I believe that 75 out of the 100 novels in this day are baleful and destructive to the last degree. A pure work of fiction is history and poetry combined. It is a history of things around us with the licenses and the assumed names of poetry. The world can never pay the debt which it owes to such writers of fiction as Hawthorne and McKenzie and Landon and Hunt and Arthur and others whose names are familiar to all. The follies of high life were never better exposed than by Miss Edgeworth. The memories of the past were never more faithfully embalmed than in the writings of Walter Scott. Cooper's novels are healthfully redolent with the breath of the seaweed and the air of the American forest. Charles Kingsley has smitted the morbidity of the world and led a great many to appreciate the poetry of sound health, strong muscles and fresh air. Thackeray did a grand work in caricaturing the pretenders to gentility and high blood. Dickens has built his own monument in his books, which are a plea for the poor and the anathema of injustice, and there are a score of novelistic pens to-day doing mighty work for God and righteousness.

Now, I say, books like these, read at right times and read in right proportion with other books, cannot help but be ennobling and purifying; but, alas, for the loathsome and impure literature that has come in the shape of novels, like a freshet overflowing all the banks of decency and common sense! They are coming from some of the most celebrated publishing houses. They are coming with recommendations of some of our religious newspapers. They lie on your center table to curse your children and blast with their infernal fires generations unborn. You find these books in the desk of the school miss, in the trunk of the young man, in the steamboat cabin, on the table of the hotel reception-room. You see a light in your child's room late at night. You suddenly go in and say: "What are you doing?" "I am reading." "What are you reading?" "A book." You look at the book. It is a bad book. "Where did you get it?" "I borrowed it." Alas, there are always those abroad who like to loan to your son or daughter a bad book! Everywhere, everywhere, an unclean literature. I charge upon it the destruction of 10,000 immortal souls, and I bid you wake up to the magnitude of the evil.

I charge you in the first place to stand aloof from all books that give false pictures of life. Life is neither a tragedy nor a farce. Men are not all either knaves or heroes. Women are neither angels nor furies. And yet if you depended upon much of the literature of the day you would get the idea that life, instead of being something earnest, something practical, is a fitful and fantastic and extravagant thing. How poorly prepared are that young man and woman for the duties of to-day who spent last night wading through brilliant passages descriptive of magnificent knavery and wickedness! The man will be looking all day long for his heroine in the office, by the forge, in the factory, in the counting room, and he will not find her, and he will be dissatisfied. A man who gives himself up to the indiscriminate reading of novels will be nerveless, inane and a nuisance. He will be fit neither for the store, nor the shop nor the field. A woman who gives herself up to the indiscriminate reading of novels will be unfitted for the duties of wife, mother, sister, daughter. There she is, hair disheveled, countenance vacant, cheeks pale, hands trembling, bursting into tears at midnight over the fate of some unfortunate lover; in the daytime, when she ought to be busy, staring by the half hour at nothing biting her finger nails into the quick. The carpet that was plain before will be plainer after having wandered through a romance all night long in tessellated halls of castles. And your industrious companion will be more unattractive than ever, now that you have walked in the romance through parks with plumed princesses or lounged in the arbor with the polished desperado. Oh, these confirmed novel readers! They are unfitted for this life, which is a tremendous discipline. They know not how to go through the furnaces of trial through which they must pass, and they are unfitted for a world where everything we gain we achieve by hard and long continued work.

Again, I charge you to stand off from all those books which corrupt the imagination and inflame the passions. I do not refer now to that kind of book which the villain has under his coat waiting for the school to get out, and then, looking both ways to see that there is no policeman around the block, offers the book to your son on his way home. I do not speak of that kind of literature, but that which evades the law and comes out in polished style, and with acute plot sounds the tocsin that rouses up all the baser passions of the soul. To-day, under the nostrils of the people, there is a fetid, reeking, unwashed literature, enough to poison all the fountains of public virtue and smite your sons and daughters as with the wing of a destroying angel, and it is time that the ministers of the Gospel blew the trumpet and rallied the forces of righteousness, all armed to this great battle against a depraved literature.

Again, abstain from those books which are apologetic of crime. It is a sad thing that some of the best and most beautiful bookbinders and some of the finest rhetoric have been brought to make sin attractive. Vice is a horrible thing anyhow. It is born in shame, and it dies howling in the darkness. In this world it is scourged with a whip of scorpions, but afterward the thunders of God's wrath pursue it across a boundless desert, beating it with ruin and woe. When you come to paint carnality, do not paint it as looking from behind embroidered curtains or through lattice of royal serngilo, but as writhing in the agonies of a city hospital. Cursed be the books that try to make impurities decent and crime attractive and hypocrisy noble! Cursed be the books that swarm with libertines and desperadoes, who make the brain of the young people whirl with villainy! Ye authors who write them, ye publishers who print them, ye booksellers who distribute them, shall be cut to pieces, if not by an aroused community, then at last by the hail of Divine vengeance, which shall sweep to the lowest pit of perdition all ye murderers of souls. I tell you, though you may escape in this world, you will be ground at last under the hoof of eternal calamities, and you will be chained to the rock, and you will have the vultures of despair clawing at your soul, and those whom you have destroyed will come around to torment you, and to pour hotter coals of fury upon your head, and rejoice eternally in the outcry of your pain, and the howl of your damnation. "God shall wound the hairy scalp of him that goeth on in his trespasses."

The clock strikes midnight. A fair form bends over a romance. The eyes flash fire. The breath is quick and irregular. Occasionally the color dashes to the cheek and then dies out. The hands tremble as though a guardian spirit were trying to shake the deadly book out of the grasp. Hot tears fall. She laughs with a shrill voice that drops dead at its own sound. The sweat on her brow is the spray dashed up from the river of death. The clock strikes four, and the rosy dawn soon after begins to look through the lattice upon the pale form that looks like a detained specter of the night. Soon in a madhouse she will mistake her ringlets for curling serpents and thrust her white hand through the bars of the prison and smite her head, rubbing it back as though to push the scalp from the skull, shrieking: "My brain! My brain!" Oh, stand off from that! Why will you go sounding your way amid the reefs when there is such a vast ocean in which you may voyage, all sail set?

Much of the impure pictorial literature is most tremendous for ruin. There is no one who can like good pictures better than I do. The quickest and most condensed way of impressing the public mind is by picture. What the painter does by his brush for a few favorites, the engraver does by his knife for the million. What the author accomplishes by 55 pages the artist does by a flash. The best part of a painting that costs $10,000 you may buy for ten cents. Fine paintings belong to the aristocracy of art. Engravings belong to the democracy of art. You do well to gather good pictures in your homes.

But what shall I say of the prostitution of art to the purposes of iniquity? These death warrants of the soul are at every street corner. They smite the vision of the young man with pollution. Many a young man buying a copy has bought his eternal discomfiture. There may be enough poison in one bad picture to poison one soul and that soul may poison ten, and ten fifty, and fifty hundreds and the hundreds thousands, until nothing but the measuring line of eternity can tell the height and depth and ghastliness and horror of the great undoing. The work of death that the wicked author does in a whole book the bad engraver may do on a half side of a pictorial. Under the guise of pure virtue the young man buys one of these sheets. He unrolls it before his comrades amid roars of laughter, but long after the paper is gone the result may, perhaps, be seen in the blasted imaginations of those who saw it. The queen of death holds a banquet every night, and these periodicals are the invitation to her guests.

Young man, buy not this moral strychnine for your soul! Pick not up this nest of coiled adders for your pocket! Patronize no news stand that keeps them. Have your room bright with good engravings, but for these outrageous pictures have not one wall, not one bureau, not one pocket. A man is no better than the picture he loves to look at. If your eyes are not pure your heart cannot be. At the newsstand one can guess the character of man by the kind of pictorial he purchases. When the devil fails to get a man to read a bad book, he sometimes succeeds in getting him to look at a bad picture. When Satan goes a-fishing he does not care whether it is a long line or a short line, if he only draws his victim in. Beware of lascivious pictorials, young man, in the name of Almighty God, I charge you.

Cherish good books and newspapers. Beware of bad ones. The assassin of Lord Russell declared that he was led into crime by reading one vivid romance. The consecrated John Angell James, than whom England never produced a better man, declared in his old age that he had never yet got over the evil effects of having for 15 minutes once read a bad book. But I need not go so far off. I could tell you of a comrade who was great hearted, noble and generous. He was studying for an honorable profession, but he had an infidel book in his trunk, and he said to me one day: "De Witt, would you like to read it?" I said: "Yes, I would." I took the book and read it only for a few minutes. I was really startled with what I saw there, and I handed the book back to him and said: "You had better destroy that book." No, he kept it. He read it. He reread it. After awhile he gave up religion as a myth. He gave up God as a nonentity. He gave up the Bible as a fable. He gave up the church of Christ as a useless institution. He gave up good morals as being unnecessarily stringent. I have heard of him but twice in many years. The time before the last I heard of him he was a confirmed inebriate. The last I heard of him he was coming out of an insane asylum—in body, mind and soul an awful wreck. I believe that one infidel book killed him for two worlds.

RENOMINATION OF BRYAN.

What It Means and Why He Has Become the Democracy's Chosen Leader.

The renomination of William J. Bryan is a notable honor to a remarkable man. This will be the judgment of every intelligent American who examines Mr. Bryan's career in the light of history, and who emancipates himself from all prejudice for or against the candidate and the great party which twice in succession has made him its leader.

Mr. Bryan entered his party's national convention of 1896 as a member of a contesting delegation. As tested by the standards of his organization which prevailed along to that time, he was marked with the taint of partisan heterodoxy. The idea for which he stood—the unlimited coinage of silver at a ratio which would have made the intrinsic value of a silver dollar half that of the gold dollar, and which, consequently, as a large majority of the people of the country believed, and believe still, would drive gold out of circulation, precipitate the country to the silver basis, and disastrously disturb all values—would, if sanctioned by the convention, make a break with the traditions of a hundred years of democratic history.

Moreover, presented to the same convention were the names of older and (as judged by the canons of that day) greater soldiers of the silver cause. Richard P. Bland, the pioneer of the silver coinage movement in congress, was urged by a large element of his party for the presidential nomination. Another faction favored Horace Boies, also a silver champion, who had carried the republican stronghold of Iowa for governor, and who had made an efficient and popular official. Senator Joseph S. C. Blackburn, of Kentucky, a veteran fighter on the silver side in both branches of congress, had some powerful friends in the convention, and received many votes for the nomination. Yet this contesting delegate, who was admitted to a seat by the favor of the convention, but whose name was new to a majority of the delegates at the time, defeated, through the magic of a speech which put the feelings of his hearers into burning phrase, men who had been leaders of his cause long before his name was heard of outside the ward in which he lived, and carried off the convention's prize.

Other men than Mr. Bryan, whose names were not previously coupled with the candidacy, were nominated for president. But Mr. Bryan had no military glory, nor was his name, at the time the convention of 1896 met, connected conspicuously with any great reform or cause, for he had made no record during his short service in congress which could single him out from the roll of ordinary members on the silver side. What, then, was the secret of Mr. Bryan's power over his party? It was this: In his speech to the convention he gave the idea which for years had been struggling for expression in his party more striking expression than had any any other of its orators. His party declared for the "free and unlimited coinage of both silver and gold"—putting silver before gold for emphasis—at the 16 to 1 ratio, "without waiting for the aid or consent of any other nation." This meant that compromise and equivocation in that party on that issue was ended.

Mr. Bryan's proclivities coincided with his party's new mood. His physical traits, moreover, lent power to his moral attributes.

What are the causes of Mr. Bryan's hold on the affections of his party in 1900, aside from those which gave him the candidacy in 1896? His robust sincerity, which even his partisan enemies have never questioned; his strength as a campaigner, as attested by the fact that, in the most exciting canvass since 1860, and with hundreds of thousands of democrats supporting Palmer or McKinley, he polled nearly 1,000,000 more votes than Cleveland gained in his tidal-wave campaign four years earlier; and the belief of his party, rank and file, that he is, on the whole, the best exponent of his party's position on the issues of the finances, trusts and anti-Imperialism.

Upon what does Mr. Bryan's party base its hope of carrying the country in 1900? Upon analogy, upon chance, and upon a belief that its cause is inherently strong with the people.

In every election for president in which the same candidates confronted each other twice in succession the nominee who was beaten in the first instance won in the second. Jefferson, who was defeated by John Adams in 1796, defeated Adams in 1800. Jackson, who was left behind by John Quincy Adams in the contest which went to the house of representatives in 1824, was far ahead of Adams in the electoral college in 1828. William Henry Harrison, who was easily beaten by Van Buren in 1836, just as easily defeated Van Buren in 1840. Cleveland, who was 65 in the minority in the electoral college of 1888 in the contest against Benjamin Harrison, had a majority of more than double that figure, or 132, over Harrison in 1892. New York and Indiana have been swinging alternately from one party to the other in successive canvasses for more than a quarter of a century, and both were carried by the republicans In 1896. Four years of power for each party has been the rule for several successive presidential terms, and it is the democracy's "turn" to win in 1900.

These considerations of analogy and similitude have doubtless impressed themselves on the minds of the democratic leaders. Now for the hopes based upon chance.

The panic of 1837, which began a few weeks after Van Buren entered power, was one of the causes of his defeat in 1840. That of 1873, in the republican period, helped to reduce the republican majority in the electoral college in 1876 to one. The monetary convulsion of 1893, which started about a month after Cleveland went to the white house a second time, helped to roll up the majority which was cast against his party in 1896. The Homestead strike in the summer of 1892, in which many persons were killed and much property destroyed, in the last year of Harrison's service, was one of the reasons for the republican "apathy" which was noticed in that campaign, and for the republican defeat which came at the polls. A panic is decidedly improbable this year, but labor troubles and crop failures are always among the possibilities, and any sort of a calamity invariably hits the party in power.

All of these reasons, coupled with the conviction which is doubtless honestly entertained that their policy will, upon presentation, appeal with force to the majority of the people, together with the fact that it is the American practice for each side to make an active fight in every election, whatever the chances may seem to be, explain the hope of Mr. Bryan and his supporters that they will carry the country in 1900.—Charles M. Harvey, in Leslie's Weekly.

THE REAL MOTIVE.

Troubles in China Being Used by the Administration to Hide Home Affairs.

It is much to be doubted whether the rationale of imperialism is understood, even at this late date, by the masses of the American people; for the events which led up to the policy of expansion in the orient seem, at the first glance, to be in the nature of a decree of fate. Nevertheless, a little reflection will serve to show that the republican party has availed itself of Dewey's victory in Manila bay, in order to hold public opinion at arm's length, while domestic policies of the most far-reaching import were being developed to their logical conclusion.

The device is by no means new. When Napoleon III. was menaced by the searching scrutiny of the people's conscience, he instinctively had recourse to the scheme of an empire in Mexico. When that bright dream faded, the duel with Germany followed in the inexorable logic of things. Thus the blood and treasure of France were wasted, in the vain hope that a foul crime against free government might be blotted from the memory of men. After this disastrous fashion has despotism found itself compelled to act, in every land and in every age. Freedom alone stands in no need of a screen.

In the present case, the title of no dynasty is in question, but the justice of a system of policy is under examination at the judgment bar of conscience. The corporations have grown until they overshadow the government which created them, while wealth finds increasing immunity from its proper burdens. If the problem should be presented in its naked form, the popular verdict would be a foregone conclusion. The instinct of self-preservation thus compels the republican party to becloud its errors of omission and commission with issues which should have no place in our politics.

At the outset, it was the evident intention to treat the Filipinos as we have treated the Cubans, but the representatives of the trusts saw their opportunity, and the instructions to our envoys at Paris were so changed as to convert the islands into spoils of conquest. Indeed, the apostasy would have taken the form of a repudiation of the nation's pledge to Cuba, if the moral fiber of the American people had been less fine.

It thus happens that a party whose original shibboleth was human freedom finds itself the champion of the doctrines that might makes right. At such infinite cost do parties or men palter with the veritics. It is the first step that costs; all the others are easy and, indeed, inevitable. "Facilis descensus Averni."

It is, however, clear that President McKinley's ruse will have no greater measure of success than the third Napoleon's. The plan for the retention of Cuba has already met with a failure so complete that even the republicans, in their platform of 1900, have been compelled to announce their unequivocal recognition of the national obligation. In the fullness of time, the Filipinos will receive the same full measure of justice, and America will once more stand forth as the one sincere advocate of the principle that all just government has its origin in the consent of the governed.

In order that this supreme result may be achieved, it behooves all right-thinking Americans to exercise their full measure of power, by tongue, pen and ballot. After all, public opinion is the molding force in this government. The spokesmen of injustice and greed may wield a mighty influence, for a season, but the sober second thought of the masses is invariably fatal to all schemes which lead up to the enslavement of the many for the benefit of the few. The great wrongs of the present time must be righted; but we must do justice to others, in order that we may come into our own. Imperialism is but the cloak of monopoly, and should, therefore, be torn away with a ruthless hand.

——Imperialism is not a myth. It is not a bugbear to frighten people. It is actual peril which the nation must face courageously and fearlessly grapple with if free institutions are to be maintained and preserved. The fight on the democratic side is for the people and their republic; on the republican side is is for elevation of the dollar above character.—Dubuque Herald.

HEAVIEST YEAR YET.

Exports from United States Amount to $180,000,000.

American Beef Finding an Enlarged Market Abroad—Hog Products Show No Marked Increases for the Year.

Exports of provisions from the United States during the fiscal year just ended exceed those of any previous year. The total is $180,000,000, thus averaging $500,000 a day, and surpassing the phenomenal record achieved by that record-breaking year, 1899. For the 11 months ending with May, 1900, the total exports of provisions, including meat and dairy products, is $166,707,834, against $159,676,603 for the corresponding period of the fiscal year 1899. Of this large sum the principal items are:

Lard, with a total export during the 11 months of $38,691,000; bacon, $35,478,000; hams, $18,192,000; pork, $9,459,000; oleomargarine, $9,409,000; and beef, $7,655,000.

American beef is finding an enlarged market abroad, especially in the United Kingdom, France, Africa and the orient. Comparing the exports of the 11 months ending with May, 1900, with those of the same months of 1899, it is found that the United Kingdom increases its purchases of canned beef from $1,959,000 to $2,937,000; France, from $31,057 to $117,254; while Germany shows a slight decrease, the value falling from $281,942 in 1899 to $241,568, representing a shrinkage of 500,000 pounds in the volume of exports.

To Asia and Oceanica the increase was from $158,000 to 180,000, and to Africa, from $437,722 to $1,033,700, representing an increase in quantity of export of more thau 6,000,000 pounds over 1899.

In the export of fresh beef the principal increases are to the United Kingdom, with a total of $24,113,970, as against $20,830,949 in 1899, and to the West Indies, which took in 1900 a total of $389,039, as against less than one-tenth of that amount in 1899, when the total was $34,027. In hog products, including pork, hams, bacon and lard, no marked increases occur, the figures for 1900 scarcely equaling those of the previous year. It is gratifying to observe, however, that the export trade in cheese is showing evidences of revival, the total for the 11 months showing an increase of 6,000,000 pounds, representing a value of over $1,000,000 over that of last year.

NEW SPECIMENS FOR MUSEUM.

Interesting Indian Relics Secured for the Field Columbian Institution.

S. C. Simms, assistant curator of the anthropological department of the Field Columbian museum, Chicago, is planning to place many new specimens in the E. E. Ayer hall. Mr. Simms said:

"I have received word from Dr. George Dorsey, curator of this department, that he would leave Spokane for Chicago in a few days. As soon as he reaches here we shall open several large boxes containing articles collected among the Indians in Arizona, Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, Colorado, California, Oregon and Washington. In the main they consist of specimens from tribes heretofore unrepresented in the museum.

"C. L. Owen and J. A. Burt have been making excavations near Orihi, the home of the Hopi tribe. Discoveries of great scientific value have been made there. Dr. Dorsey will sail for France July 28, where he goes as one of the two American delegates to the international congress of anthropologists at Paris during a fortnight in August."

EFFECT OF THE PRESIDENTIAL POLICY.

Attitude of the Administration on the Chinese Affair—The Natural Result of Imperialism—The Democratic Declaration on Issues Emphasized.

[Special Correspondence.]

The practical certainty that the foreign inhabitants of Peking have been murdered turns the eyes of the country on Washington, to see what course the administration will take. Naturally the indignation over the outrage causes various expressions of strong feeling, but it is generally recognized that the administration is in a peculiar position. Almost any step that it takes will expose it to criticism from the vast number of people who have been viewing with alarm the policy of imperialism.

It is unofficially given out in administration circles that troops will be rushed to China and that severe punishment will be meted out to the nation which has been guilty of allowing the murder of our minister and many American citizens.

Still, it is explicitly pointed out that no war will be declared against China, no matter how many troops it takes to carry out the intentions of the administration, and that Chinamen will not be deported from this country while hostilities are going on.

This sounds very much like the administration's way of doing things. It is now carrying on one unauthorized war in the Philippines under another term. It is doing in the Philippines what it denounced in 1898 as "criminal aggression."

It is said just now that the administration has no intention whatever of helping in the partition of China, but will only act with the other powers to punish that nation for the attack upon our citizens. But this assurance will not go very far with those who have watched McKinley's course in the last two years. The administration has a very optimistic and facile way of minimizing its imperialistic performances beforehand.

On the Administration.

Ex-Congressman James Hamilton Lewis puts the whole Chinese trouble squarely up to the administration. He says:

"I charge the Chinese outbreak directly upon the republican administration. It is the direct result of the announcement made by this government that the United States intended to enter into the division of China. Since these assertions China has viewed us as invaders. Its assaults upon us are because of that feeling of our hostility to them.

"During the last 15 years wherever missionaries have been killed it has developed that they had violated some sacred ritual of the Chinese faith. Other nations besides the Chinese visit the offender with death for such desecrations.

"It is apparent for the first time in the present generation that the Chinese government has given sanction to an assault upon Americans and foreigners generally.

"This is because our missionaries and ambassadors were regarded as the advance guard of a force determined to appropriate the Chinese empire."

Mr. Lewis goes on to point out that so long as we kept aloof from alliances with the continental powers the Chinese government treated our people with consideration and gave us trade privileges.

It was only when this administration was beguiled by England into an understanding that she would be helped in her policy of despoiling China that the trouble began.

Among others Mr. Lewis quotes ex-Minister Denby, while a member of the Philippine commission, speaking for the administration, as saying that the time had come "when we should join other powers in appropriating a respectable sphere of China to ourselves."

Senator Lodge recently said that our government should "bear its responsibilities in China and participate with the nations of the world in the division of that empire from the base of the Philippines."

Fruits of Imperialism.

Mr. Lewis remarks that we are now reaping the fruits of the harvest sown by this administration while under the influence of its dream of imperialism. He says:

"We must take one of two courses: Humiliatingly step out of China with dead Americans unavenged, or proceed to revenge the infamy by marching our armies into a country which can band together a standing army equal to every man, woman and child we have in the United States and still not begin to exhaust their surplus."

It is clear that if war is to be made in China we are both unprepared and unable to reach a victory, while losing the trade because we have made enemies of the people.

The question is, are our people still willing to take the woeful result which the policy of the administration, as proposed in the Philadelphia convention and admitted by the president in his speech at Canton, inevitably precipitates upon us? Is it to be empire of war and bankruptcy or republic of peace and prosperity? It seems to be up to the administration.

As if to emphasize imperialism as the most important issue, the news comes from the Philippines that Gen. MacArthur not only cannot spare any troops from the Philippines, but that he actually needs 100,000 men to subdue the insurrection. The Filipinos are better armed and in better shape to fight for their independence than they were a year ago.

The net result of the Chinese trouble so far seems to be the loss of life among American citizens in Peking, the defeat of the Ninth regiment, acting with the allied forces at Tientsin, and the disabling of that splendid battleship, the Oregon. It has been known for months that the administration would be glad to wash its hands of the Philippines, only that its understanding with Great Britain made the islands seem an available base of supplies in case of trouble such as is happening in China now. Of course it rather upsets the plan not to be able to spare any troops from the Philippines.

The Paramount Issue.

Circumstances combine to emphasize the democratic declaration that imperialism is the "paramount issue," and of course militarism goes with it. Hanna, Bliss and Hecht are busily engaged in mapping out the republican campaign on new lines. They had earnestly hoped that they could force the democrats to make the fight on the issue of 16 to 1, and thus divert attention from imperialism and the trusts. But it cannot be done. The more honest section of the republican press is urging that the financial question was put into the background by the action of the recent republican congress, and that the administration forces are making an absurd spectacle of themselves by trying to put up a man of straw.

Afraid of the Record.

As Chairman Richardson, of the democratic congressional committee, remarked the other day: "The republicans appear to be afraid to make the campaign on the record of this administration." They feel that the less the people know about the facts the better will be the republican chances for success.

The democrats are putting up a most vigorous congressional campaign from the Washington headquarters. There is every prospect that the next house will have a democratic majority. There were many things in the record of the recent republican congress that aroused the resentment of good citizens. The attempt to put congress above the constitution in the Porto Rican matter was perhaps the gravest affront. In many close districts the republicans have practically given up the fight and concede the places to the democrats.

ADOLPH PATTERSON.

DISTRUST OF McKINLEY.

Best Minds in the Republican Party See the Weakness of the Administration.

If the average observer were asked to name the three ablest and most respected republicans now living, whom would he name? William McKinley, Mark Hanna and Theodore Roosevelt? Not if he were honest and thoughtful. Or would he name Thomas C. Platt, "Mat" Quay and Henry Cabot Lodge?

Undoubtedly, a thoughtful observer would select ex-President Harrison, ex-Speaker Reed and Senator Hoar of Massachusetts, if called upon to decide. These men, although widely different, are the representatives of the best ability and character in the republican party of to-day.

Gen. Harrison was his own man every minute that he occupied the white house. There was no Hanna over him. He impressed himself greatly upon his fellow-citizens as a man of sincerity and force of character. Quite naturally, Gen. Harrison has little respect for McKinley, for whose administration the ex-president scarcely attempts to conceal his contempt. The other day, talking to an interviewer, Gen. Harrison said that he "did not think that the republican party had pursued the rightful course with regard to the trust question, and thought the administration was playing fast and loose with the people on the matter. He regards the administration, however, as having been a wise one for the most part, but admits that several grievous mistakes have been made in handling the reins of government." When not talking for publication, he has damned the present administration with much fainter praise. He is known to take no stock in the Philippine and Porto Rico business.

Thomas B. Reed, the brilliant ex-speaker, whose equal in mental equipment the McKinley outfit cannot produce, is notoriously out of sympathy with McKinleyism, and left public life rather than be compelled to defend the weak administration for which he feels so heartily a contempt.

Senator Hoar, the "old man eloquent," is constrained, by affection for the party whose cradle he rocked, to stand by the ticket; but everybody knows that neither his heart nor his brain is in the cause.

How can McKinleyism, distrusted if not despised by the best minds in the republican party, expect the support of the people, or—most ridiculous of all—appeal for democratic support on "patriotic" grounds?—Albany Argus.

——The handling of the revenues has been such that the piling up of surpluses in the vaults is now threatening a scarcity of funds in circulation for commercial needs this fall, which can only be relieved by using these unnecessary taxes in the open market to purchase bonds at a big premium, and thus enrich the bond speculator at the expense of the masses. Either this or a virtual panic now confronts the country and is the visible and tangible answer to the boasts of "skillful financiering" which republican organs and platforms are so boldly making.—Houston Post.

——When the trusts read the reports of Mr. McKinley's Canton speech of acceptance they can exclaim with literal truthfulness: "Never touched us!"—St. Louis Republic.

Family Ties Exhausted.

At one of the great department stores the other day a young man was indulging in airy persiflage with the pretty shop girl behind the counter while waiting for his change. "What a wonderful place you have here!" he said. "What do you sell?" "Everything," was the reply. "Everything?" was the incredulous comment. "What do you mean by everything?" "Just what I say," responded the girl. "Anything you want we can supply you with here." "Oh, you can, eh?" commented the pretentious Alexander. "Well, let me look at some family ties." Without remark, but with demure countenance, the girl went away, but in a moment returned and said: "I am sorry, but the manager tells me that we are just out of family ties, owing to the great demand. Perhaps you'd like to look at some family jars?" The young man decided, however, that the latter was an undesirable commodity, and he would have none of it.—N. Y. Tribune.

World to End This Year.

This is the recent decision of one of the prominent societies of the world, but the exact day has not yet been fixed upon, and while there are very few people who believe this prediction, there are thousands of others who not only believe, but know that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the best medicine to cure dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, biliousness or liver and kidney troubles. A fair trial will certainly convince you of its value.

The Seat of War.

"My husband is so nice about explaining these war terms to me. I know I aggravate him awfully, too, sometimes. Why, only think, I had to ask him this morning what the seat of war was for?"

"Yes?"

"Wasn't it foolish? But he's so patient. The idea that I didn't have sense enough to see that it is for the standing army to use when it gets tired!"—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Palmer's Lotion Soap possesses all the medicinal properties of this Lotion and should always be used in connection with it in preference to any other soap. O--I--C

When a preparation has an advertised reputation that is world-wide, it means that preparation is meritorious. If you go into a store to buy an article that has achieved universal popularity like Cascarets Candy Cathartic for example, you feel it has the endorsement of the world. The judgment of the people is infallible because it is impersonal. The retailer who wants to sell you "something else" in place of the article you ask for, has an axe to grind. Don't it stand to reason? He's trying to sell something that is not what he represents it to be. Why? Because he expects to derive an extra profit out of your credulity. Don't you see through his little game? The man who will try to sell you a substitute for Cascarets is a fraud. Beware of him! He is trying to steal the honestly earned benefits of a reputation which another business man has paid for, and if his conscience will allow him to go so far, he will go farther. If he cheats his customer in one way, he will in another and it is not safe to do business with him. Beware of the Cascaret substitutor! Remember Cascarets are never sold in bulk but in metal boxes with the long tailed "C" on every box and each tablet stamped C. C. C.

The Unheard-Of Expected.

"George, what does a presidential candidate do when he receives the committee to notify him of his nomination?"

The summer's awful heat will kill those not fit to resist it—those whose bodies are full of poison because they have neglected their bowels.

The victims of sunstroke, or of any of the other terrible dangers of summer—diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera morbus—are always those who have been careless about keeping clean inside, and as a result have their blood full of rotten filth breeding disease germs and their bodies ready with weakness to succumb to the hot spell. Dizziness, heat headaches, sick stomachs, sticky oozing ill-smelling sweats, restless nights, terrible pains, gripes and cramps in the bowels, sudden death on the street, all result from this neglect.

Keep yourself clean, pure and healthy inside, disinfected as it were, with CASCARETS CANDY CATHARTIC, the greatest antiseptic bowel tonic ever discovered and you will find that every form of summer disease will be effectively

Last Saturday manager Rouse took an aggregation of Burlington base ball talent to the grounds between Hebron and Constance, to meet the team from the former place. The game began on time in the presence of a large crowd of spectators, enthusiastic rooters for the Hebron boys. Tanner was on the slab for Hebron, and seemed to be able to make a Burlingtonite fan out at his own pleasure. Gordon caught him. The Burlington team never got into the game, as is shown by the lop-sided score, and seeing certain defeat in store for the team Brady floated the ball over the plate and the Hebron boys did some terrific stick work. Following is the line-up of the two teams, Hebron winning by a score of 22 to 9:

The law provides that in case an officer does not appear for duty in thirty minutes after time for opening the polls, the officers present shall select a person to fill the vacancy.

Thursday, July 26th, 1900, was a day that will be long remembered by the members of Union Presbyterian church. They had arranged to have a reunion at the Richwood Manse and the day was perfect; the fifty six souls present were in unity of spirit and love for their pastor and his family, and, but for the ever encroaching thought of the coming separation, the occasion would have been one of unalloyed pleasure. As it was, the fact of the perfect harmony and confidence that has existed between the Rev. W. H. Davis and his charge at Union during his seven years stay with us, was such a source of sweet comfort to all, the sadness of the day was almost forgotten. Our deep sense of loss is relieved by the knowledge of the great gain to Mr. Davis and his lovely family. They go to Davenport, North Carolina, near Charlotte, a center of education and culture, where the advantages (as well as salary) far exceed those offered here. The loving prayer of the Union church attend them. The day at the Manse was made more pleasant by the presence of Mr. and Mrs. Fielding Dicker, Sr., Mrs. J. S. Matson, Mrs. Emma Dickey Hughes, and Mr. Fielding Dickey, Jr., and family, all members of Richwood church. These friends were asked to meet with us, because of their work in the Union church, when it was a struggling few, who would have been compelled to give up the struggle, but for their encouragement and substantial aid. The resignation of Mr. Davis leaves Richwood, Union and Burlington without a pastor, and it is hoped that these churches will harmoniously unite in prayerful effort to secure a pastor to succeed him. In the interim, it will be well with us, if we trust in God and "forsake not the assembling of ourselves together."

Some of our high officials and wouldbe officers are encouraging the colored race to build on the streets and to damage someone else's property besides their own. This is very encouraging to stick to party and vote for men who trust to protect us in their sworn duty, and receive evil for good. Keep on, you will soon have a party of some kind hereafter if not the same.

The weeds have grown very tall in George Biyth's pond, this summer, and he concluded to cut them with his mowing machine, not thinking there was enough water in the pond to interfere with the work, but before he made the first crossing he had changed his mind as to the quantity of water on hand, for his horses were about ready to swim, while he stood up on the machine seat to avoid drowning. One swath across the pond is all that George cut.

Pollock, that wonderful writer, who dipped his pen in the sunlight of inspiration, touched the golden harp of imagination, and wrote "Course of Time," tells us how Adam wandered beneath the orange trees in lonesomeness, and sat beside the babbling brooks in deep meditation, looking beyond the confines of Paradise for something he did not possess, a companion for life, and how time rolled on to bring him Eve with happiness supreme and joy forever. Well, ever since that eventful day down to the present time, men have been getting lonesome, and have looked forward with joyful anticipations to the hour when some handsome young woman should agree to journey through life with them as a companion. Harry Tanner was no exception, and he looked forward to the time when Miss Etta Busby should become his companion for life, and on the 25th of July he realized the dreams of his earliest youth (for they were sweethearts even when school children) by taking her as his wife, in the presence of a number of friends at the home of Rev. Lentz. The bride was charming in cream organdy and lace with bride's roses. The groom was handsome in conventional black. After the ceremony at high noon, the happy couple repaired to the home of the groom's parents, where a most bountiful feast had been prepared, and where a large number of relatives and friends had assembled to extend congratulations. The guests were J. M. Utz and wife, E. H. Suyder aud family, Frank Snyder and family, J. P. Snyder and daughter, E. H. Blaukenbeker, George Rouse and family, R. D. Rouse and wife, L. L. Tanner and family, M. M. Tanner, Mrs. H. L. Tanuer, Mrs. Frances Tanner, Mr. Clutterbuck and family. Miss Emma Welch, Rev. Lentz and wife, W. N. Surface and wife, Willie Busby, Misses Mattie Syuder, E. Rouse, Jennie Snyder, and B. A. Tanner. Libbie Ingram and Lewis Cleag, and Dora Black and C. Blaukenbeker were the attendants. The following is a list of the presents: Stunterbeck family, of Covington, silver castor; Dora Black, cream spoon; Mrs. L. H. Busby, silver tobie spoons: W. N. Surface and wife, silver fruit basket; L. L. Tanuer, pair of towels; J. M. Utz and wife, pair of sheets; Virgie Snyder, napkins; E. H. Snyder, table cloth and napkins; Cecil Tanner, jelly plate; Geo. Rouse and wife, cracker jar; Gladys Rouse, pepper box; A. D. Rouse and wife, berry set; Mrs. L. H. Tanner, pair of towels; Maud Blankenbeker, jelly dish; Martha B. Utz, berry dish; Lewis Cleag, sugar bowl; Frank Smith and wife, vase; M. A. Tanner, $5 in gold. Thursday Mr. and Mrs. Tanner, and their attendants, visited Cincinnati, taking in all suburban points of interest, including the Zoo. The young folks have the Recorder's best wishes for their success in life.

Col. David B. Henderson, speaker of the federal house of representatives, is spending the summer with Mrs. Henderson in the Adirondacks. Later he will leave for Paris to visit the exposition.

The roses in the famous wooded island at the World's fair grounds in Chicago are said to be just as fine now as they were during the fair. Planted in 1892, the year before the fair, they are still wonderfully beautiful. They form one of the memories of the fair that will linger long in the minds of those who saw them.

It is always difficult to secure a quorum in the New York city council. At a recent meeting the necessary number of members failed to attend, and the president was about to send the sergeant-at-arms after some absenters, when it was learned that the officer named was himself absent, and that he had not attended a meeting for months.

Two thousand Chicago saloons will go out of business on October 1. Computations made justify the assertion, which means that the revenue of the city will fall off $1,000,000 from that source alone. It is said that the rise in the price of beer is the principal reason for the falling off. At present there are 5,700 saloons in Chicago, which is 1,300 less than five years ago.

M. P. Castle, of London, has sold his collection of European postage stamps for $150,000, which is believed to be the biggest price ever paid. Now that the Orange Free State has been taken off the map as an independent republic, collectors are paying as much as $25 for a single stamp of that government, and the price is rising. A full set of Transvaal stamps would now cost about $3,000.

Miss French ("Octave Thanet") possesses a novel accomplishment, rare among writers. She has remarkable ability as a mimic and is able to carry on impromptu a conversation between two or more imaginary persons, modifying her voice to represent different characters. Indeed, the dramatic element is so strongly developed in Miss French that had she not found success with the pen she would have won fame as a comedienne.

Although Mary is believed to be the commonest of the names of women, the wife of only one president was so named—Mary Todd Lincoln. There was two Marthas (both from Virginia), Martha Washington and Martha Jefferson; two Abigails, the wives of Presidents Fillmore and John Adams, and two Elizas, Mrs. Monroe and Mrs. Johnson. Of the two wives of the other presidents no two had the same Christian names.

Among the missionaries in China of whom news is anxiously awaited there are no less than eighteen graduates and former students of the University of Michigan, thirteen women and five men. Of these five are, or were, if they have not been killed, in Peking, including Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. King, both instructors in the University of Peking and classmates at Ann Arbor. Most of the graduates are medical missionaries.

Queen Victoria has at her disposal when she wishes to take a ride innumerable carriages. Of these the coronation coach is first. This carriage is unknown to the present generation, as it has never left the royal mews at Buckingham palace since 1861. It is lovely, but cumbersome, was designed by George III., and every portion is richly decorated and gilded. Outside its panels are pictures painted by noted artists.

A good example of the way the Boer war has divided South African families is found in that of which Montagu White, the Boer envoy to this country, is a member. He is known for his loyalty to the Boer cause. His brother is a lieutenant in the Strathcona horse. He served in the Natal mounted police in the last Zulu war and then became a member of the Canadian mounted police, in which he was at the outbreak of the present war.

No nation on the face of the earth compares with the United States as a fruit-eating country. Not only does this country consume enormous amounts of fresh fruits in the shape of apples, pears, peaches and small fruits, like berries, but the amount preserved by various processes is far in excess of the amount used in European countries. Other nations are now giving the matter the attention it deserves. Especially is this so in Germany, where the question has been investigated for the German Agricultural society.

A NEW IMPERIAL EDICT.

Every Foreigner in China Must Be Put to Death, Declares the Emperor.

The Decree Says Officials Will Answer With Their Lives For Failure to Execute These Orders.

All the Aliens in Pao Ting Fu Were Murdered, Including, Forty British French and Americans.

A Thousand Converts Have Been Massacred at Kwang Ping Fu—Li Hung Chang Instructed to Lead Chinese Troops.

London, July 30.—The Shanghai correspondent of the [illegible] says:

"A new imperial edict promulgated Sunday evening urgently orders all viceroys and provincial governors to endeavor to negotiate peace with the powers, whose ministers are held as hostages pending the result of the overtures for the abandonment of hostilities against China.'

"The viceroys are also commanded to guard their territories vigilantly against attack and to prevent, by all means in their power, the advance of the foreign troops, especially along the Yang Tse Kiang. The decree says that the officials will answer with their lives for any failure to execute these orders.

"Commands are also given that not a single foreigner shall be allowed to escape from the interior, where there are still fully 2,000 Europeans connected with missionary work, in isolated situations.

PRINCE TUAN OF CHINA.
(Chief of the Boxers and Arch Enemy of All Foreigners.)

"When the governor of Shan-Tung communicated to the consuls the imperial decree of July 24 he omitted important passages addressed to Li Hung Chang:

"'It is admittedly inadvisable to kill all the ministers, but is equally unwise to send them to Tien-Tsin. It will be much wiser to keep the survivors at Peking as hostages.

"'You are commanded to hasten to Peking. You are incurring imperial displeasure by delays. You have been appointed viceroy of Chi Li because, with your military experience, you will successfully lead the imperial armies against the foreigners in Chi Li which Yu Lan, the present viceroy, is unable to do, owing to his ignorance of military affairs.'

"Li Hung Chang replied to this edict asking to be allowed to retire on account of his age.

"Sheng now admits that he has had telegrams since July 19 announcing that every foreigner in Pao Ting Fu was murdered, including 40 British, French and American missionaries, and announcing also that two French Jesuits and 1,000 converts have been massacred at Kwang Ping Fu, on the borders of Shan Tung and Chi-Li. A majority of the consuls favor strong measures against Sheng's duplicity.

"Local officials assert that the Italian priests murdered in Hu Nan Wen were wrapped in cotton which had been soaked with kerosene, and were slowly roasted to death. It is believed that all foreigners in Chi-Li have by this time been massacred; and the wave of massacre is spreading from Ning Po and Hong Chow, from which point 30 English and American missionaries are endeavoring to escape in boats down the river to Kiang Su. Officials here anticipate a general rising along the Yang Tse Kiang about August 1.

"An astounding American intrigue has been revealed to the consuls here in the shape of a skillful attempt to get the maritime customs placed in the hands of an American missionary named Fergusson, who, although he was an active ally of Sheng in the latter's endeavors to hoodwink the world with regard to events in Peking, was supported by the American officials in his claim to the appointment of inspector general."

Washington, July 30. There is a growing expectation at the state department that news of the utmost importance may be forthcoming at any moment from Peking. It is believed that the basis for this expectation is the knowledge on the part of the officials that certain machinery heretofore set in motion may result in the opening up of communication through some secret but reliable channels. It is known that a second effort has been made by our own government to get another message from Mr. Conger and that nearly all of the powers also have resorted to private agencies in their own interests, with a like object.

The fact has just been developed that one of the last acts of the late Col. Liscum before his death at Tien-Tsin was to undertake the dispatch of a spy to Peking. Gen. Dorward, the British commanding officer at Tien-Tsin, also sent out two messengers, and it is believed that the Japanese did the same. Up to date not one of these messengers has returned to Tien-Tsin, nor has there been a single word heard from any of them. This fact, however, has not caused the abandonment of hope, and this is true in particular of the message expected from Mr. Conger. Minister Wu is perhaps the basis for this hope on our part, and he maintains an unshaken confidence in his original assertion that the news, when it does come, will show that the legationers are alive.

Tokio, July 28.—It is reported from Shanghai that the Boxers attacked the missionaries and native Christians at Pao Ting Fu on July 8. A foreign physician and 2,000 converts were massacred.

The Chinese general, Li Ho Keh, is now marching on Peking. He has ordered his troops to [illegible] all Christians. Already one French priest and from 2,000 to 3,000 natives have been slaughtered.

Berlin, July 30.—The Chinese legation in Berlin has received a message from Sheng, director general of railways and telegraphs, saying that he had received a dispatch from Peking announcing that Gen. Tung Fuh Siang threatens to kill all the members of the legations if the international forces advance upon Peking.

Evidently the legation is embarrassed by the receipt of this dispatch as the Chinese minister has not communicated it to the German government.

The legation has cabled the viceroy of Nankin requesting him to try to get information as to whether the widow of Baron Von Ketteler, the murdered German minister, is still alive.

London, July 27.—The Hong-Kong correspondent of the Daily Express wires as follows:

"An Italian priest has just arrived here from Hen Sien Fu, in southern Hu An, where the Italian bishop and three priests have been massacred after revolting tortures. This took place on July 4. Six hundred converts were massacred after the women had been subjected to hideous brutalities. Six other priests fled to the hills, where they were probably killed. The priest who escaped had a perilous journey to Hong-Kong. He hid in a coffin on board a river boat for 17 days."

Washington, July 28.—Secretary Hay signalized his return to Washington from Canton Friday morning by the announcement that under no circumstances will the United States accept the Chinese offer to turn over the foreign ministers to the internationals at Tien-Tsin in consideration of a suspension of the campaign against Peking. A long cablegram was dispatched Friday to Rr. Adm. Remey at Taku and it is believed that this instruction was laid upon him.

The state department claims to be pursuing an entirely consistent course in this decision. The officials point out that all of the bitter criticism in the European papers directed against the United States' policy is based upon a total misunderstanding of the fundamental principles which have governed the actions of the department. At no time, it is said, has the state department allowed the belief that the foreign ministers at Peking were alive to interfere in the slightest degree with the prosecution of its military plans for reaching Peking. On the contrary, the news that the ministers were alive was accepted by the state department, not as conveying absolute verity, but as an additional reason for hastening the relief column forward to Peking. It was the department's contention that, even though a degree of improbability surrounded the Chinese news as to the state of affairs in Peking, yet every consideration of humanity and policy demanded that it should be given careful consideration and that it should be acted upon as if true provided that action went toward the relief of the foreign ministers, and did not operate to prevent the consummation of any of the objects laid down in Secretary Hay's identic note. The department is absolutely satisfied that its attitude was perfectly correct, and that even European critics will, in time, admit the fact.

New York, July 29.—Gustave H. Schwab, of New York, agent of the North German Lloyd Steamship Co., has received a statement from the main office that the loss sustained by the company from the recent fire at Hoboken, which destroyed its dock property and wrecked the steamers Bremen, Main and Saale, is estimated at $2,250,000, which is nearly covered by insurance.

NEW ORLEANS RIOTS.

Negro Who Caused Them Killed Five and Fatally Wounded Four.

He in Turn Was Smoked Out of His Hiding Place in a House Where He Had Taken Refuge and Riddled With Bullets.

New Orleans, July 27.—The whites became so incensed over the murder of Police Captain Day and Patrolman Lamb at an early hour Tuesday morning by Robert Charles, a Negro desperado, that rioting commenced Wednesday night, and was kept up Thursday morning. One Negro was beaten to death, six were so badly wounded that their lives are despaired of, and about a score of people, white and black, male and female, have been more or less seriously wounded. Disorderly acts following the disturbances of Wednesday night were committed throughout the city Thursday, and resulted in the swearing in by the mayor of 500 special policemen and the ordering out of 1,500 of the state militia upon orders of Gov. Heard, who responded promptly to the appeal of Mayor Capdevielle for assistance in suppressing the existing lawlessness and in preventing a recurrence of the violence of Wednesday night.

Col. Wood who commanded the 1st. Louisiana regiment in the Spanish war, was placed in command of the special police.

Bloodhounds prowled the streets throughout the day, and whenever they spied a Negro, assaulted him.

New Orleans, July 28.—After a desperate battle lasting for several hours, in which he succeeded in killing Sergt. Gabriel Porteus, Andy Van. Kurem, keeper of the police jail, and Alfred J. Bloomfield, a young boy, and fatally wounding Corp. John F. Lally, John Banville, ex-Policeman Frank H. Evans and A. S. Loclere, one of the leading confectioners of the city, and more or less seriously several other persons, the Negro desperado, Robert Charles, who killed Capt. Day and Patrolman Lamb and badly wounded Officer Mora, was smoked out of his hiding place in the heart of the residence section of the city and literally shot to pieces.

The tragedy was one of the most remarkable in the history of the city, and 20,000 people, soldiers, policemen and citizens, were gathered around the square in which Charles was finally put to death. Tremendous excitement reigned in New Orleans as the battle went on between the police and citizens and the Negro with his Winchester. After the tragedy was over, and Charles was dragged out from the mud and slush in which he had fallen, with the mob howling for the burning of his body, statements were made that the man killed was not really the desperado who had killed Day and Lamb, but papers found on his person and the fact that he fought so desperately for his life and shot so accurately seem to leave little doubt that the right man was killed.

Sergt. Gabe Portens, one of the best known officers on the force, and Sergt. John F. Lally, who has a fine record for bravery, were informed during the day by a Negro that Charles was hiding in a house on Clio, near Saratoga street. Determining to take him alive if possible, the officers summoned a number of patrolmen to their assistance and sent to the house where Charles was supposed to be in concealment. The Negro informant of the policemen accompanied the officers. They entered the side alley of the house and were surprised in precisely the same way as were Day and Lamb. Before the officers were aware of their danger Charles, who was hidden behind a screen on the second floor of the building, raised his Winchester and began a furious but accurate fire. Lally fell with a bullet in the right side of the abdomen. Porteus was shot through the head and dropped dead across the body of Lally. The other officers and the Negro fled from the scene.

The reports of Charles' Winchester and the fact that two officers lay bleeding in the yard raised tremendous excitement. Hurry calls were sent to the mayor, the chief of police and Col. Wood, in command of the special police, and as fast as possible armed help was rushed to the scene. In a little while there was an immense crowd circling the square in which Charles was located. In the meantime Father Fitzgerald, of St. Johns church, was summoned to administer extreme unction to the police officers who were lying in the alley. The priest responded promptly and he was annoluting the body of Porteus with Alfred J. Bloomfield, a young boy, standing by his side, when Charles again appeared at the window. The lad saw him at once and begged the desperado not to shoot him. Charles immediately fired, his Winchester again and Bloomfield fell dead. The priest, unhurt, left the scene after pluckily performing the last offices for the dead officer.

Cubans in Politics.

Havana, July 27.—Political parties have actively begun the campaign for the election of delegates to the constitutional convention. Much more interest is displayed in the result than in that of the recent municipal contests.

Big Store Burned.

Medford, Wis., July 27.—Fire destroyed the Marcus Mercantile Co.'s big store and two buildings owned by Nic Wendels and Mrs. Leonardt. The loss is $30,000, most of which falls upon the Marcus Mercantile Co.

HE WASN'T GROWLING.

Was Merely Seeking Information as to Prices of Country Comforts and Conveniences.

"What!" carpingly ejaculated the summer boarder from the city, as he glared pop-eyededly at the altitudinous bill which, says Puck, the honest agriculturist had just presented to him. "Ninety-six dollars and thirty cents for two weeks' board for myself, wife and three small boys? Now, look here, Mr. Hooks—"

"Ye had the use of the hoss and carry-all whenever ye wanted 'im," interrupted old Farmer Hooks, doggedly. "Your boys ett up considerable many of my apples, and, then, there's the fishin' and the scenery, and the—er—grangers' picnic, and Uncle Hiram Tinker's funeral, and the eclipse of the moon, and—er—ah!——all that, and—"

"But, jshaw, man! the only time we used your old carry-all the horse was so sulky that I had to lead him most of the way, and the vehicle broke down and I paid more for having it repaired than it was worth. Your green apples made the boys sick to within a hair's breadth of an agonizing death, and to the extent of a 20 doctor bill. I caught cold but no fish, fishing. We didn't eat any of the scenery, nor do we expect to carry any of it away with us. We were in no way responsible for the late Mr. Tinker's funeral, and, I may add, did not particularly enjoy it. We did not attend the grangers' picnic, and, as for paying you for the eclipse of the moon, I'll be——"

"Looker here! Do you mean to insinuate that I'm tryin' to gouge ye?"

"Oh, no; certainly not! But, by the way, the present wealth of the United States is estimated at $100,000,000,000, and—er—"

"Waal?"

"Well, I was merely wondering if you were trying to get it all at once?"

SERVED HIM RIGHT.

He Advised Others But Did Not Follow Out His Own Suggestions.

The crowd began to gather as soon as the man fell down. One of the thoughtful ones ran to a drug store and rang up an ambulance, and in a few moments a great clanging and clattering was heard down the street. Then the ambulance drew alongside the curb, the natty young physician dismounted from the rear step, and the crowd standing around the man who had fallen formed a lane for him to pass through. It required only a glance for the natty young physician to see what ailed the man, says the Washington Post.

"Prostrated by the heat," he said, coolly to the crowd. "Anybody here know him?"

There was no reply, but just as the ambulance men were about to pick up his prostrate man a stout man pushed his way through the crowd, glanced at the limp form of the victim of the heat, and said:

"There, you can just fetch him up to my house. He lives with my family. He's the man who writes the 'Hints on How to Keep Cool in Hot Weather' for the papers."

Housewife and Burglar.

The burglar had entered the house as quietly as possible, but his shoes were not padded and they made some noise. He had just reached the door of the bedroom when he heard some one moving in the bed as if about to get up, and he paused. The sound of a woman's voice floated to his ears. "If you don't take off your boots when you come into this house," it said, "there's going to be trouble, and a whole lot of it. Here it's been raining for three hours, and you dare to tramp over my carpets with your muddy boots on. Go downstairs and take them off." He went downstairs without a word, but he didn't take off his boots. Instead he went out into the night again, and the "pal" who was waiting for him saw a tear glisten in his eye. "I've rob that house," he said. "It reminds me of home."—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

PROSECUTION RESTS.

Wharton Golden Severely Cross-Examined by Judge Sims.

Denied That He Said He Could Have $5,000 in Case of the Conviction of the Parties Accused.

Georgetown, Ky., July 27.—There were several features in the evidence taken in the Powers trial. Constable Davis Harrod, of Frankfort, who entered the executive building a minute or two after the shooting of Goebel, testified that he saw a man whose description tallied with that of Youtsey pull to the door of the office of the secretary of state behind him and run down the basement steps.

W. H. Wagner, of Williamsburg, the home of Charles Finley, who says he arrived in Frankfort with the mountain men on January 25 and spent much of his time between that time and the day of the assassination in Powers' office, gave damaging testimony against both Powers and Youtsey. He said that on Friday preceding the assassination several parties were in Powers' office discussing ways and means of defeating Goebel before the legislature, and one man in the party said: "Somebody ought to kill the d— rascal." Another replied: "I have made up my mind to do that myself."

The witness said he did not know either of the men talking at that time, but had seen Youtsey recently, and was almost positive he was the man who made the last remark. In reference to Powers he said he overheard him talking complainingly on the day Representative Berry was unseated, and, according to his statement, Powers said: "We might be able to do something if the head of the ticket would act. If he does not, I intend to expose the whole d— business."

The defense put Robert Noaks on the stand and questioned him at length for the purpose of laying a foundation to contradict his testimony. A letter written by Noaks to his cousin, Miss Effie Blankenship, at Crawfordsville, Ind., since his arrest, promises to play an important part in the matter so far as Noaks' testimony is concerned, in the event the defense can produce the letter. What is alleged to be the substance of it was presented to the court—clipped from a newspaper. The matter was not given to the jury, Judge Cantrill ruling that the witness could not be questioned concerning the letter or its contents without first showing that the letter had either been lost or destroyed. The defense will endeavor to get the letter.

Rodgers also identified a paper taken from Powers at the time of his arrest, which seemed to be a sort of passport, and read as follows: "Powers is our friend. Signed W. S. Taylor."

The pardon granted Powers by Gov. Taylor and attested by the defendant himself was then exhibited to the jury.

Walter Bronston, recalled, told of a conversation with Powers after the arrest of the later, Powers, in talking about the pardons being found on him when arrested, said: I know this looks a little bad, but we were making our way to a place where the pardons would have been recognized."

Senator J. J. Johnson was looking out of the senate chamber when the shots were fired. Only heard one of the shots. Saw a man raise a window on the second floor and look out in the direction of Goebel's body immediately after the shooting. The shot witness heard did not come from that window.

Georgetown, Ky., July 28.—Although Youtsey's attorneys deny that he will be a witness for the prosecution in the Caleb Powers trial, the commonwealth is expected to spring startling evidence in its closing testimony. If Youtsey does not go on the stand it is possible that Green Golden may testify for the state.

The first witness Friday morning was Judge James D. Black, Barbourville, who was a candidate for the gubernatorial nomination. He testified that he saw a letter from Powers to Prof. Stevens, in which Powers said that the demoralization of the democratic party was due to him. Dudley Williamson stated that he was at the arsenal several days preceding the shooting, and that on the morning of January 30 the soldiers he was with were given overcoats and side arms and sent to the state house.

E. H. St. Clair, manager of the Postal Telegraph Co., Frankfort, saw Goebel and Chinn shortly before they entered the gate January 30, and walked directly to his office, a little over a square away. As he entered he was handed a bunch of messages by a colored man, to be sent. Two of the messages were offered in evidence, one addressed to Lieut. Col. Gray, of Lonisville, and another to Col. Roger Williams, of Lexington. Both read: "All right," and were signed by Gen. Collier.

Six more messages out of the same bundle, according to the witness, were read, all of them signed by Collier, calling out the militia. The prosecution placed its star witness, F. Wharton Golden, on the stand, and, unless their present plans are changed, will rest the case so far as the commonwealth is concerned at the conclusion of his testimony. Golden's testimony, as far as it went, did not vary from that given by him at Powers' examining trial and on the hearing of Culton's motion for bail at Frankfort.

Georgetown, Ky., July 29.—The attorneys for the prosecution in the Powers case at the close of the evidence on that side will ask that the jury be taken to Frankfort to view the state house grounds and buildings, the spot where Goebel fell, and other things in connection with the case. They say the commonwealth will rest its case at the conclusion of the testimony of Wharton Golden.

Golden resumed the witness stand at 9:30, and Judge Sims began a severe close cross-examination. Golden in response to questions told of being sent for by Tom Cromwell who told him he was about to be arrested for complicity in the murder. Refused to talk at that time, but went to see Powers and told him he was going to leave Frankfort to keep out of trouble. Powers told witness it would be better for him to give himself up and not to leave under any circumstances.

Witness went back to see Cromwell and Lawyer Campbell and told them he was ready to tell all he knew, but could not do so in Frankfort, as he would be killed. Campbell promised the witness to do all he could to keep him from being prosecuted. A few days later witness went to Cincinnati where he met Commonwealth's Attorney Franklin and Lawyer Campbell and told them all he knew.

Judge Sims asked the witness if he did not tell his brother-in-law, John Stamper, that he had been promised $2,500, and that he could have $5,000 in case of a conviction of parties, but he denied that he had ever said anything of that sort. Also denied that he had ever said that if he and Culton could get together they could convict them all.

Golden was kept busy for an hour or more denying that he had made statements that are attributed to him by persons who it is supposed will be introduced by the defense to impeach his testimony.

Judge Sims asked Golden, "Do you mean to tell his jury that you were willing to go into the legislature and kill anybody?"

The witness replied: "I was willing to go in there, and, in case of a fight, to stand up for my side. I would have killed anybody that got in the way of my shots." He said he did not know who brought "Tallow Dick" Combs, the negro, to Frankfort, but that Culton told him he brought him.

Georgetown, Ky., July 30.—The prosecution in the case of Caleb Powers as an alleged accessory in the murder of Goebel closed its testimony Saturday afternoon, rested the case and requested that the jury be sent to Frankfort to view the scene of the tragedy. The defense did not object to the jury going to Frankfort, but it will not go till all the testimony is in. The prosecution is confident of a conviction on the presentation made to the jury.

The defense has not yet decided whether or not it will make an opening statement. The indictions are that it will move for peremptory instructions to find for the defendant. Powers may go on the stand himself and testify in his own behalf.

RESULTED IN A FIASCO.

The Two Days' Fiesta in Manila to Commemorate the Amnesty Was Not a Success.

Manila, July 30.—The two days fiesta in Manila organized by Senor Paterno and his political followers to commemorate the amnesty, resulted in a fiasco. The people were passive, unenthusiastic and not even interested. Failing to perceive any tangible effective results of amnesty they say they can see no reason for celebrating.

Judge Taft and his colleagues of the commission felt constrained to decline to attend the banquet, as they had been informed that the speech would favor independence under American protection and they could not passively lend their acquiescence by being present.

During last weeks scouting ten Americans were killed and 14 wounded. One hundred and eight Filipinos were killed and 60 taken prisoners. Forty insurgent rifles were captured.

Mr. Rathbone was held in bonds of $25,000.

Havana, July 30.—The court before whom Estes G. Rathbone, formerly director of posts of Cuba, was arraigned, after his arrest on charges of fraud, issued an order directing that the prisoner be removed to the corcel, but Lieut. Col. Scott, acting governor general, advised that he be allowed to remain in the vivac until it was known whether bail would be secured. His attorneys are confident of getting a satisfactory bondsman. Many persons called upon Mr. Rathbone to express their sympathy with him in his predicament. Among them was Gen. Lee.

TRADE WITH ISLANDS.

Imports From Our New Possessions More Than $60,000,000—Sugar and Tobacco Lead.

Washington, July 29.—The imports into the United States from Cuba, Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippine and Samoan islands for the fiscal year just ended amount to over $60,000,000. Over $40,000,000 of this is sugar and molasses, $10,000,000 tobacco, $5,000,000 vegetable fibers, $1,000,000 iron, copper and manganese and the remainder such miscellaneous tropical products as coffee, cocoa, sponges, tropical fruits, vegetables, hides and skins and cabinet woods.

The sugar importations from the islands form practically one-third of the total sugar brought into the United States during the year, amounting to about 1,000,400,000 pounds out of a grand total of over 4,000,000,000 pounds imported.

Of the total sugar importations from the four islands, Cuba supplied slightly more than one-half, though in value the importations from Hawaii exceeded those from Cuba, Hawaii sugar being of a higher grade and consequently representing a larger value, although the number of pounds was materially less than that shown by the import figures for Cuba. The total importations of sugar during the year from Cuba was 705,456,352 pounds, valued at $18,243,659; those from Hawaii 504,713,105 pounds, valued at $20,392,150. Porto Rico occupies the third place in quantity and value of sugar imported from the islands, the total for the year exceeding 80,000,000 pounds, while from the Philippines the total for the year is, in round terms, 30,000,000 pounds.

SLEEPING CAR SMASHED.

Detroit, Mich., July 30.—Section 1 of the Buffalo Bill's Wild West show's train suffered a severe collision near Milwaukee Junction, shortly before daylight, resulting in the smashing of a show employes' sleeping car containing some 40 sleeping inmates. One of the latter is dead and nine others are in Detroit hospitals suffering from more or less serious injuries.

At the time of the collision the train, consisting of 20 wagon and stock cars, four of the show's sleeping cars and a Grand Trunk caboose were being transferred from the Michigan Central to the Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee road. The train was being pushed backward from the "Y" at the Milwaukee Junction, when it was struck by an outgoing Grand Trunk freight train. The caboose was jammed into and forced on top of the Buffalo Bill employes' sleeper No. 56, which was filled with sleeping tent and canvas men. When the uninjured men had recovered from the shock, the wrecked sleeper was chopped open and the injured gradually gotten out. The car was a complete wreck, excepting at one end.

Clark, in apparent good health and usual good spirits, signed out of Louisville on his run in the morning. With accustomed accuracy and vim he "worked" his mail along the route through Eminence and Frankfort, and passed the little station of Jetts, 25 miles west of Lexington. He had just dumped the contents of the pouch received at Jetts on his table, and was in the act of assorting it, when he dropped suddenly to the floor of the car, gasping out one long, awful, "Oh, O—O!"

This attracted Baggageman Abe Roberts, who rushed to the prostrate Clark. He was dead. The body was brought here and prepared for burial. Clark was 40 years of age, a native of Winchester, Ky., grandson of ex-Gov. Clark and a nephew of the late Senator James S. Beck. He had been in the railway mail service 20 years. Telegraphs and railways appear to be among the causes of the anti-foreign riots now in progress in China. The development of this feature of modern enterprise in China is described in considerable detail in a recent publication of the Treasury Bureau of Statistics, entitled "Commercial China in 1899." It shows that the telegraph system of China included in 1899 about 3,000 miles of line in operation, and that the railroad system included 350 miles of road in active operation and over 3,000 miles projected. The telegraph system connected all of the capitals of the Provinces with the National Capital, Pekin, and in turn connected with the Russian Trans-Siberian telegraph line and the ocean cables; but it appears from the recent reports that those lines have in many cases been destroyed by the anti-foreign mobs and armies.

The railways thus far constructed belong to the Chinese Government and were constructed under its control and direction and at its expense. They connect Pekin, the capital, with Tien Tsin, which lies at the head of the Gulf of Pechili and is the seaport of Pekin, while other lines run northwardly from Tien Tsin to Shanhaikwan and still others extend southwardly from Pekin as far as Paoting, the capital of the Province of Chili, in which Pekin is located. From that point southward a railway was being constructed in 1899 by Belgian capital, though it was suspected that Russian influence and perhaps Russian capital was associated in this work. This line was expected to extend to Hankow, which may be described as the Chicago of China, being its best and largest and most prosperous inland commercial city, located 500 miles up the Yangtsee Kiang from Shanhai, which lies at the mouth of that river. Hankow is a city of nearly 1,000,000 inhabitants and it was expected that the Belgian line would connect Pekin, which lies well at the north, with Hankow, located near the center, and that an American line would extend still further south from Hankow to Canton and Hong Kong.

The American line was surveyed by a corps of engineers under Mr. W. B. Parsons, of New York, in 1898 and 1899, under a concession granted by the Chinese Government to Calvin Brice and others in this line, like all others for which concessions have been granted, was after a term of years to become the property of the Chinese Government. It was expected that this American line, running from Hong Kong and Canton northward to Hankow and connecting at that point with the Belgian line, which would extend to Pekin, would form an extremely important artery of internal commerce from China's most important southern city, Canton, and its most important central city, Hankow, and thence to its capital at the North, Pekin, from which point it would connect with the Russian railway system, which enters China in Manchuria at the extreme north.

What the effect of the hostilities in China with reference to work of this character will be cannot now be foretold. Russia controls a long stretch of territory along her north, and England the territory of British India and Burmah at the southwest. Railway lines existing or projected extend from the territory of both of those countries into the very heart of China, and intermingled with, and an important link among these is the great American enterprise already alluded to, upon which a company had, according to the statements of accepted authorities in railway matters, arranged for the expenditure of $20,000,000 of American funds.

has brought permanent relief to a million suffering women who were on their way to premature graves. Mrs. Mitchell was fast declining in health, when Wine of Cardui performed a "wonderful cure" in her case. She suffered with the agonies of falling of the womb, leucorrhœa and profuse menstruation. The weekly appearance of the menses for two months sapped her vitality until she was a physical wreck. Her nervous system gave way. Then came the trial of Wine of Cardui and the cure. Mrs. Mitchell's experience ought to commend Wine of Cardui to suffering women in words of burning eloquence.

is within the reach of all. Women who try it are relieved. Ask your druggist for a $1 bottle of Wine of Cardui, and do not take a substitute if tendered you.

Mrs. Willie Mitchell, South Gaston, N. C.: "Wine of Cardui and Thedford's Black-Draught have performed a miraculous cure in my case. I had been a great sufferer with failing of the womb and leucorrhœa, and my menses came every week for two months and were very painful. My husband induced me to try Wine of Cardui and Black-Draught, and now the leucorrhœa has disappeared, and I am restored to perfect health."

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 8, 1900. NO. 42

ALABAMA held a State election Monday, and the Democrats won by a majority of 50,000, making large gains in the legislature.

ROOSEVELT certainly considers New York a doubtful State this year, hence his desire to make a speech in every county in that State this fall.

SENATOR HOAR has declared he intends to support McKinley, but none of his speeches on McKinley's foreign policy will be used as campaign literature.

SENATOR GORMAN, of Maryland, will engage in politics as a pass-time after the 15th inst., and will make some speeches for Bryan, should he be invited so to do.

IT is now believed that Governor Beckham will call a special session of the legislature in time for it to complete the work for which he calls it, before the November election.

EX-GOV. James B. McCreary accepted the chairmanship of the Democratic Campaign Committee and has issued a call for a meeting of the committee next Saturday, August 11.

OWING to some irregularity J. G. Tomlin's name was not on the ballot in Gallatin county in Monday's election. In Owen county Mr. Tolin's majority is 1,526. A small vote was cast in each of the lower counties.

WEBSTER DAVIS, ex-Assistant Secretary of the Interior until recently, will take the stump for Bryan and Stevenson. Mr. Davis ought to have a valuable store of knowledge of Republican methods, &c., upon which to draw for his speeches.

THE Republicans of Campbell county elected a State Senator Monday by a majority of 170. Yerkes, the Republican nominee for Governor was in Newport last Saturday night, and with speech and brass band enthused the voters of his party, and they came out and voted, Monday, while the Democrats sat quietly by and allowed their nominee to be defeated.

CLAUD CHINN, clerk of the Fayette county court, is said to be short $11,000 in his account with the State, and $4,000 with the county. Chinn claims to have reported to the former Republican Auditor, but why he did not discover the shortage is not known. Auditor Coulter has made repeated efforts to get Chinn to settle, but he has failed to do so, although he has made numerous promises that he would.

The Republican leaders naturally criticise the revolution in North Carolina as practically disfranchising the colored race, but they should not be forgetful of the fact that the Republican national leaders themselves led in the enfranchisement and in the disfranchisement of the black man in the District of Columbia. He was given the ballot regardless of property or intelligence; a territorial government was created by Congress; the local Legislature was elected by popular vote, and a Governor appointed by the President. The negroes dominated the legislative power of the District of Columbia and ran riot in debauchery and profligacy. The same Republican power that thus first enfranchised the negro under the very shadow of the national capital, was finally compelled to revoke that franchise and restore government by Congress and commission to the District.

Thus South Carolina, Mississippi, Louisiana and North Carolina have simply followed in the footsteps of the Republican national leaders, who first made the experiment of indiscriminate negro suffrage and who were compelled to make the first experiment absolutely revoking the franchise by placing the District of Columbia under a government entirely removed from the power of the people. It is simply the inevitable that has come to North Corolina, and that it has come in violence and lawlessness only proves how supreme was the necessity for eliminating the race issue in North Carolina.—Philadelphia Times.

Honesty for all Elections.

It is not right for the Democratic party to cling to, or aspire to anything the least tainted with dishonesty in any election for State officers, nor is it at all necessary. Democracy has a sound majority of 50,000 in the State on any fair or important question.

Imperialism straight, will not be successful in Kentucky by a still larger vote, provided the issue were well understood by the people. Perhaps that issue is less understood by the "great common people" than any other issue that ever presented itself to these people. The Monroe Doctrine, the Trust question or even that old chesnut—the tariff question, are all much better understood by our common people than that of imperialism. And why is it so? The answer to this is fair and reasonable.

Our people are not an ignorant people, as some claim, but, as an accepted fact, since the civil war, at least, when our whole land has been flooded with English and New English Literature of fiction; our young generations have been wholly absorbed in the study of these love stories and stories of adventure &c., of which this class of literature is entirely composed, and for this reason their knowledge of political economy is very limited. The politics of many of our young men are founded solely upon the course of some admired friend, without the least effort being made to inform their minds upon results of history or the advantages in a knowledge of political economy. Now, for those who appreciate this fact, and have the gift of oratory, the field is ripe and the harvest is great."

How might this great and leading issue be presented in its strongest light? How might Imperialism be shown to these people in its most ruinous consequences, to all that they hold most dear, their individual liberty? Numerous instances may be cited to the mechanic; for instance, strikes of all kinds in the war now raging of capital vs. labor. Under Imperialism no line of union labor could maintain a strike for one week. No matter what their grievance might be, it would be settled at once by beyonet rule, and strikers could accept trusts terms or starve. To the agricultural labor it would be the same, both to the farmer and to his hired help. Prices all fixed by the interests of capital. To enforce capital's interests alone will be the necessity of keeping a large standing army. And all the expense of a large stand ing army will be solely upon the shoulders of "the great common people." These people will have forged the claims of oppression which may bind them to poverty and eternal slavery, as surely as they choose to elect Imperialism by their votes at the polls. Individual liberty, the only jewel that makes us the strongest and best government and nation in the world, will have been sacrificed by ourselves, when we choose Imperialism. All our offices will then be filled by appointment of our Imperialists, and we will need no elections. Forms may be gone through with that will be worse than farces. Force bills will be thelaw, and "Goebelism" will be moonshine in comparison with them.

No, Democracy need not be unfair in Kentucky, but by all means keep proper restrictions upon those who have ever proved themselves to be unfair. Let our legislature amend anything that is unfair in the Goebel law, but do not let its enemies make such amendments. And then let our best orators take the field and explain all the issues, and we will win. Beckham is the proper man to head our ticket in order to defend the democracy in its course during our late disturbences. Goebelism is what we need and plenty of it. We will win two for every one we may loose on that issue. I am like Bryan is on silver, it will not do to turn our backs upon "Goebelism." ISAAC CRAIG.

To be bound hand and foot for years by the chains of disease is the worst form of slavery. Geo. D. Williams, of Manchester, Mich., says: "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This supreme remedy for female diseases quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, backache, fainting and dizzy spells. It is a godsend to weak, sickly, run-down people. Cure guaranteed. Only 50c. Sold by McKim, Burlington, Oelsner, Florence, Crouch, Union.

New Jersey has gone farther in its war against weeds and insect pests than any other State we have heard or read of. It has enacted a law that is to become operative next September, that all owners of lands bordering upon public highways shall clear them of weeds, bushes and briars. If they do not do so, there shall be a committee appointed by the town to employ men to do so, and the cost shall be assessed to the land owners. This is a wise law, and the example might well be followed by other States. These hedgegrows of weeds and bushes, either inside or outside of the fence, are of no use excepting as a harbor for insects, fungous diseases and weeds to adjoining land, or to be transported along the highways to fields where they are not wanted. This cleaning up may cost the farmers some labor, but theirs will be the benefit in the end.—American Cultivator.

Soil was brought up from a depth of 326 feet from a coal mine in Belgium, and from it sprouted weeds of a species unknown to botanists.

Well Deserved.

[Chicago Times-Herald, Rep.]

The nomination of Beckham was a well deserved recognition of his very judicious and cool-headed management of State affairs at a very critical time in its history.

Dignity and Conservatism.

[Providence Journal, Rep.]

He is a very young man to win the honor, having but recently passed his thirtieth birthday, but he has conducted himself with dignity in his high office and commended himself to conservative people. It has been charged that he favored the retention of the infamous Goebel election law, but the platform on which he stands declares for its radical amendment, and for the admission of Republican officials to a voice in the conduct of elections pending such amendment. This sounds reasonable and gives the Kentucky Democrats a much better chance for success in November than they would have enjoyed if they had declined to commit themselves against the discredited statute.

A Certificate of Confidence.

[Buffalo Courier, Dem.]

In a situation of extreme difficulty and danger, Mr. Beckham, a young man, by his clear-headed, conservative course, proved the possession of a high order of sense and it was largely through his influence that a peaceful settlement of the trouble which threatened the State with civil war was averted. While it would seem that he was a logical candidate for the nomination, it may be considered a high compliment and certificate of confidence. * * * While the coming contest will no doubt be bitter, the political atmosphere in Kentucky has somewhat cleared. The recent disorders had the effect of strengthening the lines, and Democratic victory in the State is practically assured.

Has Proved His Ability.

[Winchester Sun.]

Hon. J. C. W. Beckham, Democratic nominee for Governor of Kentucky, deserves, and we believe will receive, the hearty support of every true Democrat in the State. By pedigree, by birth, by education and by training he is at once a gentleman, a scholar and a statesman. Notwithstanding his youth, which is the only thing the opposition can urge against him, he has already proved his ability to successfully and equitably manage the affairs of the State as its chief executive. At the Lexington convention, when it was shown that he was the choice of a large majority of the Democrats of the State, his nomination was made unanimous, and those who had measured strength with him were among the first to pledge to him their earnest support. Since then each of the other candidates before that convention has written to Mr. Beckham renewing his services in the campaign. Can any Democrat, with these facts, before him, deny Mr. Beckham his vote and influence? We think not; and we are firm in our belief that November 6th will witness a glorious Democratic victory, not only in Kentucky, but in the nation.

A Strong Candidate.

[Providence Journal, Rep.]

Acting Governor Beckham, of Kentucky, is a strong candidate for the Governorship. Unlike Col. Goebel, of whom he was a devoted follower, he is one who makes no enemies. Throughout the trouble before and after the last year he conducted himself modestly and took advantage of none of his opportunities to make a fool of himself by posing in the public eye. He has won the contest for the nomination in the same manner. There was much opposition to him at first, but when the convention met it was practically certain that he would receive a majority of votes. The other candidates' names were withdrawn just as soon as the delegates all knew that this certainty of defeat awaited his rivals. The prediction of the Republicans, often made during the Goebel campaign and referred to in the Powers trial, that but for Goebel the Democrats of Kentucky would fly apart, has not come true. Perhaps the latter party has learned the great lesson of that struggle, namely, that in politics harmony counts for quite as much as principle. The declaration of the Democratic convention regarding the Goebel law and the promise that it shall be nullified at the next election are sensible. Yet the plan of nullification without legislative action is full of risk.

In response to an invitation to attend the Harvest Home and deliver an address on the 17th inst., Judge Black, of Barboursville, wrote Atty. D. E. Castleman the following letter:

Barbourville, Ky., July 28, 1900.

Hon. D. E. Castleman, Burlington, Ky. My Dear Sir:—I am just home after an absence of a few days, and find yours 23rd inst., awaiting me. Replying, I beg to say, our Circuit Court will begin here on August 13, and, on that account, it will hardly be possible for me to to visit your county on the 18th, for it will be necessary for me to be here during the three weeks court will be in session. But for that, I certainly would accept your invitation. I beg to assure you that I am anxious to meet the Democrats of your county and in fact, of your entire section of the State, and now promise you to do so before next November, if possible. It is my earnest desire that we will give Bryan, Stevenson and Beckham a handsome majority in Kentucky next November, and to that end I will do what little I can. We cannot afford to be defeated, and if we all will do our duty, we will not be defeated. Please believe me when I say it is with regrets that I am compelled, for the reason already stated, to forego the pleasure of a visit to your county in August next. Wishing you and our party success,

I am yours truly, &c.,
JAMES D. BLACK.

Judge Black was a candidate against Gov. Beckham in the recent Gubernatorial convention at Lexington, and the above attests his fidelity to party, and had such party loyalty as his dominated the action of defeated candidates in the past, the Democratic party in Kentucky would be in a most excellent condition.

GALLATIN COUNTY.

(From Warsaw Independent.)

Pinkeye is quite prevalent among the horses in this locality. Five of the livery stable horses are afflicted with the disease.

Lewis Newton Rogers, a brother of Johnson Rogers, of near town, and a native of Boone county, died at his home in Carroll county, near Carson, July 25th, from consumption, in the 43rd year of his age.

Ike Leavell brought in a peculiar corn growth this week. It appears to be a fungus growth and around it is clustered twenty small ears of corn, while over it all is the silken tassel of the corn, giving it the appearance of a man's head with a long beard, a very clever representation of Senator Pieffer, of Kansas, whose whiskers have evoked many camical cartoons.

The peach crop is now ripening and being shipped. Dr. J. T. Robinson who has an orchard of about four thousand trees near Vera Cruz, has the largest crop in the county, and, is shipping to the Cincinnati market. The quotations there are $1 75 per bushel for first class peaches. The Trimble county and Madison, Ind., parties have been shipping to that market for two weeks.

Josiah Jacobs, an old farmer, residing near Elliston Station, committed suicide last Saturday evening by hanging himself on a tree near the mill race of the old Grimes mill. He had been afflicted with an affection of the head and complained constantly of it for years, and usually had his head tied up. It is supposed the pain grew so intense that he concluded to take his life. Mr. Jacobs was about 60 years old and leaves a wife but no children as they have all been dead some years. He was a remarkably tall man being six feet four inches and a special coffin had to be ordered from Louisville for his burial.

Prevented a Tragedy.

Timely information given Mrs. George Long, of New Straitsville, O., saved two lives. A frightful cough had long kept her awake every night. She had tried many remedies and doctors but steadily grew worse until urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle wholly cured her; and she writes, this marvelous medicine also cured Mr. Long of a severe attack of pneumonia. Such cures are positive proof of its power to cure all throat, chest and lung troubles. Only 50c and $1. Guaranteed. Trial bottles free at McKim's, Burlington; Oelsner's, Florence and Crouch's, Union.

A great proof of the versatility of Governor Roosevelt is afforded by the fact that both parties are making use of his speeches for campaign documents. The Democrats, however seem to be making the most effective use of them.—Philadelphia Record.

State News.

The fiscal court of Madison county has purchased a new clock costing over $500 to be placed in the tower of the court house at Richmond.

J. K. Wandelohr, for many years Circuit clerk of Pendleton county, died of pneumonia. He was the most popular man in his county, and was liked by all who knew him.

At Marion, Ky., at midnight Friday, C. C. Wheeler was shot and clubbed to death by a party of showmen, supposed to be the rough riders of Buckskin Bill's Wild West show.

Through three deeds filed with the county clerk at Lexington, J. B. Haggin, the millionaire owner of Elmendorf, adds 1,541 acres to his land in Fayette county at a cost of $138,744 cash.

Ira Wade, of Sherman, was bound over in $500, charged with breach of the peace. His wife sent the authorities word that she had barricaded herself in the only hotel in the town to prevent Wade from killing her. When the officers arrived they found that the citizens of Sherman had tied Wade to a post.

During the rain storm last Sunday afternoon lightning killed a fine combined horse owned by John Whalen at Kinkead. The animal was in Mr. Whalen's stable with another horse, which was uninjured. The dead horse did not show mark or blemish to indicate the terrible force of the electric bolt.—Pendletonian.

A strange accident that caused the death of two mules is reported to have recently occurred in Scott county. Gus Bosworth had two of the hybrids yoked together, when one of them stepped on a tobacco stick, which ran into the side of the other mule. In its maneuvering the wounded animal ran the stick through the heart of the other mule and both of them died.

Major Thos. J. Carson, the well-known breeder of thoroughbreds paid a $5,000 judgment with a sixty-dollar shotgun, a fifteen dollar pistol and 10 days' confinement in the Lexington jail. In October, 1898, Major Carson shot and wounded W. E. Singleton, a photographer, who, it was charged by Carson, had cast some imputation upon a lady member of his household. Singleton sued for damages because of the wound. The jury awarded him a judgment for $5,000. In answer to the Sheriff's process Carson declared he had nothing with which to pay the judgment. He was taken to jail. On the 10 day of confinement he appeared before Judge Bullock and swore that Dixiana Farm and the horses thereon were the property of Mrs. Carson. He had nothing subject to taxation save one sixty-dollar shotgun and the pistol with which he shot Singleton. These were delivered over to the Sheriff and Major Carson was given his liberty. The gun and pistol were given over to Singleton as payment for his judgment.

A Minster's Good Work.

"I had a severe attack of bilious colic, got a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, took two doses and was entirely cured," says Rev. A. A. Power, of Emporia, Kan. "My neighbor across the street was sick for over a week, had two or three bottles of medicine from the doctor. He used them for three or four days without any relief, then called in another doctor who treated him for some days and gave him no relief, so discharged him. I went over to see him the next morning. He said his bowels were in a terrible fix, that they had been running off so long that it was almost blody flux. I asked him if he had tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and he said 'No.' I went home and brought him my bottle and gave him one dose; told him to take another dose in fifteen or twenty minutes if he did not find relief, but he took no more and was entirely cured." One of the few parts of Windsor castle which has remained unchanged since its first construction, in 1164, is the royal kitchen.

Pawnbrokers take some curious pledges, but it is not often they are offered one from another world. A London suburban pawnshop, however, exhibits in its window as an unredeemed pledge a magnificent aerolite, a mass of fused metel that fell as it were from heaven to provide a poor man with his beer. A ticket bears the statements that it was brought from the arctic regions by a sailor.

Sig. Verdi has almost brought to completion the philanthropic scheme on which he has been engnged since 1888. Outside the Porta Mngenta at Milan he has bought a large piece of ground, and on it has built a house of rest for musicians. This building, which was begun in 1896, covers an area of more than 2,000 squnre yards. It will shelter 100 needy musicians (60 men and 40 women) of not less than 65 years of nge.

Passengers by Wells, Fargo & Co.'s express the other day were two monster turtles on the way to London Gardens, in England. According to Frank B. Webster, who purchased them for the gardens, the turtles are 250 years old. They were captured in the Galapagos Islands, and shipped to San Francisco. From there they traveled in a water tank to New York. Each turtle is five and a half feet long and weighs 500 pounds.

Some 150 different colors are now obtained from coal tar, and these have almost entirely supplanted vegetable and animal dyes. In fact, only two of the vegetable class, indigo and logwood, are still of any considerable importance. Coal yields a large amount of coloring matter, the magenta obtained from a ton being sufficient to dye 500 yards of flannel; the anrine, 120 yards; the vermillion scarlet, 2,560 yards, and the alizarine, 253 yards.

By means of the health department canvass New York figure out a population of 3,653,594 for the greater city. The health department's estimate of the population by boroughs on July 1 is as follows: Manhattan, 2,007,241; The Bronx, 175,370; Brooklyn, 1,267,158; Richmond, 69,266; Queens, 136,559; Richmond, 66,266; increase in the city's population since 1890 is 869,000 in round numbers, the census of that year showing that there were 1,206,299 persons in the community.

Malaria's breeding place, the Roman Campagna, is entitled to the reputation of being the most deadly spot on earth. No human being who works there escapes malaria, and the malaria is of the pernicious type. Thousands of field laborers journey into this section each year, lured by the prospect of good pay for harvest work, and yet knowing that the chances are that they will not outlive the year, or, at best, that they will be gaunt, fever-stricken wretches when they emerge from the death-haunted place.

If lightning strikes a tree after a long period of heavy rain, when the whole surface of the tree is damp, it generally does very little harm to the tree and often none at all. If, on the other hand, the tree is struck when its surface is dry it is more severely damaged, because then the electric spark will descend by a line of lower resistance along the damp wood under the bark. In this case the heat of the spark instantly produces steam to a very high pressure under the bark and it is generally blown up.

The largest schooner-rigged vessel in the world is now ready for launching from a shipyard at Camden, Me., and ship owners and sailors are waiting with curiosity to see how the experiment will turn out. The schooner is to be a six-master, capable of carrying 5,500 tons of coal, with a length of 300 feet, a beam of 48 feet and depth of 22 feet. It is the pet conception of an old shipmaster, Capt. Noun G Crowley, of Taunton, Mass., who has been known as the projector of big schooners for many years.

The cipher code of the state department is what is known as a symbol code. It is reported to be absolutely impossible for any one, even a cipher expert, to read it or to write a message in it without the use of the code book. The symbols used are figures arnnged in groups to represent words. The basis is a system of key number which change the significnce of the symbols. The code is thus capable of several transpositions, and to still further increase the difficulty of its translation there are two basic systems

CALEB POWERS' TRIAL.

Golden Displayed a Roll of Money in a Barboursville Barber Shop.

He Said to His Brother There: "Don't You Know That the $100,000 Reward Fund is Being Circulated?"

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 3.—Rev. John Stamper, the brother-in-law of Wharton Golden, was put back in the witness box on the opening of court Thursday morning. Col. Henderick, of the prosecution, questioned him as to the part he took in getting republicans from Scott county to go to the state capitol on January 25. He answered that he secured quite a number. On redirect examination by attorneys, Sims, the witness, said that the conversations he had with Golden regarding the money, he (Golden) was to receive for convictions were confidential, but that he made them public because a man's life was in jeopardy.

Col. Hendricks said: "I object to that answer, and ask that it be stricken out."

"The witness shouldn't make stump speeches in the court house," said Judge Cantrill, sharply.

Attorney Sims retorted: "And we object to that remark of the court."

Witness next said that he had never been authorized by any one to offer money to Golden to leave the state before the trial.

John O. Barrett, of Louisville, was next called. He passed through the crowd that assembled in the state house grounds a few minutes after the shooting of Goebel, and the defense asked him to tell of threats that he heard made there against the occupants of the executive building. Prosecution objected, and the jury was sent out. After hearing argument Judge Catrill ruled the question out. Upon cross-examination witness couldn't say whether the interval of the time between the first and the succeeding shots was five minutes or fifteen minutes.

The defense called R. L. McCher, of Lexington, a newspaper man. Attorney Owens asked him if witness Golden had not said to him that Youtsey was a fool for talking too much, and wouldn't get a cent; but that as (Golden) had fixed it before he told his story to the prosecution. Attorney Williams, for prosecution, claimed the question was incompetent and objected to it. The jury was again sent out and the attorneys argued the matter for a half hour. At the conclusion, Judge Cantrill said to the defense: "You can not impeach a witness for the other side by inference. I sustain the objection."

The defense excepted to the ruling and the witness stood aside.

Col. C. C. Mengel, commander of the 1st regiment, Kentucky state guards, followed. He produced two telegrams received at Louisville on day of shooting at 2 p. m., containing only the words, "All right," and signed, "D. R. Collier, Adjt. Gen." Also a letter from Collier, explaining that words "All right" meant for witness to come to Frankfort and bring regiment and gatling gun. On cross-examination, pro cention read this letter to show that in it Collier having sent the telegrams before and not after noon. Witness produced orders signed by Gov. Taylor for the movement of the regiment to Frankfort. He said he could not explain why the order was issued on January 18th, the date it bore, and not executed togil the 30th inst. In the order Taylor directed him to obey "All orders and signals" given him by Collier.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 4.—Of eight witnesses introduced by the defense in the Powers case, all but one were called for the purpose of attacking the credibility of witnesses placed on the stand by the prosecution. One of these (former State Auditor Stone) stated that Witness W. H. Culton, an alleged co-conspirator of Powers, was removed from a place of trust in his office because he defaulted in the sum of $1,000. Other witnesses (residents of Grayson Springs, this state) testified that, instead of being in Frankfort on January 30, the day of the shooting of Senator Goebel, as he claimed under oath to have been, Geo. Weaver, a prosecution witness, was in their town organizing a lodge of Woodmen of the World, and others from Eastern Kentucky testified that Witness Wharton Golden, of the prosecution, had displayed a large roll of money and intimated that it came from the state reward fund.

C. H. Gibson, of Barboursville, came next. He was asked to tell of an occurrence in barber shop at Barboursville, when Witness Wharton Golden displayed a large roll of money. Before the prosecution could object witness answered what such a thing had occurred. The prosecution asked for the exclusion of the testimony and by agreement the witness stood aside to be called later.

James Barkleroad, in whose barber shop the incident is said to have occurred, was called. He said that Golden told him on the day defendant Powers was arrested that Powers was innocent. Later Golden came into his shop and in his presence displayed a roll of paper money to his brother, Ike Golden, and said to him: "Don't you know that the $100,000 reward fund is being circulated?"

Witness Gibson was recalled and corroborated Barkleroad's testimony.

Attorneys for the prosecution rigidly cross-examined these witnesses and made one of them (James Barkleroad, of Barboursville) admit that he had been indicted not less than a dozen times for violations of law.

The most important witness of the day was Daniel R. Collier, of Lancaster, adjutant general of Kentucky under the Taylor administration. He offered as testimony the written order of Gov. Taylor directing him to bring the regiments of state guards to Frankfort after the shooting of Senator Goebel and ordering him to confer with the civil authorities of Franklin county as to how best to preserve peace there. This was the first appearance of the document, which was never made a part of the state records, and Judge Cantrill ruled it out as incompetent on objection of the prosecution that it was not in accordance with the statutes of the state, not directing Collier to place the militia under direction of the civil authorities.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 5.—Adjt. Gen. Collier, whose direct examination was concluded at the adjournment of court Friday afternoon, was placed on the witness stand Saturday morning for cross examination. Attorney John K. Hendrick conducted it. Witness told of keeping soldiers at the state arsenal at Frankfort prior to the shooting, but could not remember whether he had brought any arms into the state capital grounds. He admitted having refused to allow civil officers to go into the executive building to execute the writ of habeas corpus, saying that he had orders from Gov. Taylor to do so.

Over the objection of the defense, Judge Cantrill allowed the prosecution to show by the witness that on two occasions prior to January 30, the day of the Colson-Scott duel, and of the arrival of 1,200 armed mountain petitioners, the feeling at Frankfort was intense and that no soldiers were then called to preserve peace.

Witness was closely cross-examined as to movements of troops and arms during month following assassination. He said that he never before the shooting of Gov. Goebel heard any one say that the best way to settle the contest was to kill him. Witness told of preventing by military force the assembling of the legislature in the city of Frankfort on the day following the shooting. The defense objected to witness stating that he went to the Capital hotel, where the wounded man lay, and warned the proprietor that he would close his hotel if he permitted the assembly to meet there, claiming the question to be incompetent. The jury was sent out and argument made. The judge admonished the jury upon its return that all evidence of the witness concerning incidents which happened after the shooting should be considered only to his interest. Witness then stated that he did give such warning to the hotel proprietor.

Witness Collier left the stand after two hours and Rev. C. T. Cody, of Georgetown, was next called. He testified of meeting Wharton Golden about March 21st, at home of Witness John Stamper, and of Golden saying that he had made a confession only for his own protection. On cross-examination prosecution brought out that witness had displayed much interest in the case on the side of the defense, working in conjunction with the attorneys.

Reuben N. Miller, of Breckinridge county, but later of Indianapolis, Ind., was next placed on the stand. He was in the general reception-room of the office of the secretary of state, next to the private office of the defendant when Goebel was shot. He heard five shots. The first shot seemed to come from outside the executive building. Gov. Taylor came from his private office into the room and inquired what was happening outside, at this juncture the court adjourned until afternoon.

MISSOURI FEUD REVIVED.

Four Men Killed and One Fatally Wounded the Outcome of a Shooting Affray.

Farmington, Mo., Aug. 6.—Four men killed and one fatally wounded is the outcome of a shooting affair between Wm. Dooley and his four sons on one side, and the four Harris brothers on the other, as a result of a feud at Doe Run, one of the mining towns of St. Francis county. Wm. Dooley, Wess Harris, James Harris and John Dooley are the names of the killed, and Frank Harris was fatally wounded.

A young girl, Mary Littrell, was struck just above the ankle with a rifle ball.

A few days ago the Harris boys sent out word to Dooley's that they would be at a picnic at Doe Run and intended to run the Dooley's off the grounds. Just how the shooting began is not clear, but once begun, it was deadly. All the Harris boys except one were shot. One was killed instantly.

Three of the Dooley boys who were unhurt came to Farmington and gave themselves up. They are in jail.

A SMALL BLACK BUG.

The Insect Makes Its Home in Mushrooms, and is a Deadly Poison.

Chicago, Aug. 5.—It was developed at the inquest upon the membersenf the Norris family, three of whom died Thursday at Harvey, Ill., supposenly from eating toadstools, that they were in fact poisoned by mushrooms and not by toadstools. It was shown that the family ate mushrooms of the finest quality and not toadstools.

Robert Martin, a mushroom expert, testified that in his opinion the poisoning was caused by a small black bug, which he said he had recently found making its home in the top of mushrooms. He said: "I found some of these bugs in mushrooms, and noticed that they exuded a viscous fluid, which surrounded them as they lay in the mushroom. I placed the bugs and the portion of the mushroom immediately surrounding them in a saucer of milk, fed the milk to a cat and two hours the feline was dead."

ASSISTANT CONDUCTOR.

New York, Aug. 5.—Some of the railroads are considering the advisability of abandoning the time-honored title of brakeman on passenger trains and calling him assistant conductor. The brakes on passenger trains are no longer worked by hand, but by air, and therefore, it is argued that the old title is a misnomer.

"The name brakeman," said a railroad man, "has been a misnomer ever since brakemen ceased to be brakemen—that is, when air brakes came into use. A brakeman nowadays has nothing whatever to do with the brakes. He simply attends to signals, calls names of stations and otherwise assists in conducting the trains. The change to 'assistant conductor' is logical, because these men are frequently promoted to conductors. Besides, it would tend to raise the standard of the calling."

This question of a change of title will probably be taken up at the next meeting of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, which is made up principally of brakemen and all the roads will be asked to adopt this change.

Itching Burning Scaly Blotchy Humors

Instantly Relieved and Speedily Cured by

Cuticura

The itching and burning I suffered in my feet and limbs for three years were terrible. At night they were worse and would keep me awake a greater part of the night. I consulted doctor after doctor, as I was traveling on the road most of my time, also one of our city doctors. None of the doctors knew what the trouble was. I got a lot of the different samples of the medicines I had been using. I found them of so many different kinds that I concluded I would have to go to a Cincinnati hospital before I would get relief. I had frequently been urged to try CUTICURA REMEDIES, but I had no faith in them. My wife finally prevailed upon me to try them. Presto! What a change! I am now cured, and it is a permanent cure. I feel like kicking some doctor or myself for suffering three years when I could have used CUTICURA remedies. H. JENKINS, Middleboro, Ky.

THE MARCH ON PEKING

The International Relief Force is Now Reported to Be Half Way to Lofa.

The Force Includes 20,000 Japanese, 10,000 Russians, 9,000 British and 7,000 Other Foreign Troops.

It is Thought By Washington Officials That the Legations Are Still Safe From Harm.

A Strong Force Of Chinese Troops Made An Attack On Tien-Tsin As Soon As the Allies Had Departed For Peking.

Washington, Aug. 3.—The state department has made public the following correspondence between Li Hung Chang and the department regarding the abandonment of the campaign in Peking:

"Telegrams sent to the United States embassies in Berlin, London, Paris, Rome and St. Petersburg and to the United States minister at Tokio.

"Department of State, Washington, August, 1, 1900. In reply to a suggestion of Li Hung Chang that the ministers might be sent under safe escort to Tien-Tsin provide the powers would engage not to march on Peking, the secretary of state replied on the 30th of July:

"This government will not enter into any arrangement regarding disposition or treatment of legations without first having free communication with Minister Conger. Responsibility for their protection rests upon Chinese government. Power to deliver at Tien-Tsin pre-supposes power to protect and to open communication. This is insisted on."

This message was delivered by Mr. Goodnow on the 31st to Viceroy Li, who then inquired whether, "if free communication were established between ministers and their governments, it could be arranged that the powers should not advance on Peking pending negotiations.

To this inquiry the following reply was sent on the first of August:

"Goodnow, consul general, Shanghai:

"I do not think it expedient to submit the proposition of Earl Li to the other powers. Free communication with our representatives in Peking is demanded as a matter of absolute right and not as a favor. Since the Chinese government admits that it possesses the power to give communication, it puts itself in an unfriendly attitude by denying it. No negotiations seem advisable until the Chinese government shall have put the diplomatic representatives of the powers in full and free communication with the respective governments and removed all danger to their lives and liberty. We would urge Earl Li earnestly to advise the imperial authorities of China to place themselves in friendly communication and co-operation with the relief expedition. They are assuming a heavy responsibility in acting otherwise.

"(Signed) HAY."

London, Aug. 6.—The American and British forces began the advance on Peking last Thursday, according to a dispatch dated August 2 from Tien-Tsin to the Daily Express. "The main body of the allies," continues the correspondent, "marched July 30. Gen. Chaffee was delayed by difficulties of disembarkation. Gen. Dorward, the British commander, had no such obstacles, and his delay is inexplicable. The other foreign troops are now half way to Lofa. The force includes 20,000 Japanese under Gen. Yamuchuchi and 10,000 Russians. The British force totals 9,000 and the other foreign troops are 7,000. We are weak in artillery.

"On August 1 a strong force of Chinese from the native city attacked Tien-Tsin. By a series of brilliant charges our troops drove them from their positions. The native city is still defiant, and the Nanies are unwilling to march troops through its streets, as this would mean an immense slaughter. When the Chinese saw so large a body of troops marching westward, they apparently believed they would have an easy victory over those who were left."

A message to the same paper from a correspondent in Peking dated July 22 says: "The women have borne all the horrors with marvelous fortitude, and even with cheerfulness. The Chinese wanted peace when the arsenals at Tien-Tsin were captured, and it bade fair to be successful. Unfortunately Li Ping Heng and Yang Yu arrived here at the critical moment and overthrew the peace party.

"Food has been short, but not terrible so, though we have had to be very careful."

A Shanghai dispatch dated August 4 says: "The first overt attack upon foreigners occurred this morning. Three Chinese, supposed to be soldiers in disguise, fired at a well known English resident while he was lying asleep on the veranda of his house. He had a narrow escape.

The Shanghai correspondent of the Daily Mail announces the reception of an imperial edict dated August 2, ordering Gen. Yung Lu to select high military and civil dignitaries together with sufficient number of picked troops, to escort the foreign ministers to Tien-Tsin as soon as they desire to leave Peking. By the terms of the edict Gen. Yung Lu will be held personally responsible for their safety, and he is given full authority to deal summarily with those opposing the peaceful passage of the escort.

"By such acts," concludes the edict, "do we show our good intentions to people from a far and open our bosoms to them."

There is a renewal of the rumor that something is occurring at Shan Hai Kwan, at the eastern end of the great wall which will surprise the Chinese. There is a firm military road from this point to Peking over high and dry ground, and although the distance is nearly twice that from Tien-Tsin, to Peking, its physical advantages may make this route practically much shorter in point of time. It is believed here that a strong Russian column, either has been or will be, landed at that point to converge on Peking simultaneously with the international column, and thus divide the Chinese opposing forces.

Paris, Aug. 6.—The French foreign office has received the following dispatch from the French consul at Chefoo, dated August 2: "The governor of Moukden, in a proclamation, has urged the people of Mancburia to massacre Christians. Nearly all of the missions have been destroyed. The missionaries have organized for defense and are assisted by other Christians."

Shanghai, Aug. 6.—The report that Li Hung Chang had committed suicide is without foundation. He is only in a very despondent state.

The Japanese consul here has received a message from Peking saying that Gen. Tung Fuh Siang has stopped all provisions going to the legation.

Adm. Seymour has arrived at Shanhai.

Paris, Aug. 6.—Cheng director general of railway and telegraphs, has just communicated to the consuls at Shanghai according to a dispatch to The Temps, dated August 5, an imperial troops dated August 2 authorizing the foreign ministers in Peking to communicate without restriction with their governments and ordering their departure for Tien-Tsin under a good escort.

Paris, Aug. 6.—The Shanghai correspondent of the Temps says: "The number of allies leaving Tien-Tsin is no better known here than are the facts as to the march itself, but it is rumored that the advance guard has been repulsed."

Brussels, Aug. 6.—The Belgin consul at Tien-Tsin, M. H. Ketels in a despatch via Chee Foo, August 4, via Shanghai August 5, says that the Chinese in Peking are fortifying their position outside the British Legation. He adds that all the members of the Belgian legation are in good health.

Washington, Aug. 6.—A belated message from Minister Conger was received at the state department. It came through Consul General Goodnow, at Shanghai, who transmitted messages received by Mr. Ragsdale, United States consul at Tien-Tsin, from Mr. Conger and Mr. Squiers, secretary of the United States legation at Peking. The advices are the same as those received a day or two ago by the state department from Consul Fowler at Chefoo. Mr. Goodnow's message was transmitted to President McKinley at Canton, and Mr. Adee, acting secretary of state, later issued the following statement concerning it:

"Consul General Goodnow, in a telegram dated Shanghai, August 5, which was received at the department of state at 4 o'clock Sunday morning, reports the receipt by Consul Ragsdale at Tien-Tsin of messages from Minister Conger and the secretary of the legation, Mr. Squiers, dated July 24, to the following effect:

"'All well; no fighting since the 16th by agreement. Enough provisions. Hope for speedy relief.'

"Mr. Goodnow adds that the director of posts, Shang, had on the 5th communicated to him an imperial edict dated July 30, ordering Jung Lu to provide an escort for the ministers to Tien-Tsin when the ministers fix the date. The edict says the ministers can receive messages, not in cipher, but notwithstanding this plain messages were returned to some consuls on August 4."

While the messages from Minister Conger and Secretary Squiers bear the date of July 24, the belief, founded not only upon them, but also on collateral and later information, is that the legations are yet safe from immediate harm. At present there is no means of knowing whether the ministers will accept the offer of the Chinese imperial government to provide an escort for them to Tien-Tsin but it is surmised that they will prefer to remain within the British legation at Peking until the arrival of the allied forces. Should they leave for Tien-Tsin in all probability it would be because they regarded it the safer course to pursue. It is thought to be not unlikely that the Chinese government may be very insistent upon the departure of the ministers in the hope if they can be gotten to Tien-Tsin in safety, the storming of Peking may be averted.

THE SHAH OF PERSIA.

An Attempt to Assassinate Him Made in Paris.

The Would-Be Assassin Was Immediately Placed Under Arrest—He Refused to Give His Name or His Nationality.

Paris, Aug. 3.—An attempt on the life of the Shah of Persia, Muzaffer-Ed-Din, was made Thursday morning, but luckily it resulted in no harm to his majesty.

Paris, Aug. 3.—An eye-witness of the attempt to assassinate the shah of Persia, Muzaffer-Ed-Din gives the following account of the affair:

When the gate of the palace opened the first carriage to appear contained the shah. He sat at the right-hand side of the carriage, with his doctor at his side. Opposite was the grand vizier and at his side Gen. Parent, the personal aide of the shah. They were on their way to the Pont Alexander III., where they were to take the boat on the Seine to Sevres to visit the pottery works there. The landau turned to the left toward the Avenue Bois do Boulogne. It had not gone far when a man dressed as a carpenter rushed toward the carriage and put his right foot on the step, resting his left hand on the door to assist him to mount. Then, drawing his right hand from his pocket, he pushed it toward the breast of the shah. This hand carried a revolver.

The shah was surprised, but did not really pay much attention to the man until he perceived the weapon. Then he bounded aside, and, standing up in the landau, lifted a cane, a second later bringing it down upon the head of his assailant. At the same moment the grand vizier jumped to his feet and seized the man by the arm and twisted his wrist, actually raising him from the ground. The grand vizier is a veritable giant, and without apparent effort he held the aggressor suspended in the air. Then a policeman following on a bicycle jumped from his machine and, grasping the man, drew him back. Other police arrived and the man was overpowered and led away.

The shah did not appear to be excited by the attempt on his life, and when the man was taken away he reseated himself in his carriage and quietly spoke in Persian to the grand vizier. Then he said to the coachman, "Drive on," and the carriage proceeded by the Alexander III. bridge, where a boat was taken for Sevres.

Thursday afternon the shah carried out his program for a trip down the Seine to Versailles. The would-be assassin declines absolutely to give his name or nationality.

The pistol carried by the would-be murderer was of the bulldog type, loaded with nine cartridges. When the police seized the man he tried to break away and cried, "Vive children, people."

An officer tried to stop him, but he shouted, "To my assistance, friends." When he quieted down and submitted. When the knife was found on his person an officer remarked:

"You also had a knife," to which the man replied:

"Yes, I took some precaution."

"Why did you attempt to assassinate the shah?" the officer asked.

"Because," was the reply, "it pleased me. That does not concern you." To all other questions the prisoner remained dumb.

Will Not Visit England.

London, Aug. 3.—The shah's visit to England has been virtually abandoned, according to the Times, on account of the attempt to assassinate him in Paris.

To Murder Rulers of Europe.

Rome, Aug. 3.—It is believed here that there is an international anarchist plot to murder the rulers of Europe. The plan is to inaugurate a fortnight of murder and blood that will startle the world and set the anarchists' societies all over the world wild with bloody enthusiasm. The king of Italy lies dead in his palace, the king of Servia has narrowly escaped death and the shah of Persia's life was attempted. Thursday Bresci, King Humbert's assassin declares the czar of Russia will be the next to fall.

TO THE ITALIAN PEOPLE.

King Victor Emmanuel III. Has Issued His First Proclamation to His Subjects.

Monza, Aug. 4.—King Victor Emmanuel III. has addressed the following proclamation to the Italian people:

"The second king of Italy is dead. Escaping, thanks to his valor as a soldier, the danger of battle, and departing unharmed, thanks to Providence, from the risks he confronted so courageously to end public calamities, this good and virtuous king fell a victim to atrocious crime while with easy conscience and without fear of danger he was participating in the joys of his people in their fetes.

"It was not permitted to me to be present at the last breath of my father; but I understand my first duty to be to follow the counsels he left me and to imitate the virtues of the king, the first citizen of Italy.

"In this moment of profound sadness I have to add me the strength which comes from the examples of my august father and of that great king who deserves to be called the 'Father of His Country.' I have also as a support the strength which comes from the love and devotion of the Italian people for the king whom they venerated and weep for.

"There remain to us the institutions which he loyally preserved and which he attempted to render permanent during the 22 years of his reign. These institutions are given to me as the sacred traditions of my house, and the warm love which Italians have for them, protected with a firm and energetic hand from assault or any violence, from whatever source it comes, assures me. I am certain of the prosperity and grandeur of the country. It was the glory of my grandfather to have given Italy its unity and independence. It was the glory of my father to have jealously guarded this unity and this independence to the end.

"My reign shall be outlined by these imperishable remembrances. May God aid me, and may the love of my people fortify me so that I may concentrate all my cares as a king to the guardianship of liberty and the defense of the monarchy, united by indissoluble bonds for the supreme interest of the country.

"Italians, render your tribute of tears and honor to the sacred memory of Humbert of Savoy. You, in the bitter sorrow which has struck my house, have shown that you consider this sorrow as thought it were that of each individual among you.

"This solidity of thought and affection will always be the most certain bulwark of my reign and the best guarantee of the country which united in the august name of intangible Rome, symbol of grandeur and pledge of integrity for Italy. Such are my hopes, such is my ambition as a citizen and as king."

Lieut. W. L. Alstaetter is a native of Ohio, from which state he was appointed to the military academy, June 21, 1893. He received his present commission June 7, 1897.

Manila, Aug. 6.—There has been an increase of insurgent activity during the last three weeks, especially in the way of ambushes and attacks upon small parties. First Lieut. Alstetter, of the engineer corps, with an escort of 15 men, was taken in ambush in the province of Nenva Ecija, Luzon, by a large force. The Americans fought until their ammunition was gone and as they were surrounded there was nothing to do but surrender. One man was killed and three were wounded. Gen. Lacuna, who was in command of the insurgents, returned the wounded with a letter promising to treat the prisoners well. Lieut. Boeton Hulesburg was ambushed and killed near Santa Cruz, province of Laguna.

Capt. Lara, of the Manila native police, was dangerously shot by an unknown assailant while on the street. He had been effectively enforcing regulations and had made enemies among the Filipinos, some of whom have long threatened vengeance. Lara had been generally accused of gross corruption in office and specific charges were filed against him by an American officer.

A FARMERS' TRUST.

A $20,000,000 Company Projected—Warehouses to Be Established in Eastern Cities.

Topeka, Kan., Aug. 5.—The formation of a stupendous farmers' trust to control prices of all natural products is the object of a national conference of farmers and farmers' organizations, has been called to meet in Topeka, August 7, by James Butler, of Topeka, secretary of the farmers' federation. It is proposed to organize a corporation, with $20,000,000 capital, with shares of $10 each. Each farmer holding a share is entitled to enjoy all the privileges of the trust. Warehouses are to be established in several of the larger cities, through which all agricultural products are to be handled and sold. BRESCI HAD ACCOMPLICES.

Four or Five Suspects Seen Around the Royal Carriage When the King Was Shot.

Rome, Aug. 4.—According to declarations made to the Milan police by persons who witnessed the assassination of King Humbert, and especially the king's footmen, four or five persons, wearing around their necks black handkerchiefs such as Bresci wore, were seen around the royal carriage at the time of the crime. After it was committed they began shouting, evidently to increase the confusion and help Bresci escape.

Il Corriere Della Italia says the police have discovered that a huge plot was formed in America to murder King Humbert, and that his assassination was to be followed by similar crimes throughout Europe.

Another discovery is, that Bresci last Tuesday entered the royal chapel of the villa during mass, evidently with intention of assassinating Humbert if he went there.

GAETANO BRESCI.

The Man Who Killed King Humbert, from a Photograph Taken Four Years Ago.

A man suspected of being an accomplice of Bresci was arrested at a railway station here. He had recently arrived from the United States, and will be sent to Monza for inspection.

Notwithstanding the most thorough search, the will of King Humbert has not yet been found. Count Brambilla has arrived in Rome to continue the search, which is retarding the arrangements for the funeral.

MRS. SOPHIE BRESCI.

Wife of the Assassin of King Humbert.

PLOT TO KILL KING HUMBERT.

Governor of New Jersey Investigating to See if It Was Hatched In His State.

New York, Aug. 4.—Gov. Voorhees admitted at his home in Elizabeth, N. J., that steps had been taken to investigate the allegations that the plot to kill King Humbert and other monarchs had been hatched in New Jersey. If the evidence can be procured, and there are still some of those concerned living in the state, they will be prosecuted. The investigation is not complete, and probably will not be until information from Italy enables it to be conducted minutely.

The governor does not consider the situation at either Paterson or West Hoboken as serious. He does not think the anarchists at either place would do anything locally that would bring them into prominence.

Remains Placed in the Casket.

Monza, Aug. 4.—The remains of King Humbert were Friday placed in a casket of walnut, covered with lead and glass in such a manner as to leave the face exposed. UNION, - - - - - - - - - - KENTUCKY.

The death of Esq. M. B. Green, of Bellevue, was heard of here with sorrow, Tuesday morning. As is known he had been in bad health for several months, and last Saturday, he went to Bellevue, and upon his return home he was taken worse, but had improved so much that he went to Bellevue, Monday, to vote. Upon his return home he took a chill and continued to grow worse until he died. Esquire Green was one of the oldest residents of the Bellevue neighborhood, and his people held him in the very highest esteem. He was elected justice of the peace by them about 45 years ago, a position he filled continuously, except two or three years, until his death. He was always a leading spirit in county affairs, and looked well to the people's interest, and in his death the county loses one of its best citizens, one against whom no words of just criticism could be spoken. He lead a quiet, upright, unostentatious life, a shining, excellent example for his fellowman. His death removes from the community one whose place will be hard to fill.

The Burlington and Hebron base ball teams met at the park here, Monday, and played a redhot game in the presence of about 500 spectators. In the eighth inning a dispute arose over a decision by the umpire calling foul a ball knocked by a Hebron player, and for a while it looked like the riot alarm would have to be sounded and the militia called out. Below is the score by innings:

One of the most enjoyable affairs it has ever been my privilege to attend occurred at the home of John Hogan, on the 30th of July, that day being the 66th anniversary of his birth, and the reunion of the descendants of Mrs. Elizabeth Bruce, who has been in the 81st year of her age since the 18th day of last June, and notwithstanding her age she is hale and hearty and enjoyed the occasion equal to any of the young people present.

All of Mrs. Bruce's children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, except four or five, were present, who with her sons-in-law, and sister, nephew and wife and daughter and a few friends, made an assemblage of 60 persons, and you can rest assured the day was enjoyed by all to the utmost limit. Music, krokinole, croquet and some politics by way of variety, were indulged in as diversions.

When dinner was announced—good Lord! I feel that my pen can not do it justice in attempting a description, and I will simply say it was grand, and before the repast was concluded, I began to feel somewhat alarmed by the quantity of provisions some of the guests were stowing away, and I feared they would have no appetite for at least one week, but how easy it is for frail humanity to be mistaken, for early in the afternoon supper was announced, and soon a repetition of the noon performance was begun, and each one present appeared to be laying in a fall's supply of good things. After the appetites of all were satisfied the proverbial seven baskets full were taken away, as John Hogan said he did not belong to any trust and does not propose going into any monopoly.

John Hogan, our host, is a host indeed, and when he goes into anything along the line of entertaining he cannot be excelled. I know whereof I speak, as this is not the first time I have had the pleasure of attending these anniversaries at his house. It has been a custom for many years to have these alternately at his house and at Mike Rouse's, his brother-in-law, whose birth day occurs on the same day of the month, and next year, if nothing happens, it will be at Mr. Rouse's, and if I live, and am able, I shall try and be on hand to assist in disposing of some of the good things that will be there.

Hoping that these two families may have many more of these reunions, and that the good old mother and grandmother may still be with them, I remain one of those who knows a good thing when he sees it. B. S.

Death of Perry E. Baldon.

Perry E. Baldon died Wednesday, June 27th, 1900, at 12:40 o'clock, at his home, 1¼ miles above Carrollton, Ky., on the Ohio river, after a continued sickness of about 19 months, the last six weeks and five days of which were endured with intense suffering, being confined to his bed during that time. He was carried away by a complication of diseases. He was a devoted husband, tender father, true christian, industrious, honest, clever, upright and accommodating man. Although, he was known to be sick, it was a surprising shock to his many friends to learn of his death.

He was born on Woolper creek, in Boone county, Ky., Sept. 20, 1853, and was 46 years, 9 month and 7 days old when he died. He was a son Simmon and Parthenia Baldon. He leaves two brothers, one sister and mother, his father, one brother and one sister having gone before. He was married to Miss Emma Guillon, of Gallatin county, April 24, 1879. They were blessed with eight children, three of which have gone on to beckon him home—two little boys and a little girl. The wife and five children survive him, the oldest and youngest being boys, aged 20 and 4 respectively, the other three girls aged 15, 11 and 6.

Mr. Baldon came to this county ten years ago last March, during that time he had lived in several sections, where he was always found to be honest and clever with all who knew him. He united with the Baptist church at Northville, Ky., November 23, 1897, and was a true, faithful and active member. During his sickness he talked much of going back to his old friends in Boone county. It was his desire to be with them again.

The funeral took place at the home Thursday at 2 o'clock, a large crowd of grief stricken relatives and friends being present. Divine services were conducted by Rev. J. F. Jones, assisted by Rev. O. M. Hney. Bro. Jones preached an exceedingly appropriate sermon. He read from the 1st to the 23d verses of the 8th chapter of Romans. The speaker paid high tribute to the character of the deceased as a personal friend, good citizen and faithful christian. The remains were interred in Gap Hill cemetery. Let us prepare to meet him in the joys of heaven, where we come to pay the debt common to all.

"Through the months of June and July our baby was teething and took a running off of the bowels and sickness of the stomach," says O. P. M. Holliday, of Deming, Ind. "His bowels would move from five to eight times a day. I had a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in the house and gave him four drops in a teaspoonfull of water and he got better at once. Sold by W. F. McKim, Burlington; Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg; C. S. Baisly, Bullittsville; O. N. Grant, Bellevue.

Following is the vote by precincts as cast in this county Monday for Senator:

THE TRUE RELIGION.

Dr. Talmage Says It Must Be from Heaven.

From Trondhjem, Norway, where Dr. Talmage is now staying, he sends the following discourse, in which he shows that the world can never be benefited by a religion of human manufacture, which easily yields to one's surroundings, but must have a religion let down from Heaven; text, Amos 7:8; "And the Lord said unto me, Amos, what seest thou? And I said, A plumb line."

The solid masonry of the world has for me a fascination. Walk about some of the triumphal arches and the cathedrals 400 or 600 years old, and see them stand as erect as when they were built, walls of great height, for centuries not bending a quarter of an inch [illegible] Sat. So greatly honored were the masons who builded these walls that they were free from taxation and called "free" masons. The trowel gets most of the credit for these buildings, and its clear ringing on stone and brick has sounded across the ages. But there is another implement of just as much importance as the trowel, and my text recognizes it. Bricklayers and stonemasons and carpenters, in the building of walls, use an instrument made of a cord, at the end of which a lump of lead is fastened. They drop it over the side of the wall, and, as the plummet naturally seeks the center of gravity in the earth, the workman discovers where the wall recedes and where it bulges out and just what is the perpendicular. Our text represents God as standing on the wall of character which the lunelites had built and in that way testing it. "And the Lord said unto me, Amos, what seest thou? And I said, A plumb line."

What the world wants is straight up and down religion. Much of the so-called piety of the day bends this way and that to suit the times. It is oblique, with a low state of sentiment and morals. We have all been building a wall of character, and it is glaringly imperfect and needs reconstruction. How shall it be brought into perpendicular? Only by the Divine measurement. "And the Lord said unto me, Amos, what seest thou? And I said, A plumb line."

The whole tendency of the times is to make us act by the standard of what others do. We throw over the wall of our character the tangled plumb line of other lives and reject the infallible test which Amos saw. The question for me should not be what you think is right, but what God thinks is right. This perpetual reference to the behavior of others, as though it decided anything but human fallibility, is a mistake wide as the world. There are 10,000 plumb lines in use, but only one is true and exact, and that is the line of God's eternal right. There is a mighty attempt being made to reconstruct and tone up the Ten Commandments. To many they seem too rigid. The tower of Pisa leans over about 13 feet from the perpendicular, and people go thousands of miles to see its graceful inclination and to learn how, by extra braces and various architectural contrivances, it is kept leaning from century to century. Why not have the ten granite blocks of Sinai set a little aslant? Why not have the pillar of truth a leaning tower? Why is not an ellipse as good as a square? Why is not an oblique as good as straight up and down? My friends, we must have a standard. Shall it be God's or man's?

The Divine plumb line needs to be thrown over all merchandise. Thousands of years ago Solomon discovered the tendency of buyers to depreciate goods. He saw a man beating down an article lower and lower and saying it was not worth the price asked, and when he had purchased at the lowest point he told everybody what a sharp bargain he had struck and how he outwitted the merchant. "It is naught, saith the buyer, out when he is gone his way, then he boasteth" (Proverbs 20:14). Society is so utterly askew in this matter that you seldom find a seller asking the price he expects to get; he puts on a higher value than he expects to receive, knowing that he will have to drop. And if he wants $50, he asks $75. And if he wants $2,000, he asks $2,500. "It is naught," saith the buyer. "The fabric is defective; the style of goods is poor; I can get elsewhere a better article at a smaller price. It is out of fashion; it is damaged; it will fade; it will not wear well." After awhile the merchant, from overpersuasion or from desire to dispose of that particular stock of goods, says: "Well, take it at your own price," and the purchaser goes home with light step and calls into his private office his confidential friends and chuckles while he tells how for half price he got the goods. In other words, he lied and was proud of it.

Nothing would make times so good and the earning of a livelihood so easy as the universal adoption of the law of right. Suspicion strikes through all bargain making. Men who sell know not whether they will ever get the money. Purchasers know not whether the goods shipped will be according to the sample. And what, with the large number of clerks who are making false entries and then absconding and the explosion of firms that fail for millions of dollars, honest men are at their wits' end to make a living. He who stands up amid all the pressure and does right is accomplishing something toward the establishment of a high commercial prosperity. I have deep sympathy for the laboring classes who toil with hand and foot. But we must not forget the business men who, without any complaint or bannered procession through the street, are enduring a stress of circumstances terrific. The fortunate people of to-day are those who are receiving daily wages or regular salaries. And the men most to be pitied are those who conduct a business while prices are falling and yet try to pay their clerks and employes and are in such fearful straits that they would quit business to-morrow if it were not for the wreck and ruin of others. When people tell me at what a ruinously low price they purchased an article, it gives me more dismay than satisfaction. I know it means the bankruptcy and defalcation of men in many departments. The men who toil with the brain need full as much sympathy as those who toil with the hand. All business life is struck through with suspicion, and panics are the result of want of confidence.

The pressure to do wrong is stronger from the fact that in our day the large business houses are swallowing up the smaller, the whales dining on bluefish and minnows. The large houses undersell the small ones, because they buy in greater quantities and at lower figures from the producer. They can afford to make selling, or actually lose, on some styles of goods, assured they can make it up on others. So, a great dry goods house goes outside of its regular line and sells books at cost or less than cost, and that swamps the bookseller; or the dry goods house sells brica-brac at lowest figures, and that swamps the small dealer in brica-brac. And the same thing goes on in other styles of merchandise, and the consequence is that all along the business streets of all our cities there are merchants of small capital who are in terrific struggle to keep their heads above water. The ocean liners run down the Newfoundland fishing smacks. This is nothing against the man who has the big store, for every man has as large a store and as great a business as he can manage.

To feel right and do right under all this pressure requires martyr grace, requires divine support, requires celestial reenforcement. Yet there are tens of thousands of such men getting splendidly through. They see others going up and themselves going down, but they keep their patience and their courage and their Christian consistency, and after awhile their success will come. There is generally retribution in some form for greediness. The owners of the big business will die, and their boys will get possession of the business, and with a cigar in their mouths, and full to the chins with the best liquor and behind a pair of spanking bays, they will pass everything on the turnpike road to temporal and eternal perdition. Then the business will break up and the smaller dealers will have fair opportunity. Or the spirit of contentment and right feeling will take possession of the large firm, as recently with a famous business house, and the firm will say: "We have enough money for all our needs and the needs of our children. Now let us dissolve business and make way for other men in the same line." Instead of being startled at a solitary instance of magnanimity, it will become a common thing. I know of scores of great business houses that have had their opportunity of vast accumulation and who ought to quit, but perhaps for all the days of this generation the struggle of small houses to keep alive under the overshadowing pressure of great houses will continue; therefore, taking things as they are, you will be wise to preserve your faith and throw over all the counters and shelves and casks the measuring line of divine right. "And the Lord said unto me: Amos, what seest thou? And I said: A plumb line."

In the same way we need to rectify our theologies. All sorts of religions are putting forth their pretensions. Some have a spiritualistic religion, and their chief work is with ghosts, and others a religion of political economy, proposing to put an end to human misery by a new style of taxation, and there is a humanitarian religion that looks after the bodies of men and lets the soul look after itself, and there is a legislative religion that propounds to men by statutes and by enactment of better laws, and there is an aesthetic religion that has rules of exquisite taste would lift the heart out of its deformities, and religions of all sorts, religions by the peck, religions by the square foot and religions by the ton—all of them devices of the devil that would take the heart away from the only religion that will ever effect anything for the human race, and that is the straight up and down religion written in the book which begins with Genesis and ends with Revelation, the religion of the skies, the old religion, the God-given religion, the everlasting religion, which says: "Love God above all and your neighbor as yourself." All religions but one begin at the wrong end and in the wrong place. The Bible religion demands that we first get right with God. It begins at the top and measures down, while the other religions begin at the bottom and try to measure up. They stand at the foot of the wall, up to their knees in the mud of human theory and speculation, and have a plummet and a string tied fast to it, and they throw the plummet this way and break a head here and throw the plummet another way and break a head there, and then they throw it up, and it comes down upon their own pate. Fools! Why stand at the foot of the wall rectifying up when you ought to stand at the top rectifying down? I was in the country, thirsty after a long walk. And I came in, and my child was blowing soap bubbles, and they rolled out of the cup blue and gold and green and sparkling and beautiful and orbicular, and in so small a space I never saw more splendor concentrated. But she blew once too often, and all the glory vanished into suds. Then I turned and took a glass of water and was refreshed. And so far as soul thirst is concerned I put against all the blowing, glittering soap bubbles of worldly reform and human speculation one draft from the fountain from under the throne of God clear as crystal. Glory be to God for the religion that drops from above, not coming up from beneath! "And the Lord said unto me, Amos, what seest thou? And I said, A plumb line."

I want you to notice this fact, that when a man gives up the straight up and down religion of the Bible for any new fangled religion, it is generally to suit his sins. You first hear of his change of religion, and then you hear of some swindle he has practiced in a special mining stock, telling some one if he will put in $10,000 he can take out $100,000; or he has sacrificed his integrity or plunged into irremediable [illegible] his sins are so broad he has to broaden his religion, and he becomes as broad as temptation, as broad as the soul's darkness, as broad as hell. They want a religion that will allow them to keep their sins and then at death say to them: "Well done, good and faithful servant," and then tells them: "All is well, for there is no hell." What a glorious Heaven they hold before us! Come, let us go in and see it. There are Herod and all the babes he massacred. There are Charles Guiteau and Robespierre, the feeder of the French guillotine, and all the liars, thieves, house burners, garroters, pickpockets and libertines of all the centuries. They have all got crowns and thrones and harps and scepters, and when they chant they sing: "Thanksgiving and honor and glory and power to the broad religion that lets us all into Heaven without repentance and without faith in those humiliating dogmas of ecclesiastical old fogyism."

My text gives me a grand opportunity of saying a useful word to all young men who are now forming habits for a lifetime. Of what use to a stonemason or a bricklayer is a plumb line? Why not build the wall by the unaided eye and hand? Because they are insufficient, because if there be a deflection in the wall it cannot further on be corrected. Because by the law of gravitation a wall must be straight in order to be symmetrical and safe.

One of the best friends I ever had died of delirium tremens at 40 years of age, though he had not since 21 years of age, before which he had been dissipated, touched intoxicating liquor until that particular carousal that took him off. Not reeling well in the street on a hot summer day he stepped into a drug store, just as you and I would have done, and asked for a dose of something to make him feel better. And there was alcohol in the dose, and that one drop aroused the old appetite, and he entered the first liquor store and staid there until thoroughly under the power of rum. He entered his home a raving maniac, his wife and daughters fleeing from his presence, and at first he was taken to the city hospital to die.

Remember that the wall may be 100 feet high, and yet a deflection one foot from the foundation affects the entire structure. And if you live 100 years and do right the last 80 years you may nevertheless do something at 20 years of age that will damage all your earthly existence. All you who have built houses for yourselves or for others, am I not right in saying to these young men, you cannot build a wall so high as to be independent of the character of its foundation? A man before 25 years of age may commit enough sin to last him a lifetime. Now, John or George or Henry, or whatever be your Christian name or surname, say here and now: "No wild oats for me, no cigars or cigarettes for me, no wine or beer for me, no nasty stories for me, no Sunday sprees for me. I am going to start right and keep on right. God help me, for I am very weak. From the throne of eternal righteousness let down to me the principles by which I can be guided in building everything from foundation to capstone. Lord God, by the wounded hand of Christ throw me a plumb line."

"But," you say, "you shut us young folks out from all fun." Oh, no! I like fun. I believe in fun. I have had lots of it in my time. But I have not had to go into paths of sin to find it. No credit to me, but because of an extraordinary parental example and influence I was kept from outward transgressions, though my heart was bad enough and desperately wicked. I have had fun illimitable, though I never swore one oath and never gambled for so much as the value of a pin and never saw the inside of a haunt of sin save as when many years ago, with a commissioner of police and a detective and two elders of my church, I explored New York and Brooklyn by midnight, not out of curiosity, but that I might in pulpit discourse set before the people the poverty and the horrors of unprincipled city life. Yet, though I was never intoxicated for an instant and never committed one act of dissoluteness—restrained only by the grace of God, without which restraint I would have gone headlong to the bottom of infamy—I have had so much fun that I don't believe there is a man on the planet at the present time who has had more. Hear it, men and boys, women and girls, all the fun is on the side of right. Sin may seem attractive, but it is deathful and like the manchineel, a tree whose dews are poisonous. The only genuine happiness is in a Christian life.

ANSWERS ROOSEVELT

Refutes Charge of Cowardice of Members of Democratic Party and Portrays Character of New York Governor.

In an address delivered before the Ohio Association of Democratic Clubs at Toledo on the evening of August 1, ex-Gov. John P. Altgeld, of Illinois, replied effectively to the speech delivered by Gov. Roosevelt at Minneapolis, in which the republican vice presidential candidate accused the men of the democratic party of being cowards. Gov. Altgeld, in speaking his address, said:

"There are only two principles or systems of government known to man—government by brute force and government by consent of the governed. The first is applied from without and is repressive, and, in the end, destructive, because it arrests growth; while the latter works from within, is evolutionary and progressive.

"Government by force has existed for thousands of years, and its tendency is everywhere the same. It has checked growth, arrested development, cowed the nobler aspiration of men, stunted the intellect and covered the world with suffering and misery. The constant tendency of such a government is toward a lower and a lower level, and repressive measures become more and more severe until finally conditions are created which result in dissolution and death.

For [illegible]

"The principle of government by consent of the governed was first applied in its broadest sense in the formation of our republic, and it worked a revolution in human society. It has done more and more progress in one century than it achieved in the 50 or 60 centuries of recorded [illegible] By freeing the mind and encouraging the higher aspirations, man leaped into an activity in all lines of human effort that had been unknown in the past; there was a new birth in inventions, in the industries, in agriculture, in art, in literature, in government and in education. To this we are largely indebted for our share in our marvelous cities, our agriculture and everything that makes us great.

"Starting along the lines of peace and progress, along the lines of evolution and development, it is mastering matter, it is annihilating space, it is uniting man with his brother, it is bringing the human race to its God. All of the nations of earth have been profoundly influenced by our declaration of independence. Its [illegible] as it may seem, at the close of this marvelous century, as much the child of the declaration of independence as he was asked to go back to those principles which have cursed the world for thousands of years, and which, if again given sway, will bring back the 'dark ages.' You ask who are the people and whence comes the influences that make this astounding proposition. They are the people who represent greed, rapacity and corruption. They are the same class of people and they are the same influences that have arrested human progress and human development in all lands and in all periods where they have been given sway. They have decreed that greed should be sanctified and should hold the penny of immediate advantage as too close to the eye as to shut out the sun.

"It is a [illegible] fact, verified by all human experience, that in no case does a policy that is dictated solely by greed become successful in the end. On the contrary, it always destroys the very interest it was intended to serve and build up.

"The successful struggle for independence are always concentration of wealth in the hands of a few, universal corruption, subversion of the basic principles of government, oligarchical control, steady lowering of the conditions of the masses, degradation, debauchery, dissolution and death."

Democracy and the Trusts.

The subject of trusts was given an exhaustive hearing and the democratic republican legislation in their behalf thoroughly gone over. The record of 1893 is recalled; the distress of 1893 is shown to have come before the democratic party had had an opportunity to remedy existing evils, before the democratic president had taken his seat; and the signs of distress that are becoming manifest again were shown to be from the effect of trusts, the democratic party's connection with trusts the speaker said:

"Bear in mind that every trust in America is fighting the democratic platform. Even the silk-od democratic senator who was of the republican ice trust of New York, controlled by Tom Platt's son, are fighting our platform. Why? If they thought we would not overthrow the trusts they would not fight us. They would not fight for nothing. We have declared that private monopoly is indefensible and shall not exist in America. Every trust in the men who are in earnest will find a way to make the will of the people effective. The trusts know that. Every intelligent, casual glance shows you that there is a difference between the two great parties as regards trusts. The republican party is the head, the shoulders, the spine, the limbs and the soul of the republican party of to-day. They own, control and direct it. They have erased every great motto from its banners, and have substituted a vulgar dollar mark. The party to-day speak for the republican party as a rule are mere trust employes, who have to change their song every moon in defense of their masters and secret employers.

"On the other hand, the trusts are only a speck on the tail of the democratic party, and it is doing its best to lash them off. In order to perpetuate their power the trusts are now raising millions of dollars to help Mark Hanna carry the American elections. Will you help them, or will you stand for your own independence and the independence and happiness of your children?"

A careful history of the events leading up to the war with Spain was given, in which it was conclusively shown that the democratic members of congress were leaders in the demand for interference in Cuba, but these leaders did not anticipate the present policy of imperialism. They were driven out of that war because of the policy of the present administration. Referring to the war in the Philippines and the subject of expansion, Gov. Altgeld said:

War in Philippines.

"Long before we declared war against Spain in behalf of Cuba the people of the Philippine islands had been waging war for their own independence. They continued this warfare and finally drove the Spaniards off the islands. And we are now engaged in a war to rob them of their independence and make the people subjects, not citizens, of the republic.

"There is to-day no question of expansion before the American people, and all the talk about expansion is simply an effort to conceal the facts and to mislead the public. The sole question is whether we shall go into the colonial business with England and the despotic nations of Europe. Let me say here that the democratic party has been the party of expansion. It gave to our republic the country west of the Mississippi and Florida, Texas, New Mexico and California. The democratic party believes that, moving along the line of natural growth and development and without violating the principles of freedom, that the time will come when by constitutional methods Canada on the north and the West Indian islands on the south will ran for admission to this republic. It believes that the time will come when, from the frozen skies of the north to the warm waters of the south, there will be one people, one flag, one civilization, one great brotherhood of man. But no such question is now before us.

"What do the defenders of the administration say?

"At this point the speech made by Gov. Roosevelt at Minneapolis is taken up, and the arraignment given it is a scathing one. Of it the speaker said:

Speech Without an Argument.

"Recently a gentleman in New York, who has become famous for having been a leader in Cuba—a gentleman who has served as his life motto or coat of arms two 'Ts' and a double 'S,' which four letters signify 'pompous posing' and 'pretentious strutting'—left the capital of New York and went to St. Paul and delivered a speech to an association of republican clubs. The speech has not, from beginning to end, a single argument, or a single accurate historical reference; a speech that is made up of invective, misrepresentations and vituperation.

"Ordinarily the speech would not be noticed even in a country newspaper, but inasmuch as it was made by a man whom Tom Platt has permitted to be governor of New York, and was made by a man whom the trusts of America have selected to preside over the senate of the United States in order that their interests man be secured, inasmuch as it was made by a man who is a candidate for the suffrages of the American people, inasmuch as it was made by a man who is relied on to secure the perpetuation of the regime of hypocrisy and revolution in the white house, who is relied on to help make the grasp and control of British influence over our people still more complete, I will notice this speech to see the kind of misrepresentations that the republican party feels compelled to resort to.

"Referring to the democrats, he said: 'They stand for lawlessness and disorder, for dishonesty and dishonor, for license and disaster at home, and cowardly shrinking from duty abroad.'

"This is a reflection on the intelligence and patriotism and the honor of every democrat in the country. It is a personal insult to the six and one half-million of men who supported Mr. Bryan in 1896, and to the 11,000,000 of freemen who are going to support him in 1900.

"The question arises: Is this the language of a sincere and discreet man, and there-fore worthy of credence, or is it simply hysterical rant of a political mountebank, and therefore to be treated with contempt?

"He gives no facts and advances no arguments in support of this charge. It is simply his assertion. He puts himself in evidence. Aside from truthfulness, it involves his ability and discretion.

Incidents of Public Career.

"Who, then, is this man, and what is his history? Personalities are offensive and I will not indulge in them. But, surely, when we are thus brutally assaulted we may ask who it is that is berating us.

"I will mention only two of the incidents of his public career, which throw light on the question of his sagacity and discretion, and I will recorded that years ago he was a member of the New York legislature, and on one occasion he roused the hopes of the country by making a speech against a class which he called the criminal rich. But he soon dashed these hopes by turning around and voting with and for these very criminal rich whom he had denounced.

"In the years 1897-8 he held a federal office in Washington, and in order to escape paying his taxes in New York he declared in an affidavit and swore before the averaging and that he was not a citizen of New York. If this was true, then, under the constitution of New York he would not have been eligible for the office of governor of that state. By subsequently accepting a nomination and election to that office he showed that he himself did not believe his own affidavit. This being so, may it not be that he does not believe the charge that he has made against us?

Killed a Spaniard.

"It is next recorded that he entered the Spanish war in Cuba, and, although his regiment was commanded by another man, he succeeded by means of that modern weapon of warfare known as a newspaper bureau in winning more renown in a week than Gen. Grant did in four years of hard fighting, and he seems to be the only man on this continent who boasts of having with his own hand shot down and killed a Spaniard that was dead game from the battlefield. In his book he says: 'As they turned to run I closed in and fired twice, missing the first and killing the second.' He then boasts that he had committed this feat unique, and that he was the first brave man to shoot an enemy in the back.

"Again, the modern historians tell us that it was he who by remonstrated to compel the withdrawal of the Spanish troops from Santiago, although he talked loudly of pursuing the governor has not brought one of these men to justice.

"History records the fact that the governor has never lost an opportunity, when standing in the temple or the market place, to make loud protestations of heroic valor, but the historian has searched in vain for any evidence of performance. The volume of promise is full, but the page of performance is a blank.

Vulgar Assaults Ignored.

"I will pass over even the appearance of severity, and, as I have not the language to properly characterize this man's career, will simply say that he is the right man to defend criminal aggression and the abandonment of plain duty by the president. He is the right man to defend a war of conquest, the burning of towns, the slaughter of people and the assassination of liberty. But the democratic party will pay no attention to his vulgar assaults.

"I must refer again from his speech:

"'After infinite labor they finally did decide at Kansas City that they still believed in free coinage.' This decision was reached in their committee by a vote of 36 to 24, so that it appears they only have 62 per cent. of faith in their dollar after all.

"Had the governor stuck to the truth, as a candidate for so dignified an office as the vice presidency ought to do, he would have told his audience that there were two sets of delegates at the Kansas City convention. One set refused to reaffirm the Chicago platform, claiming that inasmuch as that platform contained as strong and clear a plank on the financial question as could be framed, a reaffirmation was all that was necessary.

"The other set of delegates insisted on having a special reiteration of the financial plank, and they succeeded. Had they failed and the Chicago platform simply been reaffirmed, the principles for which the party stands would have been the same. It was not a difference of principle between the delegates, but simply a difference of opinion as to the most effective way of stating that principle to the country. The governor certainly knew this.

"Now, were a democrat stoops to misrepresentation he is called a pettifogger and a demagogue, but I suppose that when a republican candidate for the vice presidency stoops to do this it will be called strenuous life.

"The administration's Philippine policy was carefully investigated, and showed clearly how it was leading on to militarism, and then in closing he said:

Lincoln's Immortal Words.

"Listen to the immortal words of Abraham Lincoln:

"'What constitutes the bulwarks of our liberty and independence? It is not our towering battlements or bristling seacoasts, our army or our navy. Our reliance is in the love of liberty which God has planted in us. Our defense is in the spirit which prizes liberty as the heritage of all men in all lands, everywhere. Destroy this spirit and you have planted the seed of despotism at your own doors. Familiarize yourself with the chains of bondage and you prepare your own limbs to wear them. Accustom yourself to trample the rights of others, you have lost the strength of Your own independence and become the fit subjects of the first cunning tyrant who rises among you.

"'They who deny freedom to others deserve it not for themselves, and under a just God cannot long retain it.'

"Now, my friends, we propose to stop this criminal aggression into which the syndicate and the British ambassador have marched us. We are going to stop bloodshed and devastation in the Philippines by saying to the Filipinos that when they establish a government which in our judgment is a good government worthy of recognition, that then we will withdraw on such terms as may be agreed upon.

"We are going to do what the president stated our 'plain duty' toward the Porto Ricans. We are going to rebuke as Lincoln did George was wrong, and that his principles shall not disgrace our statute books.

"This is not a partisan question it is an American question. In 1861 you were not asked: 'Are you a democrat or a republican?' You were only asked: 'Do you love the fing of your country, and will you fight for it?' To-day you are only asked: 'Do you believe in free institutions, and will you help preserve them?'

"Are you a son of the revolution? Then step to the front and help save that for which your fathers bled.

"Do you believe Washington was right when he led his men over the icy hills of Valley Forge? Do you believe the fathers were right when they fought at Bunker Hill or fell at Lexington? Do you believe lincoln was right when he stood on the battlefield at Gettysburg and prayed that government of the people, for the people and by the people might not wither from the face of the earth? Then join the free men of America in one supreme effort to again establish a republican government at Washington—to forever drive Hanna and the syndicates from the temple, and put an end to imperialism, militarism and McKinleyism."

INDIVIDUALITIES.

James Dunsmuir, the present premier of British Columbia, is known there as the "Silent Premier," because while a member of the provincial legislature for two years he never delivered a speech.

A souvenir of Mr. Gladstone's hobby as an amateur woodsman, consisting of a chip from an elm which he felled at Hawarden in 1880, was sold for five shillings in a London auction-room recently.

Ex-Senator Matthew C. Butler and a few friends recently celebrated the thirty-sixth anniversary of the loss of the South Carolinian's leg at the battle of Brandy Station during the civil war. The senator was entertained at dinner at Delmonico's, New York.

That the dignity of the supreme bench is sometimes burdensome is illustrated by a remark made by Justice Brewer to a Washington official. The latter was about to take his vacation, and he said: "I am glad I am going to a resort where I can wear one gallus, no collar and roll up my pants."

The London Morning Post's "military expert," whose deductions from South Africa were nine times out of ten directly opposed to those of the war office, and usually correct, and whose articles were telegraphed to the leading journals throughout the world, is a civilian named Spencer Wilkinson. He has a fine head, wears a full beard and looks like a scientist. When the war broke out he was dramatic critic of the Post.

Mnichteba Ali Gerrouh is the name that Alf Ferrouh Bey, the Turkish minister has given the youngster that was born recently at the Turkish legation at Washington. Mme. Ferrouh Bey, who came to this country with her husband last winter, is the first Turkish woman of her rank ever permitted to come to the United States, it being a special favor of the sultan to allow her to accompany her husband on his last return to Washington, where he has represented his government since 1893.

LOVERS' WALKS IN BRITAIN.

Rothesay has a famous lovers' walk. Its shadiness in summer has made it a favorite spot for many other persons than sweethearts.

In Derbyshire, near Buxton, there is a renowned lovers' leap. The story goes that a maiden who had quarreled with her sweetheart in a fit of despair threw herself over the cliffs into the rocky gulf below. The tale whether true or not has survived for over a couple of centuries.

It has been estimated that there are at least a couple of hundred lovers' walks in Great Britain, all of which are more or less renowned in story, song and tradition. As for Ireland, no one has ever yet been bold enough to try to count the number. One of the most renowned is that at Matlock, the beautiful Derbyshire town.

The beautiful Spencer road, at Ryde, Isle of Wight, can boast of royalty having shared its charms. It is said it will become known as the "Lovers' Walk," simply because there was hardly a pair of lovers in Ryde but used it for their repetitions of the "old, old story," though the authorities never seemed to favor the name, but have always referred to it officially as Spencer road.

One English town can boast of having a municipal lovers' lane. This is Blackburn, in Lancashire. It is a winding walk, arched in by tall trees, bordered by old stones and kept trim and tidy. Here the girl from the mill or factory listens to the same old tale, and it thrills her just as much as it does the daughter of an earl, who hears it under the lofty elms at Ryde.

STATE ITEMS OF INTEREST.

KENTUCKY POPULISTS.

O. H. Cardin, of Crittenden County, Nominated for Governor, and Electors Named.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 2.—The kentucky state populist convention (middle-of-the-road) nominated for governor O. H. Cardin, of Crittendon county and also nominated presidential electors for the eleven congressional districts and for the state at large. The platform indorses the Omaha and Cincinnati declarations; endorses Barker and Donnelly; denounces the republican party for "cruel capitalism and the democratic party as the servile imitator of the republican... of all the villainous legislation of the past 30 years;" declares imperialism "is a sham battle between the two old parties to obscure real issues;" denounces restriction upon the ballot in various southern states and especially the Goebel election law in Kentucky; and declares for initiative and referendum.

Sections denouncing as criminal both the democratic and republican administration of affairs in Kentucky were stricken out. This was done, however, without a strong opposition from Jo A. Parker, who had drafted the platform and wanted it all adopted. The wrangle over the platform took place under a big sycamore tree on the bank of the Ohio river. The convention was held at Riverview park, and 125 delegates, representing all the Kentucky congressional districts, were present. The populist managers were much pleased with the size of the convention.

MUST BE SETTLED IN COURT.

One of the Democratic Candidates for Congress Will Not Abide By the Committee's Decision.

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 3.—The democratic candidate for congress from the Seventh district, W. B. Moody, in a letter to Chairman Allie Young, of the state central committee, says he will not abide by the decision of the committee. He believes that the courts only have jurisdiction in his controversy with South Trimble for the party emblem. The committee is almost certain to decide in favor of Trimble, who bolted the convention at Paris, Ky.

The case bids fair to be an interesting one, whose result will be two democratic candidates in the field. In this event the republicans say they can win hands down.

Condition of Kentucky Banks.

Washington, Aug. 2.—The abstract of the condition of the national banks of Kentucky, exclusive of Louisville, at the close of business on June 29, as reported to the comptroller of currency, shows the average held at 33.31 per cent.; loans and discounts, $19,620,418; stocks and securities, $1,411,378; gold coin, $898,452; total specie, $1,240,000; lawful money reserve, $1,782,879; individual deposits, $18,221,789.

A Building Collapsed.

Glasgow, Aug. 3.—The structure known as the dewell building, collapsed Thursday. The building was occupied by L. F. Ganter, drugs, and Y. F. Schwartz, dry goods. The injured are: Price Willis, both legs broken; Henry Rosenberg, badly bruised; Henry Mayfield, badly bruised; Miss McCubbins, badly bruised; Henry Rosenberg and Miss McCubbins, both employes of Schwartz, were badly hurt.

Berry Howard Will Surrender.

Pineville, Ky., Aug. 4.—Berry Howard, indicted as an accessory to the murder of Goebel, was seen here with his body guard. He carries a large revolver and his body guard is heavily armed. Berry declared his innocence of the charge, and said he would surrender at the proper time. Sheriff Broughton, holding a warrant against Howard, was out of town, and no attempt was made to arrest Howard.

Recruits Wanted.

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 4.—Sergt. Geo. Whitmeyer, of the local recruiting station, received telegraphic orders from the surgeon general to enlist men for the hospital corps, consisting of stewards, wagoners and mechanics. The order is considered significant of a hurried movement in the near future, as the orders allow any to serve who has a common school education, whereas heretofore men for this special service were required to have had some experience.

Fatal Boiler Explosion.

Padueah, Ky., Aug. 4.—The boiler of the Paris flour mill, of Paris, Tenn., exploded, killing Eddie Haynes, the engineer's son, and seriously injuring several others. Engineer Haynes was dangerously injured by a falling wall of the building, which was entirely demolished.

Filed Suit For $5,000 Damages.

Henderson, Ky., Aug. 3.—Warren Goatley, a miner, filed suit here for $5,000 damages against Rankin Estin, manager of the Spottsville coal mines. Goatley was seriously injured last March by a handcar while employed at the Spottsville mine.

Gets Second Place.

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 3.—Dr. A. W. Jones, former city physician, is slated for appointment as second assistant physician at the insane asylum, to succeed Dr. Casslus D. Mansfield.

KENTUCKY LEGISLATURE.

An Extra Session Will Be Called to Meet In August to Amend the Goebel Law.

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 2.—Gov. Beckham has yielded to the advocates of amendment or repeal of the Goebel election law and will call an extra session of the legislature to meet between the middle of August and the first of September. Gov. Beckham refused to discuss the matter, thereby virtually admitting that the session will be called. His close friends say the session is now a certainty.

It develops that several bills providing for the appointment of nonpartisan boards of election commissioners, consisting of equal numbers of members of the respective parties, two members each to be selected from the recommendation of the organization of the different parties, have been already prepared and will be submitted as soon as the session convenes.

HELD UP AND ROBBED.

Thomas Taylor Relieved of Seven Hundred Dollars in Money on a Thousand-Dollar Bond.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 4.—Thomas Taylor, of Westport, reported to the police that he had been held up and robbed of $700 and a government bond worth $1,000 by two highwaymen near Westport on Monday night. He said it was only after a desperate fight that the robbers secured the money and not until Taylor had been wounded in the hand.

The wound proved serious and confined him to his bed until Thursday. Taylor conducts a small grocery store and saloon, and had come to Louisville to get a purchase of whisky out of government bond and to replenish his stock of groceries. He arrived too late for the transaction of business and started back home with his money and the bond.

THROUGH THE HEART.

A Constable Shot Peter Perkins, a Young Soldier, Who Resisted Arrest at Jellico.

Williamsburg, Ky., Aug. 3.—Peter Perkins, a young soldier who served through the Spanish war, was shot through the heart at Jellico by Constable Bryant while resisting arrest. Perkins was drinking heavily for some days past, and while on the Kentucky side became boisterous. Bryant attempted to arrest him, but met with stubborn resistance, and fired, killing him instantly. Bryant was arrested and brought here to jail. Perkins was one of the Taylor guards at Frankfort, and while in the executive building secured a pair of Bradley's slippers, which he subsequently wore, saying he wanted to stand in the governor's shoes for once.

Mayor Nelson's Purchase.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 3.—Mayor R. W. Nelson, of Newport, who is here listening to the evidence in the Powers case, to ascertain what bearing it has on the prosecution of his client, Henry Yontsey, concluded to pick up $1,000 on the side while waiting here, and accordingly went out and bought the Georgetown Electric Light, Water and Power Co., which sold at receiver's sale. The purchase price was $30,000. The sale transfers to Col. Nelson the electric street car system of the city, the gas, water, electric lights and plants of the city, and it is considered he obtained a big bargain in the purchase.

Tobacco Warehouses Sued.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 4.—Forty tobacco growers filed suits in the circuit court against various Kentucky tobacco warehouses, alleging that the warehouses have evaded the recent state statute which forbids them to take ten pounds of tobacco from each hogshead for a sample. The plaintiffs ask a penalty of $100 in each case and each seeks to establish from five to twenty-five cases.

Long Chosen Secretary.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 3.—George W. Long, ex-state treasurer and chairman of last year's republican campaign committee, has been selected secretary of the campaign committee just organized.

Jones Won't Run.

Bowling Green, Ky., Aug. 4.—Senator William Henry Jones has agreed to withdraw as a candidate for congress, which will result in McKenzie Moss being a fusion candidate. Mr. Moss is a Brown democrat.

Louisville's Population.

Washington, Aug. 3.—The census office Thursday announced the population of Louisville, Ky., as 204,731, an increase of 43,602 over the census of 1890.

Live Stock Show.

Cynthiana, Ky., Aug. 2.—The Harrison County Live Stock Show, under the auspices of A. O. U. W. lodge, No. 33, opened Wednesday at Abdallah park. The shorthorn cattle show promises to be the best one held in Kentucky for years.

Ballard Has Surrendered.

Richmond, Ky., Aug. 4.—Geo. Ballard, who shot and instantly killed Thos. Johnson at Berea, surrendered to the officers after hiding in the mountains three days. Ballard claims he acted in self-defense.

THERE EVEN DEATH IS SLOW.

Where Insurance Agents Are Willing to Take All Kinds of Risks.

"Everybody in the oilcloth and linoleum trade knows the Potter boys," of Philadelphia and New York. Col. Tom Potter, of the former city, who got his title through a staff appointment by a former governor of Pennsylvania, is a thorough Philadelphian, a firm believer in that town—in all her institutions, big and little, and in her magnificent future, but he always helps to circulate a good story on Philadelphia, just the same, says the New York Commercial.

A hustling "free lance" in the life insurance business was over there the other day trying to write a $20,000 policy in a New York company for a rising young man who holds an important position with the Potter company. This was his third or fourth call, and he had insured him almost worked up to the point of signing the application.

"I'll take the policy," he said, "but I don't want it just yet. Wait a few weeks."

"No time like the present time," exclaimed the agent. "Delays are particularly dangerous in life insurance matters. I'll tell you what I'll do: to ease you along I will make the application now. I'll carry the policy myself for you for 30 days."

"Oh, I suppose you do that," the young man protested. "I might die within 30 days, and then where would you and your profit be?"

"Oh, that's all right, my boy; I'll take the risk. You won't die that quick. Nobody in Philadelphia ever died in 30 days!"

The American Working Man.

Much comparison has been made between the endurance of the Chinese and the American working man. Those with authority to speak say that the average working man of America is as superior to the Chinese as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is to any other dyspepsia cure. The Bitters does not claim to cure everything, but it does cure constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia, biliousness, liver and kidney troubles, and prevents malaria, fever and ague.

An Eye for Realism.

The new reporter in his story of the wedding wrote: "The floral display stretched from the chancel rail to the door of the church."

The city editor, in a mild manner, as is the custom of city editors with new reporters, suggested:

"Couldn't you have used a better word than 'stretched?' Say the floral display 'nodded,' or 'twined,' or something like that —some word more suggestive of flowers."

"'Stretched' is all right," replied the new reporter, with the stubborn courage of a realist. "The flowers consisted of six rubber plants, and they had to stretch to go the distance."—Baltimore American.

O--I--C

When a preparation has an advertised reputation that is world-wide, it means that preparation is meritorious. If you go into a store to buy an article that has achieved universal popularity like Cascarets Candy Cathartic for example, you feel it has the endorsement of the world. The judgment of the people is infallible because it is impersonal. The retailer who wants to sell you "something else" in place of the article you ask for, has an ax to grind. Don't it stand to reason? He's trying to sell something that is not what he represents it to be. Why? Because he wants to derive an extra profit out of your credulity. Don't you see through his little game? The man who will try to sell you a substitute for Cascarets is a fraud. Beware of him! He is trying to steal the honestly earned benefits of a reputation which another business man has paid for, and if his conscience will allow him to go so far, he will go farther. If he cheats his customer in one way, he will in another and it is not safe to do business with him. Beware of sold substitutes! Remember Cascarets are never sold in bulk but in metal boxes with the long tailed "C" on every box and each tablet stamped C. C. C.

Crops in Nebraska.

There is a broad smile on the face of nearly every farmer in Nebraska, because of the satisfactory crop conditions in that remarkable state. In the Northwest, drouth has seriously injured the wheat yield. In the South again there has been more or less damage, but in Nebraska they have had seasonable, heavy rains, and not too much of them.

A full crop of oats and wheat will, from present indications, be followed by a bumper crop of corn. During the past week heavy rains all over the state have put this crop in fine condition, and it may break the record.

The expectation is that great numbers of people will go to Nebraska this fall, when the cheap harvest excursion rates are in effect, to investigate the country and confirm by actual experience the stories of prosperity so often heard.

"This boy of mine," said the distressed parent, "has always been backward in his lessons. He doesn't seem to be smart enough." "You leave him with me," said the old-fashioned pedagogue, significantly. "I'll make him smart."—Philadelphia Record.

The Boxers of China

are attempting to solve a gigantic problem, but they are going about it in the wrong way and will never succeed. Some people, in this country, seem to think that they have as great a problem on their hands in selecting a location for a home. They will certainly go about it in the wrong way unless they inspect the beautiful farming country on the line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway in Marinette county, Wisconsin, where the crops are of the best, work plenty, fine markets, excellent climate, pure, soft water; land sold cheap and on long time. Why rent a farm when you can buy one for less than you pay for rent? Address C. E. Rollins, Land Agent, 101 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

An English tourist, who had left a waterproof on a train, went back to look for it. On asking the occupants of a third-class carriage compartment whether they had seen anything of a "mackintosh," "Na, na," one of them replied, "we're a' Macphersons here."—Glasgow Evening Times.

For several years I was in such wretched health that life was almost a burden. I could hardly walk across the floor, was so feeble. Several of our best physicians attended me, but failed to help. I concluded to write to you for advice. In a few days I received such a kind, motherly letter. I followed your instructions and am my 'old self' again. POOR LITTLE JOHNNY! AND HIS "TUMMY"!

Small boys, and many times large ones, and occasionally girls, too, big and little, suffer terribly from convulsive pains or "cramps" in the bowels and stomach—pain so violent that it "doubles up" the ones attacked, and makes it impossible for them to stand up.

Some people call it colic, but most honest, plain-spoken people call it "belly-ache" and very properly, for the seat of the trouble is in the bowels, and caused by the violent efforts of the bowels to rid themselves of something which doesn't belong there. The small boy usually gets it from over-eating or from eating forbidden fruit, and suffers mostly in the summer time.

It's spring now, and "in times of peace, prepare for war." Let the boys and girls and the big folks, too, for that matter, clean out the clogged channels filled with winter bile and putrid undigested food, strengthen the 30-feet of bowel canal, liven up the liver, and "summer bellyaches" will have no terrors, because they won't happen. The way to make the body ache-proof is to use CASCARETS, gentle, sweet, fragrant CASCARETS, the perfect system cleaners and bowel strengtheners. For fear that anybody in the family should ever be attacked by belly-ache, keep a box of CASCARETS in the house always, and remember that all pains and troubles in your insides are

At Manasquan, N. J., a company has secured a tract of 350 acres to conduct a giant hen industry, conducted on scientific methods. The company intends to control the New York market for "guaranteed" fresh-laid eggs. They will deliver eggs in boxes, each box stamped with the date of laying, and delivered to the customers within 24 hours after the eggs are laid.

Nothing will pay better for the money invested than chickens if they are properly handled, but to be profitable much care must be exercised. Because the hens will give returns under adverse circumstances is the reason they are neglected so much, but the better they are treated the better the returns you will receive from them. But the difficult part of the thing is to make average farmers believe it. By keeping constantly at them they may eventually be taught what a good thing the hen really is.

The yolk of the egg spoils much quicker than the white. For this reason it is important that the yolk should be surrounded with a layer of the white. If the egg is placed on the side or large end the heavy yolk will settle to the bottom and come in contact with the shell, which admits the air. If it is placed on the small end it will always have a layer of white between it and the shell. Eggs absorb odors easily, therefore only odorless materials should be used when packing them.—August Ladies' Home Journal.

A most distressing accident occurred yesterday morning at the farm of P. H. Bradford, near Bethel, this county. Mr. Bradford was driving a mower and cutting timothy hay, when his little grandson, B. Lovelace, scarcely four years of age, who was at play in the meadow with two other children, got in front of the blade and had both feet almost severed at the ankle. Mr. Bradford had just raised the mower knife to lift it over a stump, his whole attention being thus engrossed, and as he lowered it to the ground he observed the child only a few feet away, but was unable to stop his horses until the blade had struck the child felling him forward and inflicting fearful gashes in both feet. The right foot was cut to the bone at the ankle joint and two severe gashes were also inflicted on the left foot instep.—Pendletonian.

If the farmers of Kentucky will refuse to sell their tobacco to the trust this year and offer every pound raised by them on an auction market, a repetition of the past few years will not again result, but instead it is safe to predict no less than two cents a pound more for each pound sold will be realized by them. With a twenty million pound purchase, as is the case with the trust this season, it can be independent of the market to a great extent, and, being so, will not pay within several cents a pound of what it would be compelled to pay if its entire purchases were made on an auction market. It looks about time the farmers were realizing these facts and acting accordingly. If they are against trusts, and realize the evils of them, why let the trusts get tobacco cheaper than their competitors?—Louisville Weed.

Lentz conducted the services at the grave in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends.

Saturday night the festival at R. O. Smith's, given by Golden Grange, was attended by a large and enthusiastic crowd. Ice-cream, lemonade, and other good things were disposed of at a profit. The social features were not neglected by any means and every one had a grand time. Hon. J. W. Kennedy gave a nice talk on the principles and benefits of the grange that was highly appreciated. A graphophone entertained the people with songs, recitations, &c., for some time, but later on lost its voice from damp air and failed to respond to Mr. Dougins when called on for another song. The receipts were something like $40 and will be devoted to buying books for the grange.

The hail and rain Thursday night and Friday morning did much damage in this section. At Richwood, 10 acres of tobacco that had been suckered over once was totally destroyed, we are told, and this is only the beginning, for land was terribly torn and ditched out by the water; corn blowed down; wheat in stack wet; oats soaked, and so on, until damage to the amount of thousands of dollars resulted. The creeks and branches were regular torrents and everything loose or not loose was taken out and carried on to the gulf.

Metcalfe and Miss Sallie Herndon, and John Kipp.

There have been some more shipments of tobacco to the Ky. House at Louisville that have brought joy to the planters. Last week Mr. Noah Glasscock put Jos. Rich's crop on the market, and 9 hhds. a crop lot, averaged $9.30 to the surprise of the owner, who, nevertheless was willing to accept all the surplus which he had not expected to receive. Glasscock also sold 6 hhds. leaf at an average of $12.33½, where only 10 or 10½ was expected.

The storm which passed over here in the early morning hours of last Friday was a "corker" in a very literal sense. Everyody was shut up in their houses shaking with dread at the continuous discharge of electrical artillery. Corn and tobacco were in many instances prostrated by the furious wind from the north. Valuable fruit trees were torn from their roots, and the path of Old Boreas was strewn with evidence of destruction. The hail struck a patch of Thos. Johnson's and put in tatters three acres of promising tobacco in less time than it takes to write it.

While on the subject of schools it may not be amiss to state that D. M. Snyder, who began teaching in 1870, and who has taught almost continuously since, is being urged by his many friends to become a candidate for Superintendent of Common Schools. His long course of teaching and 10 or 15 years service as one of the county board of examiners entitles him to great consideration in the minds of the voters as being a suitable man for the position.

On August 21, at the homestead of our old and valued friend, the late Ben S. Johnson, of Walton, were gathered his three daughters, Mrs. Jane Johnson, Mrs. Mary Hastings, of Greenfield, Ind., and Mrs. Telithe Vest, his son, Sam C. Johnson and wife, grandchildren, Mrs. Ed Arnold, Misses Hattie Johnson and Hattie Vest, Kirtley Johnson and Ed Arnold, great-grandchildren, Masters Harry Records, of Sparta, and Misses Bertha Hoard and Jessie Records, of this place, Mrs. Mary Rodgers and daughter, Miss Sallie, Mrs. Julia Peck, of this vicinity, and two granddaughters of Gallatin county, Mrs. Mary Kirtley and nephew, Napoleon, of East Bend, Misses Mamie Allen, of Petersburg, and Ella Craig, of Walton, and Miss Virgie Money, of Shelby county. A bountiful dinner was spread to which all did ample justice. The enjoyment of the occasion was marred only by the absence of the one who had so often met with us around his board dispensing good things with a lavish hand, making all about him feel that they were welcome. The older ladies, Mrs. Rogers and Mrs. Peck, were playmates and schoolmates of the family from earliest childhood. They all, probably, met under the old roof for the last time.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 15, 1900. NO. 43

COURT may dispose of all of its business this week.

REMEMBER to attend the Harvest Home next Friday and Saturday.

CONSIDERABLE matter contributed for this issue had to be carried over.

A HEAVY wind visited this locality Monday, but no damage has been reported.

ON an inside page will be fonnd the great speech made by Mr. Bryan at Indianapolis, last week.

HON. D. LINN GOOCH, candidate for Congress, is in town, meeting the Boone county yeomanry.

IT is said that Westover, Rhinock and Berry, candidates for Congress, had a warm session in Williamstown, Monday.

THE Democratic campaign will be opened on the first Monday in September by a speech at every county seat in the State.

A LARGE banner bearing the inscription: "Vote for D. Linn Gooch for Congress, primary Sept. 22," is stretched across the street at the Boone House.

Clem Kendall has tobacco so large that it holds so much dew every morning that Oscar Ryle has to wear a life-preserver while worming and suckering.

THE arguments are now being made in the Powers prosecution at Williamstown. The Youtsey case will be called for trial at the conclusion of the Powers case.

C. P. HUNTINGTON, the railroad magnate, is dead. His life is an example of what pluck and industry are capable of accomplishing in this life. Starting in the humblest walks he reached fortune and fame.

EVERY few days some new irregularity in the recent Republican administration comes to light, the last being the discovery that Mr. Davison, Superintendent of Public Instruction, did not make his reports according to law.

JUDGE WESTOVER, candidate for Congress, will speak as follows in this county: At Constance, at 2:30 p. m. and at Hebron at 7:30 p. m. August 24th. At Bellevue at 2:30 p. m. and at Rabbit Hash at 7:30 p. m. August 25th.

A WEEK or two since a storm blew the corn in the north end of the county down badly, and the wind storm of yesterday blowing in an opposite direction to that of the first storm, turned the stalks back, breaking many of them off, injuring the crop badly.

THE following attorneys are attending court: J. C. Clore, of Cincinnati; Elijah Greene, of Covington; O. M. Rogers and Sam Adams, of Erlanger; Judge Cram, M. D. Gray, W. W. Dickerson ann H. Clay White, of Williamstown; B. F. Menifee, of Crittenden; Jno. O'Neal and Roger Wright, of Cincinnati, Morris Galvin, of Covington; C. Y. Dyas, J. G. Tomlin and F. E. Curley, of Walton.

THE Democratic State Campaign Committee met in Louisville, last Saturday, and organized by electing Hon. James B. McCreary, Chairman; John M. Lassing, Secretary, and S. J. Shackelford, Treasurer, and J. Frank Peak, State Organizer. Head quarters during the campaign will be at Seelbach's, Louisville.

The position of Secretary is about the most important on the committee, as upon that officer devolves the duty of looking after the party organization in the State, and along that line Mr. Lassing has proven in local contests eminently able to cope with the most astute politicians, and in the State campaign now about to be launched he will have an ample opportunity to display his skill in a field that is so facinating to him. Mr. Stone, Secretary of the Republican Committee, is noted as a party organizer, but he will find in Mr. Lassing at least an equal. In calling Mr Lassing to the Secretaryship the committee will soon learn it made no mistake, and that he is the right man in the right place.

Ex-Mayor Rhinock for Congress.

Joseph L. Rhinock, ex-mayor of Covington, and now a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress, in this district, was born in Owenton, Owen County, Kentucky, January 4th, 1863.—For thirty years he has lived in Covington, and has just finished his second term as mayor of that city. He has been an active and consistent Democrat from the time of his first vote. The confidence his people feel in him is attested by the fact, that they elected him twice to the office of mayor under the new constitution. He was the organizer and first president of the Jefferson Democratic Club of Covington. He is now president of the Covington Library Trustees, and through his personal efforts a donation of $40,000.00 to the Library Fund was recently secured. He came to Covington a penniless boy, and now, though he is but thirty-seven years of age, is a successful and respected business man of high standing among the substantial citizens of his town. He was one of the organizers of the Citizens' National Bank of Covington, of which he has been a director for years.

Joseph Rhinock's reputation is that of a man who pays his debts and keeps his word. An active, energetic man with a happy home life; a political record free from blemishes, and a long career of usefulness before him, he is of the best type of the American citizen of to-day, and a man to whom the honor and distinction of a nomination for Congress is justly due.

GRANT COUNTY.

From Williamstown Courier.

The Teachers' Institute will begin Aug. 29 and continue five days.

A mad dog created a good deal of excitement at Dry Ridge, Thursday. It was finally killed.

The hail last Friday morning did considerable damage to the tobacco. Several crops were totally destroyed.

G. S. Webb, our popular and efficient Sheriff has just gotten back from Iowa, where he went with requisition papers from Gov. Beckham, for Albert Dunn, who now languishes in our jail, on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. Jack reports a great trip, and that probably two-thirds of the State of Iowa is planted in corn, and is the finest he ever saw grow.

Camp meeting is in progress at the ball park, and will continue for several days under the auspices of the Colored Methodist church. A number of able preachers are assisting in the services. On Monday night Rev. W. T. Eckler, of the Methodist church, in this city, preached to a fair congregation, on Tuesday night Rev. W. G. Cram did the preaching. Other white preachers are expected to preach as the meeting progresses.

At Flemingsburg, a horse was sold for $40; the purchaser sold it to Lee & Cassidy for $65, who in turn sold it to Dan Mitchell, of Carlisle, for $90. Mitchell sold it to Pennsylvania parties for $250. All sales were made same day.

A Minister's Good Work.

"I had a severe attack of bilious colic, got a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, took two doses and was entirely cured," says Rev. A. A. Power, of Emporia, Kan. "My neighbor across the street was sick for over a week, had two or three bottles of medicine from the doctor. He used them for three or four days without any relief, then called in another doctor who treated him for some days and gave him no relief, so discharged him. I went over to see him the next morning. He said his bowels were in a terrible fix, that they had been running off so long that it was almost blody flux. I asked him if he had tried Chambertain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and he said 'No.' I went home and brought him my bottle and gave him one dose; told him to take another dose in fifteen or twenty minutes if he did not find relief, but he took no more and was entirely cured." For sale by McKim, Burlington, C. S. Balsly, Bullittsville, O. N. Grant, Bellevue, Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg.

Cows, like human beings, want a variety of feed. A mixture of two grains is better for a cow giviug milk than the same amount of feed given in one grain, and four or five or even more kinds mixed together will usually give better returns than two or three kinds. Small portions of different feeds seem to make it more appetizing, and cows will eat more and digest more. Give her one mixture for breakfast and another mixture for her supper for a considerable period.

Ex-Mayor Rinock's Card

I am a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress in this District, and I seek the support of all good Democrats in the coming primary election, which occurs Sept. 22nd. I have never served in Congress, but in a more limited field, with official responsibilities which were not trivial. I have always been a Democrat, and I believe, a fairly good official. The voters of my own city and county have elected me several times to offices of high trust and responsibility. I have never used these offices to my own personal advantage, and I have never dealt with the opposition party for my own profit. I have never allowed factionalism or political expediency to interfere with my relations with my party. I believe that in this trying hour in Kentucky, the Democrats of the Sixth District wish to be represented in Congress by a man whose Democratic faith and fortitude is unquestionable. My record upon this point is open to all of you. From the time of my first vote I have actively, earnestly and loyally supported every Democratic nominee of my city, county, State and nation. The record of the gentlemen who is recognized to be my chief opponent. I shall endeavor to analyze as the campaign progresses. I am for William Jennings Bryan, and I am for every plank of the splendid Democratic platform adopted at Kansas City. Should I be elected I shall not deal with or truckle to the men at Washington who oppose my party's principles and policies. It is true that some of you may prefer "an experienced man" to represent you in Congress rather than "some one who must first learn." In this connection I have only to say that if I am elected I shall endeavor to learn the duties of my office as others have done before me, and when I have become "an experienced man" I shall be a Democrat and not the Democratic mouthpiece of a Republican administration. Respectfully yours.

OWEN COUNTY.

Old farmers say the prospect for a crop is better than it has been since 55.

The dedication of the church at Holbrook, last Sunday, was attended by over 2,000 people.

Dallasburg is about the center of a small strip of country where the ground has not had sufficient moisture to reset a plant of tobacco since the last of May.

Near Elmville, in Franklin county, Simeon Hancock was killed by lightning last Friday morning while going from his tobacco field to his residence.

On last Sunday night Mrs. Harriet O'Banion, wife of F. O'Banion, was thrown from her horse and received injuries from which she is not likely to recover.

Lindsay Davis, who was struck on the head by his brother, William Davis, and was shot by Scott Moore, as noted last week, died last Saturday and was buried on Sunday. We understand that Drs. Grant and Stallard say it was the blow on the head that killed him. At the time set for the examining trial, last Thursday, it was waived, Moore being held over in $500 and William Davis in $100.

Last Friday morning during the thundeo storm Miss Minnie Waldman was thought to be seriously shocked by lightning, which ran down the stove pipe near by where she was standing, but by the aid of Drs. Agee and Bickers she recovered consciousness and is now improving. At the same time a straw stack belonging to Mr. Gill Gross was fired by lightning, killing a calf near by and entirely burning the stack. Some trees near Sweet Owen wese also struck and fired by the lightning and were burning several days.

Prevented a Tragedy.

Timely information given Mrs. George Long, of New Straitsville, O., saved two lives. A frightful cough had long kept her awake every night. She had tried many remedies and doctors but steadily grew worse until urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle wholly cured her; and she writes, this marvelous medicine also cured Mr. Long of a severe attack of pneumonia. Such cures are positive proof of its power to cure all throat, chest and lung troubles. Only 50c and $1. Guaranteed. Trial bottles free at McKim's, Burlington; Oelsner's, Florence and Crouch's, Union.

State News.

Louise Miller, supposed to be a pauper, died at Pine Grove, Lawrence county, July 30. Six thousand dollars in cash was found hidden in her dress.

William French, prosperous young farmer of Robertson county, died under very peculiar circumstances. He ate a hearty dinner of beans and cucumbers, and while going from the dining room to the veranda he was taken with severe cramps in the stomach. He died the next day, suffering the most intense agony until death relieved him of his suffering.

Assistant Adjutant General Murray is in receipt of a communication from Secretary of War Root announcing that the appropriation for the Kentucky State Militia for the year ending June 30, 1901, is $22,427.92. There may be a balance of $8,000 due the State on the appropriation of last year. General Murray is not able to tell whether this has been drawn. The money is Kentucky's apportionment of the $800,000 appropriation, and will be used in securing arms and equipments for the State militia. General Murray will go to Washington within a few days and personally look after the matter. There are now about 1,200 guns in the possession of the State Guard. Many of the guns used by the companies mustered out have not yet been returned, and a large number will be returned to Washington in exchange for new arms.

Hauling Down the Flag.

"By the courtsey of William McKinley, our imperial President, the richest gold placer mines of Alaska have been transferred to the ownership of England," remarks the New York Journal. "A strip of territory half as long as Long Island has been turned over to Great Britain for the mere asking. Two thousand American miners who discovered valuable claims in American territory have been given over to Canada, to be deprived of $3,000,000 gold output by the British Columbia alien laws. The Porcupine milling district is now English territory, and the American miners will be forced to pay miners' tax to British authority."

This act of the administration has stirred up the New York Sun, hitherto a staunch supporter of McKinley. The Sun says:

The reported delimination of the Alaskan boundary above Chilkat is a "compromise line," that is to say, a line transferring to Canada territory which this Government has claimed and held for thirty years under the title derived from Russia. The size of the strip which it is proposed to yield is not a matter of much consequence. As a matter of fact perhaps from 1,200 to 1,500 square miles are included. Nor does it make a great difference that the line is described as temporary and provisional. It will be regarded everywhere as a preparation for formal cession hereafter. Fuller explanations than have yet been vouchsafed by the State Department are desirable. We consider it a duty to inform Secretary Hay that American sentiment is not likely to tolerate compromise lines that mark off to any European power, however friendly we may be to that power, any portion of American territory.

To be bound hand and foot for years by the chains of disease is the worst form of slavery. Geo. D. Williams, of Manchester, Mich., says: "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This supreme remedy for female diseases quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, backache, fainting and dizzy spells. It is a godsend to weak, sickly, run-down people. Cure guaranteed. Only 50c. Sold by McKim, Burlington, Oelsner, Florence, Crouch, Union.

A clever swindler, dressed as a farmer, is going the rounds through the country fleecing honest tillers of the soil by calling at their homes with samples of corn. The ears are from five to eight times larger than the ordinary ear, and he alleges that it is raised by himself from seed sent by his brother, who raises the same kind in a foreign country. One hundred graines for 25 cents or the whole ear for $2 is the price asked, and the victim who buys will find out later that it is nothing but ordinary corn, several ears of which have been dexterously glued together to form one large ear.

BRYAN'S PLAIN TALK

Discusses Paramount Questions of the Democratic Platform.

EVILS OF REPUBLICAN POLICIES.

Rights of the People in United States and Acquired Territories—Dangers of Imperialism and Militarism—The True Republic.

In response to the tender of the nomination for the presidency by the notification committee of the democracy, at Indianapolis, Wednesday, August 8, William J. Bryan said:

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Notification Committee: I shall, at an early day, and in a more formal manner, accept the nomination which you tender, and I shall at that time discuss the various questions referred to by the committee; but I shall not be out of place, however, to submit a few observations at this time upon the general character of the contest before us and upon the principle which is declared to be of paramount importance in this campaign.

When I say that the contest of 1900 is a contest between democracy on the one hand and plutocracy on the other, I do not mean to say that all our opponents have deliberately chosen to give to wealth a predominating influence in the affairs of the government, but I do assert that on the important issues of the day the republican party is dominated by those influences which constantly tend to elevate pecuniary considerations and ignore human rights.

In 1859 Lincoln said that the republican party believed in the equality of man, but that in case of conflict it believed in the man before the dollar. This is the principle which should stand out before the two. Man, the handiwork of God, comes first; money, the handiwork of man, is of inferior importance. Man is the master, money the servant. Based upon all important questions to-day, republican legislation tends to make money the master and man the servant.

The words of Jefferson, "equal rights to all and special privileges to none," and the doctrine of Lincoln that this should be a government "of the people, by the people and for the people," are being disregarded and the instrumentalities of government are being used to advance the interests of those who are in a position to secure favors from the government.

The Desire of Democracy.

The democratic party is not making war upon the honest acquisition of wealth; it has no desire to discourage industry, economy and thrift. On the contrary it gives to every citizen the greatest possible stimulus to honest toil, when it promises him protection in the enjoyment of the proceeds of his labor. Property rights are most secure when human rights are respected. Democracy strives for a civilization in which every member of society will share according to his merits.

No one has a right to expect from society more than a fair compensation for the service which he renders to society. If he secures more, it is at the expense of some one else. It is no injustice to him to prevent his doing injustice to another. To him who would, either through class legislation or in the absence of necessary legislation, trespass upon the rights of another, the democratic party says: "Thou shalt not."

Republican Excuses.

Against us are arrayed a comparatively small, but politically and financially powerful, number who really profit by republican policies; but with them are associated a large number who, because of their attachment to their party name, are giving their support to doctrines antagonistic to the former teachings of their own party. Republicans who used to advocate bimetallism—now try to convince themselves that the gold standard is good enough; those who were formerly attached to the greenback are now seeking an excuse for giving national banks control of the nation's paper money; republicans who used to boast that the republican party was paying off the national debt, are now looking for reasons to support a perpetual and increasing debt; republicans who used to denounce a trust, now beguile themselves with the delusion that there are good trusts and bad trusts, when in their minds, the line between the two is hazy, indistinct and more obscure; republicans who, in times past, congratulated the country upon the small expense of our standing army, are now making light of the objections which are urged against a large increase in the permanent military establishment; republicans who gloried in the international influence when the nation was less powerful, now look with favor upon a foreign alliance; republicans who three years ago condemned "forcible annexation" as immoral and even criminal, are now sure that it is both immoral and criminal to oppose forcible annexation. That partisanship has already blinded many to these dangers is certain; how large a portion of the republican party can be drawn over to the new policy remains to be seen.

For a time republican leaders were inclined to deny to opponents the right to criticise the Philippine policy of the administration, but upon this question they found that both Lincoln and Clay asserted and exercised the right to criticise a president during the progress of the Mexican war.

Instead of meeting the issue boldly and submitting a clear and positive plan for dealing with Philippine question, the republican convention adopted a platform of the larger part of which was devoted to boasting and self-congratulation.

In addressing to these economic questions upon the country to the exclusion of those which involve the very structure of our government, the republican leaders give evidence of a willful abandonment of the earlier ideals of the party and of their complete subserviency to pecuniary considerations.

No Evasion.

But they will not be permitted to evade the stupendous and far-reaching issue which they have deliberately brought into the arena of politics. When the president, supported by a practically unanimous vote of the house and senate, entered upon a war with Spain for the purpose of aiding the struggling patriots of Cuba, the country, without regard to party, applauded. Although the democrats recognized that the administration would necessarily gain a political advantage from the conduct of a war which, in the very nature of the case, must soon end in a complete victory, they vied with the republicans in the support which they gave to the president. When the war was over and the republican leaders began to suggest the propriety of a colonial policy, opposition at once manifested itself. When the president formally laid before the senate a treaty which recognized the independence of Cuba, but provided for the cession of the Philippine islands to the United States, the democratic opposition became so apparent that many preferred to reject the treaty and risk the ills that might follow rather than take the chance of correcting the errors of the treaty by the independent action of this country.

Trust in the People.

I was among the number of those who believed it better to ratify the treaty and end the war, release the volunteers, remove the excuse for war expenditures, and then give to the Filipinos the independence which might be forced from Spain by a new treaty.

In view of the criticism which my action aroused in some quarters I take this occasion to restate the reasons given at that time. I thought it safer to trust the American people to give independence to the Filipinos than to trust executive accomplishment of that purpose to diplomacy with an unfriendly nation. Lincoln embodied this argument in the question, when he asked: "Can allens make treaties easier than friends can make laws?" I believe that we are now in a better position to wage a successful contest against imperialism than we would have been had the treaty been rejected. With the treaty ratified, a clean cut issue is presented between a government by consent and a government by force, and imperialists must bear the responsibility for all that happens until the question is settled. If the treaty had been rejected, the opponents of imperialism would have been held responsible for any international complications which might have arisen before the ratification of another treaty. But whatever differences of opinion may have existed as to the best method of opposing the colonial policy, there seems to be no difference as to the great importance of the question and there is no difference now as to the course to be pursued.

Promises to the Filipinos.

The title of Spain being extinguished, we were at liberty to deal with the Filipinos according to American principles. The Bacon resolution, introduced a month before the Spanish treaty was ratified, promised independence to the Filipinos on the same terms that it was promised to the Cubans. I supported this resolution and believe that if its adoption had not led to breaking out of hostilities would have prevented bloodshed, and that its adoption at any subsequent time would have ended bloodshed.

If the treaty had been rejected, considerable time would have necessarily elapsed before a new treaty could have been agreed upon and ratified, and during that time the question would have been agitating the public mind. If the Bacon resolution had been adopted by the senate and ratified by the president, either at the time of the ratification of the treaty or at any time afterwards, it would have taken the question of imperialism out of politics and left the American people free to deal with their domestic problems. But the resolution was defeated by the votes of the republicans in the senate, and from that time to this a republican congress has refused to take any action whatever in the matter.

Cowardly Accusations.

When hostilities broke out at Manila, republican senators and republican publicists at once sought to lay the blame upon those who had delayed the ratification of the treaty, and, during the progress of the war, the republicans have accused the opponents of imperialism of giving encouragement to the Filipinos. This is a contemptible evasion of responsibility.

If it is right for the United States to hold the Philippine islands permanently and imitate European empires in the government of colonies, the republican party ought to state its position and defend it, but it must expect the subject races to protest against such a policy and to resist to the extent of their ability. The Filipinos do not need any encouragement from Americans now living. Our whole history has been an encouragement, not only to the Filipinos but to all people who have decided to live in their own government. If the republicans are prepared to censure all who have used the principles set forth in the Declaration of Independence as a justification for their opposition to the policy of the republican party by indorsing its policy at the polls? A large standing army is not only a pecuniary burden to a self-governing people, but, accompanied by compulsory service, a constant source of irritation, but it is ever a menace to a republican form of government. The army is the personification of force, and militarism will inevitably change the ideals of the people and destroy the attachment of our young men from the arts of peace to the science of war. The government which relies for its defense upon its citizens is more likely to be just than one which has at call a large body of professional soldiers. A small standing army and a well equipped and well disciplined state militia are sufficient for all home defense, and in an emergency the nation should in the future as in the past place its dependence upon the volunteers who, at the first call, spring to arms at their country's call and return to private life when their services are no longer required—men who fight for love of home, not hirelings who work when the country needs workers.

Status of the Filipinos.

The republican platform assumes that the Philippine islands will be retained under American sovereignty, and we have a right to demand that the republican leaders a discussion of the future status of the Filipinos is he to be a citizen or a subject? If he is to be a citizen, how is he to become one? Is he to be a citizen of a public 8,000,000 or 10,000,000 Asiatics, so different from us in race and history that amalgamation is impossible? Are they to share with us in making the laws and shaping the destiny of this nation? No republican can reconcile existence has been enough to advocate such a proposition. The Monroe doctrine was rejected by the senate immediately after the ratification of the treaty, expressly negatives this idea. The republican platform ignores the situation when it says that the Filipinos cannot be citizens without endangering our institutions. How will they become citizens if they are not admitted? And what is the alternative? If the Filipino is not to be a citizen, shall we make him a subject? Not a word upon the democratic platform speaks with emphasis. It declares that the Filipino cannot be a subject without changing our form of government. A republic can have no subjects. It is impossible to rule in a government resting upon force; he is unknown in a government deriving its just powers from the consent of the governed. The republican platform says that "the largest measure of self-government consistent with the welfare and safety of the people should be secured to them by our duties shall be secured to them the Filipinos by law." This is a strange doctrine for a republican platform. It is in very existence to the men who offered their lives as a protest against government without representation, to the men who spilled their blood in the streets of Lexington rather than submit to taxation without representation. In what respect does the position of the republican party differ from the position taken by the king who ruled England in 1776? Did not the English government promise a good government to the colonists? What king ever pretended a bad government to his people? Did not the English government promise that the colonists should have the largest measure of self-government consistent with the welfare of the English duties? Did not the Spanish government promise to give to the Cubans the largest measure of self-government consistent with their welfare and Spanish duties? The whole difference between a monarchy and a republic is summed up in one sentence. In a monarchy the king gives to the people what he believes to be a good government; in a republic the people secure for themselves what they believe to be a good government. The republican party has accepted the European idea and planted itself upon the ground occupied by every king and every ruler who distrusts the capacity of the people for self-government or denies them a voice in their affairs.

The President's Will Is Only Law.

The republican platform promises the some measure of self-government is to be given to the Filipinos by law; but, even this pledge is shorn of its force when it promises elapsed after the ratification of the treaty before the adjournment of congress last June, and yet no step was taken during the with the Philippine situation. The will of the president has been the only law in the Philippines. This is unknown in American authority extends. Why does the republican party hesitate to legislate upon the Philippine question? What fear of law would disclose the radical departure from historic principles now contemplated by those who control the republican party. The storm of protest which greeted the Dred Scott decision, when the court held that a republic, the advocates of imperialism in this country dare not say a word in behalf of such a doctrine. Sympathy for the Boers does not arise from any unfriendliness toward England; the American people are not unfriendly toward the people of any nation. This sympathy is due to the fact that, as stated in our platform, we believe in the principle of self-government and reject, as did our forefathers, the claim of any king. If this nation surrenders its belief in the universal application of the principles set forth in the declaration of independence, it will lose the prestige and influence which it has enjoyed among the nations as an exponent of popular government.

Our opponents, conscious of the weakness of their cause, seek to confuse imperialism with expansion, and have even dared to claim Jefferson as a supporter of their policy. Jefferson spoke so freely and used language with such confidence that no one can be ignorant of his views. On one occasion he declared: "If there be one principle more deeply rooted than any other in the mind of every American it is that we should have nothing to do with conquest." And again he said: "Conquest is not in our principles; it is inconsistent with our government."

Right Kind of Expansion.

The forcible annexation of territory to be governed by arbitrary power differs as much from the acquisition of territory to be built up into states as a monarchy differs from a democracy. The democratic party does not oppose expansion, when expansion enlarges the area of the republic and incorporates land which can be settled by American citizens, or adds to our population people who are willing to become citizens and are capable of discharging their duties as such. The acquisition of the Louisiana territory, Florida, Texas and other tracts which have been secured from time to time, enlarged the republic, and the constitution followed the flag into the new territory. It is now proposed to acquire territory which is already more densely populated than our own country, and to impose upon the people a government, for which there is no warrant in our constitution or our laws. Even the annexation of the Hawaiian islands, to those who desire to cultivate it and have the physical power to acquire it cannot be invoked as a precedent in relation to the Philippine islands by the United States. If the islands were uninhabited American citizens would not be willing to live there and till the soil. The white race will not live as a subject race. Other nations have tried to colonize in the same latitude. The Netherlands have controlled Java for 300 years, and there are less than 50,000 more than 40,000 people of European birth scattered among 25,000,000 natives. After a century and a half of English domination in India, less than one-twentieth of one per cent of the people are of pure English birth, and it requires an army of 70,000 British soldiers to take care of the tax collectors. Spain has asserted title to the Philippine islands for three centuries, and yet, when our fleet entered Manila bay, there were less than 10,000 Spaniards residing in the Philippines.

A colonial policy means that we shall send to the Philippines a few traders, a few taskmasters and a few officials to govern the people, and to support the authority, a small army, if the people while they rule the natives.

Increase in Regular Army.

If we have an imperial policy we must have a large standing army as its natural and necessary complement. The spirit which will justify the forcible annexation of the Philippine islands will justify the seizure of other islands and the domination of other peoples. As soon as the first request we can expect a certain, if not rapid, growth of our military establishment. That a large standing army is necessary to maintain a colonial system will be admitted by the republican leaders is not a mere matter of conjecture, but a matter of fact. In his message of December 5, 1898, the president asked for authority to increase the standing army to 100,000. In 1896 the army contained about 25,000 men. Within two years the president asked for authority to increase it to 100,000, and a republican house of representatives complied with the request after the Spanish treaty was ratified, although no country was at war with the United States, if such an army is demanded when an imperial policy is first entered upon, but not openly avowed, what may be expected in the future when the republican party by indorsing its policy at the polls? A large standing army is not only a pecuniary burden to a self-governing people accompanied by compulsory service, a constant source of irritation, but it is ever a menace to a republican form of government. The army is the personification of force, and militarism will inevitably change the ideals of the people and destroy the attachment of our young men from the arts of peace to the science of war. The government which relies for its defense upon its citizens is more likely to be just than one which has at call a large body of professional soldiers. A MESSENGER KILLED.

The Murderer Arrested and Makes a Complete Confession.

The Diabolical Deed Was Deliberately Planned, the Victim Being an Intimate Friend—On the Eve of His Marriage.

Columbus, O., Aug. 11.—When Pan-Handle train No. 8 from the west pulled into the Union depot shortly after 10 o'clock Friday night Charles Lane, the express messenger, was found dead in the car riddled with bullets. The safe was open and all the valuables taken. The murder and robbery is supposed to have taken place between Milford Center and Columbus, as no harm had befallen the express messenger when the train [illegible] messenger was alone. No one heard the shots. It is supposed the robbers jumped off the train as it slowed up coming into the Union depot. The utmost mystery vests the affair. Lane was about 28 years of age. The officials of the Adams Express Co. give no statement as to the probable amount of money secured by the robbers, but it is reported to be a considerable sum.

Columbus, O., Aug. 13.—Charles B. H. Ferrell, a former employe of the Adams Express Co., was arrested Sunday afternoon in this city and has confessed to the killing of Messenger Charles Lane and the robbery of the way safe of the Adams Express Co. on the Pennsylvania eastbound train which arrived in this city at midnight Friday. One thousand dollars of the money which he had stolen was recovered. Ferrell was to have been married Thursday next to Miss Lillian Costlow, the beautiful young daughter of Patrick Costlow, an engineer on the Pennsylvania lines. He had been discharged from the employ of the Adams Express Co. about three months ago and had not since been able to secure employment. He confessed that the motive of the robbery was to secure money, of which he felt in great need on account of his approaching marriage. The money recovered he had given to Miss Costlow to keep for him, saying that it was money he had saved from his earnings. He was at the home of his affianced and in her company when placed under arrest.

Ferrell is but 22 years of age and has a splendid physique, being six feet in height. He has dark hair and an attracting face and was finely dressed. When the officers took him into custody he assumed a nonchalant demeanor but when he found that he could no longer deceive the officers, he made a full confession. After this statement had been taken by Chief of Police Tyler and he was led to a cell in the police station.

The confession of Ferrell disclosed a premeditated and blood-curdling crime that seemed almost impossible of belief to those who looked upon the man of gentlemanly and refined appearance, who reluctantly told the story of the murder and the robbery. He said that he had become desperate because of his inability to secure employment and a realization of the fact that he must have money to pay the expenses of his approaching marriage. The robbery had been carefully planned and it included the murder of Express Messenger Lane. He had no accomplices and no confidants. He knew Lane well. In fact, they were friends and he relied upon Lane's confidence to help him execute the crime. He knew that considerable money was always carried by the messenger on Pennsylvania train No. 8 between St. Louis and Columbus and that he was certain to secure a large sum if he robbed the way safe on that train.

Having provided himself with a Smith & Wesson six shooter, 38 caliber, he went to Urbana Friday morning and waited for No. 8. When the train arrived there Ferrell went at once to the express car and told Lane that he was out of money and asked permission to ride to Columbus with him. Lane consented, never for a moment suspecting the treachery of his pretended friend. For a short time after the train left Urbana they chatted pleasantly. Lane sat in a chair in the end of the car with his back slightly turned. When Ferrell had finally nerved himself for the crime, he drew his revolver and stepped up behind Lane unobserved and fired three shots in rapid succession into the messenger's back. Lane rolled off the chair on the floor on his face and Ferrell quickly fired the remaining shots at the prostrate body. Lane was unconscious but Ferrell, fearing that the wounds already inflicted would not cause death, took Lane's revolver and fired two more bullets from it into the body. Ferrell then took the key to the way safe from the pocket of the dead messenger and opened the safe and laid Lane's revolver inside where he could reach it easily in case he was detected and needed it to defend himself.

New Adjutant General.

Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 12.—Gov. McMillan has appointed Col. W. W. Brandon, of Dover, inspector general of the Tennessee national guards, as adjutant general of Tennessee, to succeed Gen. H. C. Lamb, who resigned the first of the week.

To Build a Railroad.

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 12.—Oliver & Co., of Birmingham, have secured the contract to build a 140-mile extension to the Knoxville & Augusta railroad, to cost about $100,000. It will go from Maryville, penetrating the timber belt, DEVOTES HER TIME TO POOR.

Wealth, home comforts, and every luxury money can acquire have no attraction for Miss Mae Brown, daughter of John Crosby Brown, millionaire banker. And it is well for the poor of the East side of New York that they have not, for had it not been for her a score or more of persons would have died from the heat during the recent hot spell. To her a life on the East side, in the heart of the tenement district, is preferable to the spacious brown mansion on East Thirty-seventh street, for on the East side Miss Brown can minister to the poor. Miss Brown took a course in nursing at the Presbyterian hospital. So many rich girls take up nursing as a fad and then give it up when the hard tasks come that it was not thought Miss Brown would continue long. The banker's daughter [illegible] drew at the hospital she devoted to the poor.

Before graduating Miss Brown became interested in the nurses' settlement, 265 Henry street, established by Miss Wald and Miss Brewster several years ago. No sooner was Miss Brown graduated than she took up her residence in the settlement, and since she has made a study of conditions existing on the East side and helped to allay suffering.

LEAVES DAUGHTER A FORTUNE

Vain Mother, Dying, Becomes Reconciled to Her Child, of Whom She Was Ashamed.

By the death in San Francisco of Mrs. Almira S. Townsend, her daughter, Mrs. Ella F. Murray, of Boston, inherits a fortune estimated to be worth over half a million dollars.

Mrs. Murray had been estranged from her mother from childhood, the cause being the extreme vanity and frivolity of the mother, who would not acknowledge that she was the mother of a child, but often referred to her as her sister.

When very young Ella was placed in a convent and educated. Upon leaving that place she went to live with a family named Murray, at Savin Hill, Boston, and subsequently married the son, Thomas F. Murray. Mr. Murray died about a year and a half ago. A letter and a telegram have been received from Mrs. Murray saying that her mother had become reconciled before death, and that she had successfully proved her claim to the estate and had been appointed administratrix.

MONSTER EAGLE SEIZES CHILD

An eagle swooped down on a group of children who were playing in the yard of T. Smith, a farmer of Sheboygan Falls, Wis., the other day, clutched one of the little ones in its talons and was making off with its burden when it was brought down by a well-directed shot from the father of the baby, who had been brought to the scene by the screams of the children.

When struck the bird let its victim fall, but the child was not seriously hurt.

Epileptics in Russia.

Until now epileptics in Russia have been treated as insane. They have been confined in lunatic asylums, in the same wards with hopeless lunatics. The Russian press undertook a crusade against these conditions, and now a building is to be erected where epileptics will receive proper medical treatment.

Passing of the Horse.

So soon as nature sees an improvement there is a change. The candle gave way to electricity. The spinning wheel to machinery, the horse to the automobile. The fact that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has been sold for over half a century, proves its value. There is nothing to equal it for stomach or liver trouble. It is Nature's own remedy, and the only one to cure dyspepsia or weak stomach.

His Point of View.

Fair Medical Student—What do you think of women for physicians?

Old Doctor—I think they are all right. Why, we derive two-thirds of our income from women.—Chicago Evening News.

$500.00 a Very Low Estimate.

This is the opinion expressed by Charles B. Goldthwaite, of Troy, Ala., who wrote, as as follows: "I would not take $500 for the good Palmer's Lotion has done my son. The physician who had treated him for fifteen months pronounced it the worst case of Granulated Eyelids he ever saw." No household should be without Palmer's Lotion and Lotion Soap. If your druggist does not keep them, send his name to Solon Palmer, 374 Pearl Street, New York, and receive free pamphlet of testimonials and sample of Lotion or Soap.

When a preparation has an advertised reputation that is world-wide, it means that preparation is meritorious. If you go into a store to buy an article that has achieved universal popularity like Cascarets Candy Cathartic for example, you feel it has the endorsement of the world. The judgment of the people is infallible because it is impersonal. The retailer who wants to sell you "something else" in place of the article you ask for, has an ax to grind. Don't it stand to reason? He's trying to sell something that is not what he represents it to be. Why? Because he expects to derive an extra profit out of your credulity. Don't you see through his little game? The man who will try to sell you a substitute for Cascarets is a fraud. Beware of him! He is trying to steal the honest earned benefits of a reputation which another business man has paid for, and if his conscience will allow him to go so far, he will go farther. If he cheats his customer in one way, he will in another and it is not safe to do business with him. Beware of the Cascaret substitutor! Remember Cascarets are never sold in bulk but in metal boxes with the long tailed "C" on every box and each tablet stamped C. C. C.

30 FEET OF BOWELS

are packed away in your insides and must be kept clean, in order and doing business.

It's a long way, with many turns and pitfalls to catch the refuse and clog the channel if not most carefully cleaned out every day.

When this long canal is blockaded, look out for trouble—furred tongue, bad breath, belching of gases, yellow spots, pimples and boils, headaches, spitting up of food after eating—an all-around disgusting nuisance.

Violent pill poisons or griping salts are dangerous to use for cleaning out the bowels. They force out the obstruction by causing violent spasms of the bowels, but they leave the intestines weak and even less able to keep up regular movements than before, and make a larger dose necessary next time.

Then you have the pill habit, which kills more people than the morphine and whiskey habits combined.

The only safe, gentle but certain bowel cleansers are sweet, fragrant CASCARETS, because they don't force out the foecal matter with violence, but act as a tonic on the whole 30 feet of bowel wall, strengthen the muscles and restore healthy, natural action. Buy and try them! (Look out for imitations and substitutes or you can't get results. Cascarets are never sold in bulk. Look for the trade-mark, the long-tailed "C" on the box.) You will find that in an entirely natural way your bowels will be promptly and permanently

Made CLEAN and STRONG by Cascarets

Get the genuine if you want results! Tablet is marked "CCC." Cascarets are never sold in bulk, but only and always in the light blue metal box with the long-tailed "C." Look for the trade-mark—the C with a long tail—on the lid.

A Prof. Withers, of Lebanon, Ohio, conducted the Institute this year. Aint there a teacher in the county that could do that? We think so—the Superintendent use to do it and turned every fellow loose, and Dr. Maxfield had the same right theu to his views as Prof. Grigsby.

The excursion parties that come here from the city, have no regard for the Sabbath, and violate all the laws of both God and man. Should we go to Cincinnati and do as those people do when they come here, a big policeman would nab us before we got up in town as far as Second street.

We know that the language of flattery is far from pleasing to Mr. N. S. Walton, but any man that acted as he did and his boys in the special election just past deserves mention, as every one of the name voted and worked for the nominee. That is the kind of Democrats that will bring Kentucky back into line this fall.

An Iowa editor says it is caused by the fellow kissing his girl while he is feeding hay to a cow; and an eastern Kansas exchange is of the opinion that it is caused by missing the girl and kissing the cow. A political editor says it is caused by two much kissing in the heydey of youth.

It should be borne in mind that the fair will begin at Florence on 29th inst. The directors are working hard to make this year's fair much better than any of the past. They have advertised it thoroughly, and are endeavoring to secure exhibits from every section of the State. With liberal premiums and the very favorable location of the grounds, they believe that the exhibition in the various rings will be very much better this year than they have in the past. Exhibitors from every direction have been sending to the President and Secretary for catalogues, an evidence that considerable interest is being manifested on the part of the public. The same popular admission fees will be charged as in the past. Nothing charged for entries for exhibition.

Remedy for Flux.

Squire James M. Lillard gives out this as a "sure cure" for flux, says the Harrodsburg Democrat: "Fill a tumbler half full of apple vinegar, put a teaspoonful each of Crab Orchard and Epsom salts and 1 tablespoonful of table salt. Take a dose every hour until six doses have been taken and then every two hours and you will be well before you know it." Mr. Lillard is 94 years of age, and he has seen this remedy tried where the life of the patient was despaired of, but has never known it to fail to effect a cure.

The only case of interest that had been tried when we went to press was that of the Commonwealth against Z. T. Kelly and Oscar Craig, officers of election in the Carlton precinct, indicted at the last April term of court for refusing to allow James H. Hastings to vote at the last November election. Mr. Hastings had moved to Risiug Sun, Ind., and back to this state several times in the past and had been voting in Kentucky all the time, the same officers, Kelly and Craig, having permitted him to vote on several occasions before, but last November they refused to allow him to vote, and Mr. Hastings indicted them. The testimony of the prosecution being heard the court sustained the defendants' motion for a peremptory instruction, and the jury was instructed to find for defendants.

BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY.

A souvenir of Mr. Gladstone's hobby as an amateur woodsman, consisting of a chip from an elm which he felled at Haarden in 1880, was sold for 5 shillings in a London auction room the other day.

Baron Mumm von Schwarzenstein, the new German minister to China, married an American, as did his predecessor, the murdered Von Ketteler. The baroness, though born in London, is the daughter of a New Yorker, Mr. Le Vinsen, a cousin of Gov. Roosevelt. Her husband was formerly connected with the German embassy at Washington.

The horseshoe in China, as well as in other countries, is looked upon as a harbinger of good luck. For that reason Chinese mandarins, when buried, have horseshoe graves, and they believe that the bigger the horseshoe grave the better the luck of the departed. As a result the mandarins outvie each other in the size of these horseshoe graves.

The number of Mohammedans has been estimated by a missionary living in Arabia at 196,500,000. of these, 18,300,000 are under the rule of the Turkish government, 23,000,000 are ruled by other Musselman sovereigns, 36,500,000 are subject to African princes, 80,000,000 live in China, and 99,000,000 are under Christian rulers. Of these last, about 58,000,000 belong to India and Beloochistan.

The Chinese go fishing with trained cormorants, each of which has a ring round its neck, to prevent its swallowing its prey. Welshmen go one better. They have trained dogs to catch eels along the coast. The big congers lie among the rock pools at low tide. The fishermen probe for them with poles among the crevices, and the dogs jump in and pin the writhing creatures.

Before long the subjects of Nicholas II., czar of all the Russias, will have to face a great difficulty because wiseacres of St. Petersburg are determined to adopt the regulation calendar and so bring themselves within the pale of civilization. When they do that, all anniversaries of events which happened upon certain days old style will be commemorated upon corresponding days eleven days later, new style.

The First Church of Christ, Scientist, of New York, as residuary legatee under the will of Helen C. Brush, will receive about $70,000. Mrs. Brush died recently, leaving an estate estimated at $60,000 in personal property. Her will appoints her sister, Mrs. Almira J. Southard, executrix and leaves her $10,000. Other small bequests aggregating $10,000 to her relatives are also made, and the balance of her estate is left to the church.

The total number of Chinese in the neighborhood of Tien-Tsin is placed at 200,000. The majority of them are armed with Mausers, and they have also excellent Krupp-Nordenfeldt and Maxim guns, manufactured in the Chinese arsenals or bought in Europe. Although this force looks formidable on paper, yet the discipline is so lax that there is no doubt they could offer but slight resistance to an army of 50,000 fully equipped men of one nationality.

The story has been circulated that King Humbert carried life insurance aggregating $7,000,000, and that the life of the prince of Wales is insured for $25,000,000. Each of them may have insurance, but the biggest life companies do not want risks of such magnitude, even upon the lives of kings and princes. There are some men in this country carrying insurance of $1,000,000, or more, but it is doubtful if much more is permissible or desirable.

The dowager empress of China was the recipient on the occasion of her sixtieth birthday of an interesting presentation from the ministers of England and America. This consisted of a copy of the New Testament, bound in silver covers and inclosed in a chased silver casket, subscribed for by the Christian women of China. On one cover was a gold plate bearing the words: "Holy Classic of Salvation." The subscribers numbered about 10,000, and the cost of the presentation amounted to $1,250.

In spite of precautions taken, the perfect sanitation of the city, the fine natural drainage, the cleanliness of the streets, Hong-Kong is one of the most unhealthful spots on the globe. With its tropical heat, the lofty peaks that half encircle it catch the clouds that the rapid evaporation creates, and they are squeezed like a sponge, the floods of rain pouring down in streaming torrents. The houses are ill-ventilated, with perforated ceilings, through which the air circulates, admitted from openings piereed by the outer walls.

On the new locomotives of the Denver & Rio Grande railway nozzles have been placed on the roofs of the cabs pointing at the rear of the tender and the platform of the front end of the baggage car. These connect with the hot water of the boiler through a cock convenient to the engine driver or fireman, who can instantly send a jet of mixed steam and boiling water, at 200 pounds pressure, that would effectually kill anybody happening to be in its range. The jet is for protection against train robbers.

CONGER HOLDING ON.

A Belated Message From Our Minister In Peking Received In Washington.

China Appeals to the United States For a Peaceful Settlement of Her Difficulties.

The Answer Made is a Reiteration of the Demands Previously Made By the United States Upon the Chinese Government.

Washington, Aug. 12.—The following dispatch communicating additional message from Minister Conger was made public Saturday morning by the state department:

"Canton, Aug. 11.—Secretary of State, Washington: Conger, date of August 10, Tsinan, answering my message, says that the legations are under siege by the imperial soldiery. The situation is desperate. The losses of the legations are 60 killed and about 100 wounded. There is some sickness, nevertheless the general health "continues good."

He concludes:

"Whatever may be the outcome, we will hold on indefinitely."

"McWADE."

It is believed that the date assigned this dispatch by the consul refers to the file date when the message left Tsinan and does not fix the time when it left Peking by courier.

The following cablegram has been received at the navy department from Adm. Remey:

"Che-Foo, Aug. 10.—Bureau of Navigation, Washington: Taku, Aug. 7.—Chaffee telegraphs from front: Sixth, Yang Tsun occupied. Casualties about sixty in my command. Two marines wounded. Many prostrated by heat and fatigue; next move yet unknown. General commanding English at front telegraphs:

"Marched from Peitsang nine miles toward Yang Tsun on right. Russians on left. After repeated advance of three miles under hot rifle and shell fire, our troops carried first line of defense. Casualties about 50 killed or death from sunstroke. REMEY."

St. Petersburg, Aug. 12.—The official Messenger Saturday published the following:

"The foreign office received a telegram to-day direct from M. DeGiers, the Russian minister at the Chinese capital, from Peking.

The dispatch was evidently taken by special courier to Tsi-Nan from the capital of Shantung and was thence telegraphed August 7 by the local yanica.

"M. DeGiers announces that the siege of the legations continues, the besieged still having some provisions left. The Chinese government proposes to transmit the minister's messages, and that they leave Peking. As the ministers had not sufficient guarantee, they replied that they must receive the permission of their government before leaving the city."

The Messenger then announces that the czar's approval has been given for DeGiers to start for Tien-Tsin with his entire staff, and the marine guard on condition that the existing government at Peking and the emperor afford them sure guarantee that the journey can be undertaken without danger.

At the same time M. DeGiers is expected to call attention to the heavy responsibility the Chinese government incur should there be the slightest infraction of the violability of the persons accompanying them to Tien-Tsin.

Washington, Aug. 13.—Indications of the desire of China for a peaceful settlement of her present difficulties have been multiplying for several days. Official evidence of that desire was presented to the department of state Sunday. It was in the form of an edict promulgated by the emperor, Kwang Hsu, appointing Earl Li Hung Chang as envoy-plenipotentiary to negotiate with the powers for an "immediate cessation of hostilities" pending a solution of the problems which have grown out of the anti-foreign uprising in the empire. Earl Li is to act directly for the emperor and a fair inference is that whatever terms of settlement he may reach with the powers will be approved by the imperial government.

During the day only one dispatch that was made public reached any of the government departments from China. A belated message from Minister Conger was transmitted to the war department by Gen. Chaffee. It expressed simply his ability to "hold on" until Gen. Chaffee should come to his relief. All the power of this government will be exerted to get that relief to him and the other imprisoned legationers at the earliest possible moment.

Minister Wu was an early caller at the department of state. He presented to Mr. Adee a copy of the edict which he had received Saturday night. Minister Wu expressed the belief that the edict presented a means of peaceful adjustment of the present trouble and that the request of the Chinese government for a cessation of hostilities pending peace negotiations that was entirely reasonable.

Later in the day Secretary Adee, by direction of President McKinley, presented to Minister Wu for transmission to his government the reply of the United States to the imperial edict appointing Li Hung Chang envoy to negotiate with the powers for a cessation of hostilities. The text of the reply was not made public. In effect, however, it is a reiteration of the demands previously made by the United States upon China, coupled with a vigorous intimation that no negotiations will be entertained until the Chinese government shall have complied with those demands.

Paris, Aug. 13.—According to dispatches received from Vice Adm. Conrejels, of the French naval command, native Christians and missionaries on the line to Hankow, 500 kilometers from Peking, are in great danger, the point being entirely outside the sphere of the allied operations. He has also received bad news regarding New Chwang, captured August 4, which as he is advised has since been evacuated.

According to his advice from the French colony in Peking, eight marines, one cadet and one customs employe have been killed.

The Patrie publishes the following: "The procurer general of the congregation of the Lazarist missions, Mgr Buttenbourg, informs us that he has just been advised by M. Delcasse that, according to a dispatch from the French consul general at Shanghai 7,000 Christians have been massacred at Pao Ting, east of Peking. No other details are at hand."

If such startling news has been received by the foreign office it has been kept secret, as the usual news channels have not been made acquainted with anything of the kind.

London, Aug. 13.—"The sooner we can be got out of this the better, for it is inconvenient for the Chinese government and unsafe for ourselves." This is a message received from Sir Robert Hart, dated Peking, August 5, and sent in cipher to the Chinese maratime customs office in London.

Commenting upon it the Morning Post says: "It would seem to indicate that the Chinese government is anxious for the safety of the foreigners or at any rate anxious to get them safely out of Peking, while Sir Robert Hart evidently expects that they will get out sooner or later."

Sheng, director general of railroads and telegraphs, according to a Shanghai dispatch to the Standard, expresses grave fears for the safety of the members of the legations when the defeated Chinese troops return to the capital.

The Austrian naval commander reports to Vienna that the allies decided to rest for three days after the taking of Yang-Tsun.

London, Aug. 14.—An edict emanating from Peking and authorizing Li Hung Chang to negotiate with the powers for peace has, it is reported from Shanghai under Thursday's date, been received there.

The correspondents at Yokohama again send the statement that a Russo-Japanese force is moving on Peking from the north. The movements and number of this force are, it is further asserted, kept secret in order to prevent the facts from reaching Peking.

Brussels, Aug. 13.—The foreign office has received the following message, signed by E. De Cartier De Marchienne, first secretary of the Belgian legation at Peking:

"Shanghai, Aug. 10.—An imperial decree names Li Hung Chang ministers plenipotentiary to negotiate peace."

The foreign office has also received from the Belgian minister at Peking a dispatch identical with that received by the French foreign office from the French minister at Peking, M. Pichon, telling of the attempts made by the Chinese to secure the foreign ministers acceptance of a Chinese escort to Tien-Tsin.

Washington, Aug. 14.—Another message from Minister Conger was received by Chinese Minister Wu at 12:30 Friday morning. Wu took it to the state department Friday morning where it was translated. It was dated August 9, and had been sent from Peking two days before. It was identical with the message from the French minister at Peking, which was made public in Paris Thursday. It says that the allied forces must be of sufficient strength when they reach Peking to protect 800 foreigners and 3,000 native Christians, who can not be left to be massacred. It also states that the ministers refused to leave Peking without instructions from their governments. It is probable that all ministers sent similar notes to their governments.

The only new features in Minister Conger's message from that of M. Pichon is the list of American casualties. He reports 7 killed and 16 wounded. Capt. Myers and Surgeon Lippitt, who were among the wounded, are doing well.

Canadian Law Stricter than Ours.

Montreal, Aug. 10.—H. A. Taylor, T. Y. Powderly and P. S. Hamlin, United States immigration commissioners, are here to confer with the various railroads for the purpose of having immigrants inspected in future in accordance with the law passed in the United States during the presidency of Grover Cleveland. The railroads here maintain that the Canadian system is much stricter than that in the United States.

Sentenced to Death.

Marietta, Ga., Aug. 11.—Sam Robinson, a Negro, charged with criminal assault on Mrs. George Inzer, was Friday convicted and sentenced to hang September 1. He confessed after conviction. Two companies of Georgia militia guarded him from the mob violence on the trip to and from this place. He was taken to Atlanta for safe keeping.

Filipinos Surrender.

Washington, Aug. 13.—The war department received the following dispatch from Gen. MacArthur at Manila: "Col. Grassa, August 12, in vicinity of Taying, surrendered command to Col. Freeman, 24th United States infantry, consisting of one major, six captains, six lieutenants, 169 men, 100 rifles and 50 bolos."

THE FATE OF POWERS

It Will Probably Be Known the Latter End of the Week.

The Whole Court Will Go to Frankfort to Inspect the Scene of the Goebel Murder in a Few Days.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 10.—When court convened Thursday morning he defendant was attired in a new suit of dark clothes, which fit to a nicety. He has lost flesh during the long ordeal, but does not appear to be as much worn by the trial as some of the jurors who are showing plainly the effect of the strain upon them.

Surveyor Coolman, who testified Wednesday, was allowed to make an explanation regarding some of the statements made by him and also to make some corrections of answers which he explained, were made upon a misunderstanding of the questions put to him.

The prosecution cross-examined Coolman again and his testimony went over the greater part of the ground covered by him on Wednesday. The defense had shown by the witness that the bullet, if fired from the secretary of state's office, and passed through Goebel's body at the range of 1 13-16 inches through the body, it would have entered the ground near the fountain, and that the bullet cut out of the hackberry tree could not be the one fired by the assassin. The prosecution sought to break down this contention and the cross-examination strung out at great length.

On cross-examination Coolman exhibited the profile of the surface of the ground over which the bullet would have passed. From the corner window of the second floor the 6.3 per foot would have been over two inches. The line from the second story window to the hole in the hackberry tree would have passed 11 feet five inches above the pavement. The elevation of a line from the window of the secretary of state's office above a nail supposed to indicate the spot where Senator Goebel fell is four feet one inch.

The latter elevation referred to the second window while the elevation from the first window would be four feet three and one-half inches. Prof. J. J. Rucker, Georgetown, said he went to Frankfort with Engineer Coolman on Tuesday, and then he made a statement corroborating the testimony given by Coolman.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 11.—Mrs. John Davis, the wife of one of the defendants charged with being an accessory to the Goebel assassination, was the first witness introduced by the defense in the Powers trial Friday.

Commonwealth's Attorney Franklin interposed a formal objection to the eligibility of the witness, but the court ruled that she was a competent witness. Powers boarded at her house. John Powers was also there January 25. She testified that the latter was ill in his room at her house that day, and did not leave his room after 11 o'clock that day. This was in contradiction of the testimony of Robert Noaks, who told of an alleged conversation with John Powers at the state house, in which he said the latter told him "to stay close to the building as something was going to happen as soon as Goebel and those fellows came down."

Solomon Wilder, Whitley county, testified that Robt. Noaks was at Corbin in March and asked him to tell anybody he was in town, as he might be arrested in connection with the assassination conspiracy. Noaks further said he believed Caleb Powers innocent. He said the members of the Noaks military company at Corbin, instead of being desperate, as Noaks had alleged, were mostly good men.

On direct examination Wilder had testified that John L. Jones, of the Noaks military company, was a man of good character. On cross-examination, he said Jones had twice been convicted of murder and sentenced in each case to life imprisonment, but was pardoned.

A telegram sent by Robt. Noaks to Miss Effie Blankenship, of Crawfordsville, Ind., was read to the jury. It asked for a return of all of his letters. The defense had undertaken on July 24 to prove by Noaks that he had written Miss Blankenship letters in which he told her that he had to pretend to know a great deal to keep out of jail.

The defense then asked to be allowed to offer as evidence the act of the legislature appropriating $100,000 for the purpose of aiding in the search for and prosecution of the assassin or assassins of Wm. Goebel.

The prosecution offered no objection and the act was made.

Walter Day, former republican state treasurer, testified that Youtsey sent for him the day before the shooting. He went to see Youtsey, and the latter told him that for $200 he would settle the contest. Witness pressed Youtsey to know how he would accomplish it, but the latter would only say that for that amount he would settle it. Witness said to Youtsey: "I am not that kind of man," and refused to confer further with Youtsey about it.

On cross-examination a letter written by Day to Secretary of State Hill was produced. The defense objected to it being introduced, and the jury was excluded during argument over it.

In the letter Day states "I will make a good witness for the commonwealth and I want you to go and see Prosecuting Attorney Franklin and tell him I want to go on the stand and tell all I know about the case. The letter expresses the opinion that Youtsey is the guilty party. The court admitted the letter as evidence.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 11.—The defense in the case of Caleb Powers, ex-secretary of state, charged with being an accessory before the fact in the Goebel assassination rested the testimony for that side at 2 o'clock. The prosecution introduced several witnesses in rebuttal and have a number of others who will be introduced.

The jury will be taken to Frankfort either Monday or Tuesday to view the scene of the tragedy. The jury when it comes to considering the evidence will not have to decide the question of which side has dealt in perjury, but which side has been burdened with the largest amount of that product, it being concluded that perjury has been indulged in in large quantities by somebody for the last few days during which contradiction and [illegible] was the leading factor and which will possibly keep up till the close of the trial.

Ex-Gov. Brown, leading counsel for the defense, said that in his opinion the state had utterly failed to make out a case against Powers and that the jury would be compelled to bring in a verdict of acquittal. There are few who believe the trial will result in a conviction but a majority of people anticipate a hung jury. The lawyers for the defense insist they are entitled to a conviction but do not anticipate the jury's verdict by giving out any statement.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 12.—When court convened Saturday it was with the prospect that the rebuttal evidence for the prosecution in the Powers case would be concluded some time during the day. A persistent rumor that Youtsey might take the stand in rebuttal was denied by people sufficiently close to him to make the denial semi-official. W. F. Grayot, assistant state auditor, produced the books of the state auditor in response to a subpoena duces tecum to show what amount of the $100,000 reward appropriated by the legislature had been expended in the search for and prosecutions of those accused of the crime. The record showed that in all $5,000 had been drawn.

Mr. Grayot also produced the record showing that W. H. Culton was paid his full salary as a clerk in the auditor's office for December and part of the month of January. This was done to contradict ex-Auditor Stone, who charged Culton with stealing $1,000, and who stated that he dismissed Culton and caused Auditor Sweeney to refuse to give him a clerkship.

John R. Pflanz, jailer of Jefferson county, testified that while W. H. Culton was in jail at Louisville in March ex-Auditor Stone called at the jail and manifested great interest in Culton's welfare. Stone spoke in the highest terms of Culton, and said to the witness among other things that his word was as good as his bond.

D. P. Mayhew, of Knox county, said he saw Wharton Golden in the barbershop at Barbourville just before his confession. Golden did not display a roll of money and said nothing about going to get part of the reward. A. L. Kash, an attorney of Laurel county, corroborated the statement of witnesses, who testified Friday, in regard to the statement of James Sparks, county attorney of Laurel county, on January 28, to the effect that Goebel was to be killed that day, and that Gov. Taylor would pardon the assassin.

By this time next week the fate of Caleb Powers, the first of the Goebel assassin suspects, will be in the hands of the jury or will have been decided. It was expected Saturday morning that all the evidence would be in by the close of Saturday afternoon's session, and the jury will doubtless be taken to Frankfort Monday for a survey of the scene of the crime. Tuesday the speechmaking will begin, and there are at least five attorneys on each side who will want to be heard, but the court has not yet given permission for this number of speeches. Powers has stood the long strain well, and has shown wonderful knowledge of the testimony. Most of the members of the jury are used to out-door life, and some of them have almost collapsed

LARGE STANDING ARMY.

Gen. Joseph Wheeler Says the Only Security for Peace is to Be Always Prepared for War.

Chicago, Aug. 12.—Gen. Joseph Wheeler made a strong plea for the standing army in his convocation address at the University of Chicago. He declared that the most certain way to avoid the desolation and the horrors of war was to be constantly ready with men and arms for every emergency; that the only security for peace was to be always prepared and ready to engage in war. At the close of the address Gen. Wheeler was cheered by the students, many of whom are from the southern states, and when the university band struck up the tune of "Dixie," the enthusiasm rose to a high pitch.

A Letter From Andree.

Paris, Aug. 11.—A dispatch from Stockholm announces that the American consul has received a letter from an American, formerly a resident of Cleveland, stating he had found June 13, in 47 degrees 35 minutes latitude north and 43 degrees 27 minutes longitude west, a letter from Andree, the aeronaut and explorer, written on June 2, 1900, in German. The authorities of Sweden are making an effort to get possession of the letter.

Will Bright, colored, was hanged at Tallehassee, Fla., for the murder of John Smith, colored, in October, 1897.

The tripping feet—the sparkling eye—the graceful movement—belong not alone to the budding maiden.

These graces are the right—aye duty of every woman until the hair whitens—and regal dignity replaces them.

The mother who guards her strength has so much more to devote to the care and education of her dear ones. She should be a comfort—a cheer—always.

Yet how many feel that they have the strength to properly balance the home? The world is listless, weary and morbid. Its blood moves sluggishly and is full of impurities. It needs a kindling, invigorating tonic to set it afire—it needs Pe-ru-na,

THE ONE MEDICINE

in the world which women may rely upon positively. Pe-ru-na is good for everyone, but particularly for women. The various weaknesses which afflict their delicate organism spring from inflammation or catarrh of the mucous lining, and Pe-ru-na is a specific for catarrh in any organ of the body. Any suggestion of a mucous membrane simply means catarrh of the organ affected. This is why Pe-ru-na cures all sorts of troubles where other remedies fail. If there is a catarrhal affection the matter with you anywhere Pe-ru-na will cure you.

NEBRASKA THE LAND OF PLENTY

I wonder why it is that so many men spend their days working hard on rented farms, barely making enough to get along, with no great prospect ahead of owning their own homes, when within a few hours' journey is a land of plenty—Nebraska—where all kinds of grain and fruit can be raised with the least amount of labor; where cattle and hogs fed on corn bring a handsome profit; where the climate is healthful and churches and schools abound; where land is cheap and can be bought on very easy terms.

Think of this, and if you want information about the country send to me for "The Corn Belt," a beautifully illustrated monthly paper that tells all about Nebraska, and also for "The West Nebraska Grazing Country," an interesting illustrated booklet containing a large sectional map of Nebraska.

On the first and third Tuesdays of each month during the balance of this year cheap excursion tickets will be sold over our road to Nebraske, so that people may go and see for themselves. Ask your ticket agent about this.

CITY AND COUNTRY.

Dr. Talmage Talks of the Good Done by the Former.

He Says It Is the Birthplace of Civilization and Not Necessarily Evil—Some Advice to the Young.

[Copyright, 1900, by Louis Klopsch.]

From St. Petersburg, the Russian capital, where he was cordially received by the emperor and empress and the empress dowager, Dr. Talmage sends this discourse, in which he shows the mighty good that may be done by the cities, and also the vast evil they may do by their allurements to the unsuspecting and the unguarded. The text is Zechariah 1:17: "My cities through prosperity shall yet be spread abroad."

The city is no worse than the country. The vices of the metropolis are more evident than the vices of the rural districts because there are more to be bad if they wish to be. The merchant is as good as the farmer. There is no more cheating in town than out of town—no worse cheating; it is only on a larger scale. The countryman sometimes prevaricates about the age of the horse that he sells, about the size of the bushel with which he measures the grain, about the peaches at the bottom of the basket as being as large as those at the top, about a quarter of beef as being tender when it is tough, and to as bad an extent as the citizen, the merchant prevaricates about calicoes or silks or hardware.

And as to villages, I think that in some respects they are worse than the cities, because they copy the vices of the cities in the meanest shape, and as to gossip its heaven is a country village. Everybody knows everybody's business better than he knows it himself. The grocery store or the blacksmith shop in day and night is the grand depot for unsonline tittle tattle, and there are always in the village a half dozen women who have their sunbonnets hanging near, so that at the first item of derogatory news they can fly out and cackle it all over the town. Countrymen must not be too hard in their criticism of the citizen, nor must the plow run too sharply against the yardstick.

Cain was the founder of the first city, and I suppose it took after him in morals. It takes a city a long time to escape from the character of a founder. Where the founders of a city are criminal exiles, the filth, the vice, the prisons, are the shadow of those founders. It will take centuries for New York to get over the bad influence of the pious founders of that city—the founders whose prayers went up in the streets where now banks discount and brokers bargain and companies declare dividends and smugglers swear custom house lies, and above the roar of the wheels and the crack of the auctioneer's mallet ascends the ascription: "We worship thee, O almighty dollar!" The old church that used to stand on Wall street is to this day throwing its blessing on the scene of traffic and on all the ships folding their white wings in the harbor. In other days people gathered in cities for defense—honest the poor, who had nothing to be stolen, lived in the country, but in these times, when through civilization and Christianity it is safe to live anywhere, people gather in the cities for purposes of rapid gain.

Cities are not evil necessarily, as some have argued. They have been the birthplace of civilization. In them popular liberty has lifted its voice. Witness Genoa and Pisa and Venice. After the death of Alexander the Great among his papers were found extensive plans of cities, some to be built in Europe, some to be built in Asia. The cities in Europe were to be occupied by Asiatics; the cites in Asia were to be occupied, according to his plans, by Europeans, and so there should be a comingling and a fraternity and a kindness and a good will between the continents and between the cities. So there always ought to be. The strangest thing in my comprehension is that there should be bickerings and rivalries among our American cities. New York must stop curienturing Philadelphia, and Philadelphia must stop picking at New York, and certainly the continent is large enough for St. Paul and Minneapolis. What is good for one city is good for all the cities. Here is the great highway of our national prosperity. On that highway of national prosperity walk the cities.

A city with large forehead and great brain—that is Boston; a city with deliberate step and calm manner—that is Philadelphia; a city with its pocket full of change—that is New York; two cities going with a rush that astounds the continent—they are St. Louis and Chicago; a city that takes its wife and children along with it—that is Brooklyn. Cincinnati, Louisville, Pittsburgh, all the cities of the north and all the cities of the south, some distinguished for one thing, some for another, one for professional ability, another for influence, another for fashion, but none to be spared. What advantages one advantages all. What damages Boston common damages Washington square, Laurel Hill, Mount Auburn. Greenwood, weep over the same grief. The statue of Benjamin Franklin in New York greeting the bronze statue of Edward Everett in Boston. All the cities a confraternity. I cannot understand how there should go on bickerings and rivalries. I plead for a higher style of brotherhood or sisterhood among the cities.

But while there are great differences in some respects I have to tell you that all cities impress upon me and ought to impress upon you three or four very important lessons, all of them agreeing in the same thing. It does not make any difference in what part of the country we walk the streets of a great city there is one lesson I think which ought to strike every intelligent Christian man, and that is the world is a scene of toil and struggle. Here and there you find a man in the street who has his arms folded and who seems to have no particular errand, but if you will stand at the corner of the street and watch the countenances of those who go by you will see in most instances there is an intimation that they are on an errand which must be executed at the earliest moment possible, so you are jostled hither and thither by business men, up this ladder with a hod of bricks, out of this bank with a roll of bills, digging a cellar, shingling a roof, binding a book, mending a watch. Work, with its thousand eyes and thousand feet and thousand arms, goes on singing its song, "Work, work, work!" while the drums of the mill beat it and the steam whistles fife it. In the carpeted isles of the forest, in the woods from which the eternal shadow is never lifted, on the shore of the sea over whose iron coast tosses the tangled foam, sprinkling the cracked cliffs with a baptism of whirlwind and tempest—all these are made to study God, but in the rushing, swarming, raving street is the best place to study man.

Going down to your place of business and coming home again I charge you look about; see these signs of poverty, of wretchedness, of hunger, of sin, of bereavement, and as you go through the streets and come back through the streets gather up in the arms of your prayer all the sorrow, all the losses, all the sufferings, all the bereavements of those whom you pass and present them in prayer before an all sympathetic God. In the great day of eternity there will be thousands of persons with whom you in this world never exchanged one word will rise up and call you blessed; and there will be a thousand fingers pointed at you in heaven, saying: "That is the man, that is the woman who helped me when I was hungry and sick and wandering and lost and heartbroken. That is the man, that is the woman;" and the blessing will come down upon you as Christ shall say: "I was hungry and ye fed me, I was naked and ye clothed me, I was sick and in prison and ye visited me; inasmuch as ye did it to these poor waifs of the streets ye did it unto me."

Again, in all these cities I am impressed with the fact that life is full of pretension and sham. What subterfuge, what double dealing, what twofacedness! Do all people who wish you good morning really hope for you a happy day? Do all the people who shake hands love each other? Are all those anxious about your health who inquire concerning it? Do all want to see you who ask you to call? Does all the world know half as much as it pretends to know? Is there not many a wretched stock of goods with a brilliant store window? Passing up and down the streets to your business and your work, are you not impressed with the fact that society is hollow and that there are subterfuges and pretensions? Oh, how many there are who swagger and strut and how few people who are natural and walk! While fops simper and fools snicker and simpletons giggle, how few people are natural and laugh! I say these things not to crease in you inerculity or misanthropy, nor do I forget there are thousands of people a great deal better than they seem, but I do not think any man is prepared for the conflict of this life until he knows this particular peril. Ehud comes pretending to pay his tax to King Eglon, and, while he stands in front of the king, stabs him through with a dagger until the haft went in after the blade. Judas Iscariot kissed Christ.

One of the mightiest temptations in commercial life in all cities to-day is in the fact that many professed Christian men are not square in their bargains. Such men are in Baptist and Methodist and Congregational churches, and our own denomination is as largely represented as any of them. Our good merchants are foremost in Christian enterprises; they are patronizers of art, philanthropic and patriotic. God will attend to them in the day of His coronation. I am not speaking of them, but of those in commercial life who are setting a ruinous example to our young merchants. Go through all the stores and offices in our cities and tell me in how many of those stores and offices are the principles of Christ's religion dominant? In three-fourths of them? No. In half of them? No. In one-tenth of them? No. Decide for yourself. The impression is abroad somehow that charity can consecrate iniquitous gains and that if a man give to God a portion of an unrighteous bargain then the Lord will forgive him the rest. The secretary of a benevolent society came to me and said: "Mr. So-and-So has given a large amount of money to the missionary cause," mentioning the sum. I said: "I can't believe it." He said: "It is so." Well, I went home, staggered and confounded. I never knew the man to give anything. But after awhile I found out that he had been engaged in the most infamous kind of a swindle, and then he promised to compromise the matter with the Lord, saying: "Now, here is so much for thee, Lord. Please to let me off."

I want to tell you that the church of God is not a shop for receiving stolen goods and that if you have taken anything from your fellows you had better return it to the men to whom it belongs. In a drug store in Philadelphia a young man was told that he must sell blacking on the Lord's day. He said to the head man of the firm: "I can't possibly do that. I am willing to sell medicines on the Lord's day, for I think that is right and necessary, but I can't sell this patent blacking." He was discharged from the place. A Christian man hearing of it took him into his employ, and he went on from one success to another until he was known all over the land for his faith in God and his good works as for his worldly success. When a man has sacrificed any temporal, financial good for the sake of his spiritual interests the Lord is on his side, and one with God is a majority.

But if you have been much among the cities you have also noticed that they are full of temptations of a political character. It is not so more in one city than in all the cities. Hundreds of men going down in our cities every year through the pressure of politics. Once in awhile a man will come out in a sort of missionary spirit and say: "I am going into politics now to reform them, and I am going to reform the ballot box. I am going to reform all the people I come in contact with." That man in the fear and love of God goes into politics with that idea and with the resolution that he will come out uncontaminated and as good as when he went in. But generally the case is when a man steps into politics many of the newspapers try to blacken his character and to distort all his past history, and after a little while has gone by instead of considering himself an honorable citizen he is lost in contemplation and in admiration of the fact that he has so long been kept out of jail! If a man shall go into politics to reform politics and with the right spirit, he will come out with the right spirit and unhurt. That was Theodore Frelinghuysen, of New Jersey. That was George Briggs, of Massachusetts. That was Judge McLean, of Ohio.

Then look around and see the allurements to dissipated life. Bad books, unknown to father and mother, vile as the reptiles of Egypt, crawling into some of the best families of the community; and boys read them while the teacher is looking the other way, or at recess, or on the corner of the street when the groups are gathered. These books are read late at night. Satan finds them a smooth plank on which he can slide down into perdition some of your sons and daughters. Reading bad books some never gets over it. The books may be burned, but there is not enough power in all the apothecary's preparations to wash out the stain from the soul. Fathers' hands, mothers' hands, sisters' hands will not wash it out; none but the hand of the Lord can wash it out.

And what is more perilous in regard to some of these temptations we may not mention them. While God in His Bible from chapter to chapter thundered His denunciations against these crimes people expect the pulpit and the printing press to be silent on the subject, and just in proportion as people are impure are they fastidious on this theme. They are so full of decay and death they do not want their sepulchers opened. God will turn into destruction all the unclean, and all the splendors of surrounding sin make decent that which He has smitten. God will not excuse sin merely because it has costly array and beautiful tapestry and palatial residence any more than he will excuse that which crawls a blotch of sores through the lowest cellar. Ever and anon through some lawsuit there flashes upon the people of our great cities what is transpiring in seemingly respectable circles. You call it "high life," you call it "fast living," you call it "people's eccentricity." And while we kick off the sidewalk the poor wretch who has not the means to garnish his iniquity, these lords and ladies, wrapped in purple and in linen, go unwhipped of public justice. Ah, the most dreadful part of the whole thing is that there are persons abroad whose whole business it is to despoil the young. What an eternity such a man will have! As the door opens to receive him thousands of voices will cry out: "See here, what have you done?" and the wretch will wrap himself with fiercer flame and leap into deeper darkness, and the multitude he has destroyed will pursue him and hurl at him the long, bitter, relentless, everlasting curse of their own anguish. If there be one cup of eternal darkness more bitter than another, they will have to drink it to the dregs. If in all the ocean of the lost world that comes billowing up there be one wave more fierce than another, it will dash over them. But there is hope for all who will turn.

I stood one day at Niagara falls, and I saw what you may have seen there—six rainbows bending over that tremendous plunge. I never saw anything like it before or since. Six beautiful rainbows arching that great cataract! And so over the rapids and angry precipices of sin, where so many have been dashed down, God's beautiful admonitions hover, a warning arching each peril—six of them, 50 of them, 4,000 of them. Beware, beware, beware!

Young men, while you have time to reflect upon these things and before the duties of the office and the store and the shop come upon you again, look over this whole subject, and after the day has passed and you hear in the nightfall the voices and footsteps of the city dying from your ear, and it gets so silent that you can hear distinctly your watch under your pillow going "tick, tick," then open your eyes and look out upon the darkness and see two pillars of light, one horizontal, the other perpendicular, but changing their direction until they come together, and your enraptured vision beholds it—the cross.

GRADE CROSSING ACCIDENT.

Slatington, Pa., Aug. 13.—Eleven persons were instantly killed and 11 others, several of whom will die, were seriously injured in a grade crossing accident three miles east of this city by a passenger train on the Lehigh & New England railroad crashing into an omnibus containing 25 persons. All the dead and injured were in the omnibus and but three escaped uninjured.

The accident occurred about 5 o'clock. The omnibus, driven by a man named Peters, was returning to Slatington from a funeral the occupants had been attending at Cherryville. The dead and injured were nearly all relatives of Sophia Schoeffer, at whose obsequies they had been present. The train was a special and consisted of an engine and one car. At the point at which the collision occurred there is a sharp curve in the road and the omnibus came along at a good rate of speed, the occupants unconscious of any impending danger. As the bus swung around the curve the engine and car came in sight. It was too late to stop either the omnibus or the train and as the driver of the former whipped up the four horses to cross the track ahead of the train, the latter crashed into its middle. The occupants were thrown in all directions, bruised and bleeding. The 11 dead were killed outright. Physicians and a special train were sent for and the injured were taken to South Bethlehem.

No watchman is employed to warn teams or pedestrians of any approaching train and those living in the vicinity state that it is impossible to hear an approaching train.

A peculiar feature of the accident was that the horses drawing the bus escaped unhurt.

VICTOR EMMANUEL III.

Rome, Aug. 12.—King Victor Emmanuel III took the formal constitutional oath Saturday before parliament. The senate chamber was draped with mourning, the benches and tribunes being covered with black furnishings, bordered with silver. The chamber was filled with senators and deputies, royal missions, high officials of state and the high diplomatic corps.

All along the route large crowds were assembled and gave the new king an ovation. He was received on the steps of the senate by the committees of the chamber of deputies and senate in a pavilion especially erected and handsomely decorated. When the cortege entered the senate chamber the king being accompanied by the duke of Aosta, the count of Turin and the duke of Genoa, the deputies and senators arose and then began a long and exciting scene of enthusiasm.

His majesty later took the oath and delivered an address. The weather was beautiful.

KENTUCKY CROP REPORT.

Wheat Threshing Progressing and the Results Are Very Satisfactory in Yield and Quality.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 9.—The report of crop conditions in Kentucky for last week, issued by the weather bureau, is as follows:

"Very warm weather prevailed during the week, the temperature being above normal every day. Showers occurred in many places on the 2d, 3d and 4th. These showers were generally light, but in some localities in the extreme northern portion of the state they were very heavy, and were accompanied by severe wind and hail, causing considerable damage to crops. The area thus injured is extensive. Wheat threshing progressed well during the latter part of the week, and results are very satisfactory in yield and quality. Corn has improved rapidly, and is now very promising. Tobacco in most localities has advanced wonderfully, and the prospect for this crop is now excellent. There are very few worms attacking the plants. Oats have been harvested with excellent results. Pastures are generally in fine condition and stock is looking well. Millet is making a rapid growth. Apples are very poor, but other fruits are generally quite good. Irish potatoes and garden vegetables are plentiful and of excellent quality. Farm work is fairly well up. Considerable plowing for winter wheat has been done."

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 9.—The report of State Inspector Hines to Auditor Coleree of his investigation of the books and records of County Clerk Claude Chinn, of Fayette county, shows Chinn to be short in his accounts $10,520.50. The court of appeals will be asked to remove Chinn from office.

When Mr. Chinn was seen he said that political hatred was behind the whole matter because he had opposed Goebel. He said that he had an expert working on his books and would make no detailed statement until he had made his report. He said: "My office is all right and I am all right. I am confident I will come out with clean skirts. My political enemies rejoice at the charge against me. I simply ask for time. I will prove then everything is correct. The whole story has not been told."

One of the most disastrous hail storms visited this vicinity on the morning of the 3rd that has occurred in many years, if ever before. The corn crop, which we made mention of as being so exceedingly fine, is badly damaged, particularly the late planting. Garden vegetables, such as cabbage, tomatoes, beans, cucumbers and melon vines were completely riddled Grape bunches were clipped from the vines as with a knife. The greatest loses, however, are the tobacco raisers. The tobacco crop bid fair to be the best in years, but now it is totally destroyed. Hail stones were picked up one hour after the storm had passed, that measured six inches in circumference.

Last Wednesday morning Doc Mannin and wife, Dr. Sayre and wife, Misses Zetta and Mamie Ernests, Add and Pearl Batterson, Mrs. Batterson and your humble servant, went to the river below Constance to celebrate our annual fish fry. Arrangements had been made with Shineen Tanner and Andy Smith, to furnish the fish for the occasion, and long before old Sol had made his appearance, they had cast their nets ou the Darby bar and begun scooping out the finny trib. We had not much more than located our camp, when they sent us a boat load of fish, and preparations began for the feast, some building furnaces, some gathering wood and others cleaning fish, and in a very short time the savory fumes of fried fish could be detected in the air, having a tendency to sharpen our already voracious appetites. At high 12 dinner was announced, and such a dinner—my mouth sheds tears yet, when I think of it. Corn bread done to a Queen's taste, by Mrs. Mannin, coffee that would have borne up an iron wedge, butter from thoroughbred Alderny cows, and 60 pounds of fish browned a little on both sides. Gentle readers, I only wish you could have been there, if for no other reason than to see Doc Mannin and Dr. Sayre eat fish. They would have reminded you of two Polar bears eating fish, only they prefer theirs cooked. After dinner bathing suits were procured and donned by the younger ones, and while the older ones amused themselves boat riding and gathering shells from the shore, the mermaids sported in the waves. Taking it all together we spent a pleasant day indeed, which will long be remembered by those that were there. We shall always feel under abligations to Messrs. Tanner and Smith for their heroic perseverence in procuring the fish for us. Andy says, however, that he does not mind being in the water, that he is an amphibious animal, and frequently, at night, in order to get a little sleep, he has to get out of bed, crawl down in his well and stand knee deep in water to rest himself. This proves the force of habit.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 22, 1900. NO. 44

THE Legislature will convene in special session next Tuesday. The only subject it can consider is the election law.

THE dry weather in some parts of this State has been very disastrous to the corn and tobacco crops, and in some localities they are literally burned up.

THE race war precipitated in New York City, last week, by the killing of a white man by a negro demonstrates that like causes produces like effects either north or south of Mason and Dixon's line.

THE race for the Democratic nomination for Congress in this district is growing interesting, and the friends of each candidate appear to be sanguine of success at the primary election, September 22.

GOV. BECKHAM has called the General Assembly to meet on the 28th inst. to take action in regard to the present election law. Whatever is done should be done by a harmonious action on the part of the Democrats.

THE attorneys for Powers say the jury's verdict was a shock to them, as it is not supported by the law nor the evidence in the case, while the attorneys for the prosecution say it could not have been otherwise if founded upon the law and the evidence.

THE Sheriff of Scott county says that six out of the twelve jurors in the Powers case voted against Goebel. Porter, the Republican, is reported to be the first juror to speak after the jury room was entered, expressing his thorough belief that the defendant was guilty as charged, and in fifty-four minutes from the time the case was given to the jury it had decided upon the degree of punishment and reported it to the court.

Inspector Hines has found a shortage of over $1,500 in the accounts of Frank A. Pasteur, County Clerk of Caldwell county. The Inspector will also report that Pasteur's office has been conducted with unbusinesslike methods and in disregard of the law in many instances. Pasteur admits he is short and says he is prepared to make a settlement, but has failed to do so, ignoring demands of Auditor Coulter as he had previously ignored requests from Auditor Stone.

The Democratic State Campaign Committee has declined the proposal of the Republican Campaign Committee for joint debates between Gov. Beckham and the Republican candidate for Governor. Gov. Beckham placed himself at the disposal of the Committee, but the committee thought that his duties as Governor, especially during the extra session of the Legislature, would prevent a general stumping tour and that such a debate would not be "consistent with the dignity of the office nor with his duty to the people of the Commonwealth."

The Kansas City Star has decided upon a special feature for the presidential campaign which was never undertaken before by any newspaper. At its request the chairman of the two National Committees, Messrs. James K. Jones and M. A. Hanna, have selected and appointed two distinguished writers to conduct, in the Star, a department to be called "The Campaign Forum." In this department the arguments of each of the two great parties will be presented, side by side, day by day. To conduct the Democratic side, Mr. Jones has selected and formally appointed Mr. Willis J. Abbott, Chief of the Press Bureau of the Democratic National Committee, and, for the Republican side, Mr. Hanna has selected and appointed the famous journalist and literateur, Mr. Murat Halstead. Upon learning the decision of the two chairmen, the Star immediately engaged the two gentlemen.

An interesting feature of the Forum will be the answers to questions upon campaign topics, submitted to the Star to be answered by either Mr. Halstead or Mr. Abbott, or both. Under the circumstances, the answers thus given will have the stamp of authority of the National Committees.

OUR NEXT CONGRESSMAN.

Gooch Endorsed by the Labor People.

[From the Labor Paper "Union Agent," Covington.]

At the present writing it looks as though the people would "prevail," and as against the wishes of certain politicians Col. D. Linn Gooch would be the nominee of the Democrats of this district for Congress to succeed Albert S. Berry.

By those who know him, Linn Gooch is honored as few men are; his word is as good as his bond—and this is true, not only in ordinary business affairs, but in politics—he will do what he says he will do. He is a man to tie to; he has never been known to make a promise he could not fulfill, he will make no unfilled promises; he is true to his friends and principles; he is an uncompromising enemy of the trusts and child-labor, and does not believe in the placing of the product of the penitentiary and paupers in competition with the product of free labor. He is in favor of the enactment of an eight hour law for all goods manufactured for the use of the Government. He is not an arisocrat or an anarchist; he is as good a friend to Patty on the pike as to the banker. He loves his city and its people, he loves his family and his country. He is always ready to extend a helping hand to the man that needs and deserves his assistance, and he is to-day the candidate of the laboring man, the manufacturer and the merchant, for all know that the interests of this congressional district will be safe with him at the helm. He is never offensive in politics and is well liked by representatives of all parties. He is always obliging and courteous and is never better satisfied than when doing a kind act or helping some friend or acquaintance in distress.

Col. Gooch is President of the Cincinnati Drug and Chemical Co. He has built up a magnificient business and is a prime favorite in both commercial and social circles. He is at all times modest and unassuming and possesses a strong will power which he exercises for good He is one of the leading and original free silver men in Kentucky. Long before the Chicago platform was adopted, he began the fight for those cardinal principles of Democracy which have made an unrivalled champion of that great leader—William Jennings Bryan. Col. Gooch is now serving his third term as President of the Jefferson Democratic Club, the largest political club in Kentucky, having a membership of over 1400. He was twice elected to the office without opposition—something never before known in the history of the club.

Col. Gooch's campaign is being conducted on honorable, broad and generous principles; he is insisting upon every candidate being accorded fair treatment and an honest count. He says that the contest shall be one of merit and that the people shall rule. It is his highest ambition to be the choice of the whole people. He stands squarely upon the platform advocated by his devoted friend—the late Governor Goebel; he believes that the great common people should always rule. He says if elected to Congress he will serve the people first, last and all the time. He has never allied himself with any clique or combination, politically or otherwise. He is free to do the work of the people in Congress and say that no Trust or Monopoly can expect favor at his hands if elected.

We believe that Organized Labor will find in him a true friend and one who will look after their interests.

THERE is such a pressing demand for Mr. Bryan to take the stump during the campaign that he will probably yield, and make an extensive stumping tour during the fall.

THE Walton and Verona people are taking more interest in education than the people in other part of the county. In each of these towns an excellent school has been built up, and the work of increasing its popularity is being pushed all the time. See the advertisements in this paper.

BURLINGTON, KY.,

An Excellent Trading Point for Farmers.

Burlington Beautiful County Seat of Boone.

[Written by Mrs. Gertrude Jessamine.]

It has a population of about 450. The appearance of this place to a visitor is in every way inviting and encouragement is given to new residents who may locate here by the hospitality and general excellence of the citizens residing here. All localities are more or less influenced by their surroundings. This place is encircled by a varied rural region which is adapted to the various purposes, farm, fruits, gardening, &c. Very few sections of our country can be developed in so many agricultural resources as those which accrue from tilling the soil of this fertile region. In hygenic considerations, this place and its vicinity enjoy many advantages—drainage can be easily accomplished and both streets and country roads are constructed in a facile yet substantial manner. We find that the school, society and church privileges of this locality constitute increased blessings to the people. Although not a perfect community, it is a highly moral place with numerous progressive citizens, who aim to maintain this as a place where law and order and all that contributes to the highest civilization shall exist perpetually. Many persons who reside elsewhere admire these excellent attributes. For this and other reasons this must necessarily follow an increase of inhabitants who are led to locate her by fortunate circumstances which we have named.

It is always supplied with a full and complete line of pure drugs, chemicals, proprietary remedies of acknowledged merit and standard reputation, and physician supplies.

This house is endorsed by the leading physicians on account of the reliability of its drugs and scientific service in the prescription department where the utmost caution is taken in compounding medicines of all kinds. The labratory is supplied with all required facilities for compounding the most difficult prescriptions and has now the well merited distinction of being a leading pharmacy of this locality.

FRED RICH, OF FLORENCE.

General Blacksmith, and horseshoer, of Florence, is one of the most useful of the mechanical arts of today, and one whose origin is lost in antiquity, is that of the horse shoer whose consideration to the noble animal is as important as that of the boot and shoe manufacturer to man. The above is a leading exponent of his town, and is widely and favorably known. This shop is equipped throughout with the most approved appliances.

A specialty is made of the diseases of the feet and particular attention is given to shoeing. A general business is done in repairing implements, wagons, buggies, &c. He is a liberal and appreciated mechanic to deal with.

It requires 50 per cent more wheat to buy a stove than it did in 1896.

It requires 100 per cent more corn or wheat to buy a copper kettle than in 1896.

It requires twice as much corn to buy a coil of rope as in 1896.

It requires 40 per cent more grain to buy a plow than in 1896.

It requires 75 per cent more grain to buy a hoe, rake or shavel than in 1896.

A set of common wheels that cost $7 in 1896 now costs $12.

The price of cultivators and other farm implements has gone up proportionately.

Galvanized barbed wire costs from $4 to $1 50 per hundred more than 1896.

It requires 40 per cent more corn or cotton to buy a pound of sugar than in 1896.

You have to pay 40 per cent more for glass than in 1896.

Freight rates have climbed back to the exorbitant figures of a few years ago.

The price of oil, coal, lumber, tools and hardware have gone up from 40 to 100 per cent.

And all these things have been done by trusts.

A trust robs you walking or sleeping, eating or drinking, working or resting, living or dying, and the coffin trust gets you in the end.—Washington Cor. Baltimore Sun.

During the severe thunderstorm here August 2, a curious freak of lightning-striking occurred in the tobacco field of Joe McClure, where there were no trees or other objects save the tobacco plants. The lightning skimmed along for forty of fifty yards, burning the tops of the plants, when it descended a couple of plants, tearing a hole in the ground as large as a man's hat and literally burning up some forty other plants nearest to those it struck.—Winchester Sun.

THOSE Boston people who were talking of a crusade into the South to rescue the negroes, have discovered by this time that the same trouble that excited their sympathy for the colored people in the South has manifested itself in New York, and it will not be necessary for them to travel so far to intercede on behalf of the colored man.

THE farmers' busiest season has past and they now have leisure hours which they can devote to pleasure, and the Lawrenceburg fair, this week, and the Florence fair next week, will be an assembling point for many of them to discuss the crops, politics, &c., &c.

WITH the State and National campaigns both under way, this is likely to be a warm fall.

Judge James O'Hara died last night at his home in Covington, in his 76th year. He had been in feeble health for several years.

An editor of a Western paper recently printed this imbiguous announcement: "On account of lack of space a number of deaths have been postponed."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

Truth and matrimony are only bowing acquaintances.

With man love means possessing; with woman it means being possessed.

Most men commit marriage almost as thoughtlessly as they would suicide.

Never judge a man by the clothes he wears, judge him by the amount he owes his tailor.

Every man that weighs more than 200 ought to be made to wear a corset as a horrible example.

A widow who doesn't want to get married again is most as unnatural as a man who wants to get married at all.

If a woman had her choice about arranging heaven, probably she would choose to be the youngest one there.

Unless a man is more or less a brute all the time, women would respect him, because they suspect he isn't a man.

Most women can love a lock of hair and a sickly love letter from a man a good deal longer than they can love duty, faith and honor in him.—New York Press.

A Minster's Good Work.

"I had a severe attack of bilious colic, got a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, took two doses and was entirely cured," says Rev. A. A. Power, of Emporia, Kan. "My neighbor across the street was sick for over a week, had two or three bottles of medicine from the doctor. He used them for three or four days without any relief, then called in another doctor who treated him for some days and gave him no relief, so discharged him. I went over to see him the next morning. He said his bowels were in a terrible fix, that they had been running off so long that it was almost bloody flux. I asked him if he had tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and he said 'No.' I went home and brought him my bottle and gave him one dose; told him to take another dose in fifteen or twenty minutes if he did not find relief, but he took no more and was entirely cured." The yield of wheat in Minnesota and the Dakotas is now very accurately known. The fields have been gone over and inspected carefully until almost every field in the northwest has been rated. The Government report for 1899 placed the yields of wheat in Minnesota and the Dakotas at 157,710,550 bushels. In comparison with the season of 1899, taking the reports of about 400 correspondents of all classes, the present year's acreage shows scarcely any change over the previous year at the beginning of the season. The reports of correspondents, of elevator men, of farmers and of experts, in no instance concede more than half a crop for Minnesota. The reports from North Dakota are more positive. It is claimed that half of the wheat acreage was totally destroyed and that the remaining half was damaged 50 per cent. South Dakota appears to have fared better than her sister states. "With favorable conditions we will have 75 per cent of an average crop," say the best authorities.

A Clermont farmer, who is noted for his fine fruit production, furnishes the following information. He says: "Coal ashes certainly is a valuable article for fruit trees, especially the peach. I have tried it and find no insects will stay where coal ashes are applied—not even ants. Apply by scraping away a little of the earth around base of tree, and make a little mound of ashes around the trunk. When the tree is affected with borers make the mound higher than when the ruinous worms are at work. Throw some ashes up against the trunk of the tree, also, and the borers and other insect pests will leave. Of course, I don't claim that this will protect the fruit on the tree; you should use the poison spray for that. I am satisfied, however, that coal ashes will protect all plants from insects; so don't throw them away any more, and try them and you will be convinced, I think.—Pendletonian.

Crop and Stock.

The wheat crop in the Northwest is said to be 125,000,000 bushels short this year and dollar wheat is predicted.

More than 100,000 bushels of wheat remain unthreshed near Paris and heavy rains have done it much damage.

Hon. John D. Harris threshed 10,850 bushels of wheat from 500 acres of land, an average of nearly 22 bushels to the acre.—Richmond Climax.

Robt. Wilson, of Nepton, tells us that the product of twelve of his ewes, wool and lambs, this season, was on an average of $10 50 per head.—Flemingsburg Democrat.

Joe T. Jones, sr., of Becknersville, a few days ago sold to O. S. Johnson eleven Shorthorn cattle for $1,000, and his son, Wm. Jones, sold to the same party five for $500.—Winchester Sun.

It is reported a farmer about six miles from here raised 75 bushels of onions on less than an acre of land. If this is to be credited, the whole of his section had better be converted into immense onion beds—Danville News.

The hay crop is rather better than was expected in the eastern and middle states. Haying has been delayed in some quarters by heavy rains. Some hay has been damaged in Ohio, Indiana and Michigan. The yield is light in the Northwest. Some damage to hay has occurred in the Missouri valley by wet weather.

In June there were shipped from Norfork, Va., 261,136 barrels of Irish potatoes, 203,587 baskets of beans, 159,078 crates of cabbage, 29,972 boxes and 17,352 barrels of cucumbers, 7,063 barrels of beets, 4,057 barrels of snaps, 3,540 barrels of squashes, besides several thousand packages of asparagus, apples, berries, onions, peas, tomatoes, radishes, watermelons, etc.—Southern Farm Magazine.

Hogs do not need as much exercise as some believe, yet they do not want confinement in a small pen during the last few weeks of finishing for market. A breeding boar can hardly have too much exercise; neither can the brood sow get too much. Pigs which are growing for the market should have only enough to keep them growing and healthy. A small pasture of a few acres will afford them all they need. —Farmers Home Journal.

Discouraging reports are coming in regard the to Burley crop. News from Bath county is to the effect heavy rains of the past two weeks have destroyed hundreds of acres of tobacco by washing it away on hill land and scalding it on level ground along water courses. Nearly all the growers have lost some tobacco which will cut the yield in that county down very materially. The same holds good in many of the blue grass counties at this time.

Hon. J. C. Cantrill, who is farming extensively, has now commenced to break up his wheat ground with a steam plow. This plow breaks five rows and does the work it would require of fifteen horses and five men. It requires a traction engine, an engineer, a fireman and a water hauler. The plow breaks fifteen or more acres a day. It does its work well and is attracting the attention of many farmers. Many people from town have gone out to see it work. Mr. Cantrill is also running two twohorse straw presses and two hay presses. He is undoubtedly one of the most energetic farmers in Kentucky, and his many friends hope that his products will bring him immense profits. Breaking ground with a steam steam plow, run by a traction engine in Kentucky, would appear to many farmers as an extravagant idea but to see it work and figure the labor, one is bound to conclude it is the ideal plow.—News.

Story of a Slave.

To be bound hand and foot for years by the chains of disease is the worst form of slavery. Geo. D. Williams, of Manchester, Mich., says: "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This supreme remedy for female diseases quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, backache, fainting and dizzy spells. It is a godsend to weak, sickly, run-down people. Cure guaranteed. Only 50c. Sold by McKim, Burlington, Oelsner, Florence, Crouch, Union.

Brain workers, according to statistics which have been published recently, are long lived. Five hundred and thirty eminent men and women of the present century were taken, and their duration of life gives an average of about sixty-eight years and eight months.

A beggar's league in St. Petersburg mutilates children and cripples them to arouse sympathy from the benevolent when they are sent to beg in public places. The chief of this gang, who is a wealthy man and has posed as a philanthropist, receives 75 per cent. of the money begged by the unfortunates.

Each, of the eighteen provinces of the Celestial Empire is ruled by a governor or governor general, who is responsible to the emperor for the entire administration, political, judicial, military and fiscal. Each province is subdivided into departments ruled by prefects, and each department into districts, each with a distinct ruler.

Gen. Collinson has calculated that on 50,000 tons of shipping, 30,000 men, 5,000 horses and 700 wagons can be transported, while Lord Wolseley reckons on 150,000 tons being necessary for the transport of 100,000 men. Admiral Morin, however, estimates that 40,000 tons of shipping will be needed for a division of 9,000 men, 800 horses and 150 wagons.

The pope does his private writing with a gold pen, but his pontifical signature is always given with a white-feathered quill, which is believed to come from the wing of a dove, although persons who have seen it say it must have come from a larger bird. The same quill has been in use more than 40 years. It only serves for important signatures and is kept in an ivory case.

Lightning on the Fourth of July destroyed a barn in Frederick Township, near Pottsville, Pa., that was built in 1730, and has been famous in local history since the Revolution. The farm on which it was then located was owned by Col. Frederick Antes, and Gen. Washington, with his bodyguard, had his headquarters there during the encampment at Pottsgrove.

Some curious facts concerning trees have been discovered. A single oak of good size is said to lift 123 tons of water during the months it is in leaf. This moisture is evaporated and rises to form rain clouds. From this estimate of the labor of a single oak we can gain some idea of the immense force which the forests exert in equalizing the evaporation and precipitation and preventing periods of inundation and drought.

According to the latest studies of Prof. De Sanctis, of Turin, children begin to dream before their fourth year, but are unable to recall dreams before the age of 5. This age, he concludes, is that at which a child first becomes instinctively conscious of self. Aged people dream less frequently and less vividly than the young. Women's dreams are more frequent, more vivid and better remembered than those of men.

Every horse in the English army is numbered and has a little history kept for it all to itself. The number is branded upon the animal's hind feet—the thousands on the near hind foot and the units, tens and hundreds on the off hind foot. Thus the horse whose number is, say, 8,354, will have an 8 on his left hind foot and 354 on the other one. On what is called a "Veterinary History Sheet" everything about the horse will from time to time be written.

A German scientist with all kinds of knobs on his head has discovered that yawning is a healthy pastime. It is wholesome, like oatmeal and brown bread. Yawning, it is said, stretches the muscles of the brain, maybe, or the tendons of the head, sends the blood to the jaws and sharpens the appetite and intellect. It is a cheap remedy, accessible to young and old, rich and poor, and if it is as efficacious as our Tenton says, faith is surely within the reach of everyone in this country.

The medical work of the missions has been a great and admitted boon to the Chinese, who have accepted it gratefully. In 1890 there were no fewer than 105 hospitals, largely staffed by medical women, and they attended in that year nemally 348,439 Chinese patients, both giving medical treatment and performing the operations that restore ease to the tortured, give sight to the blind and open new life to the dying. So highly was this secular work appreciated that many wealthy Chinese had made large donations.

The most lonely highlands of our National territory are the sparsely wooded Sierras of Western New Mexico. The clank of the wood cutter's ax echoes through the steepest glens of the European Alps and Southern Adleghanies, but in the Sierra Mesilla, west of El Paso, there are valleys where the moan of the wind in the branches of the rock pines is the only sound heard for days together. A kind of marmot is the only inhitant of these solitudes, and rarely leaves its burrows before noon. Birds are extremely rare.

THEY RAN UP OUR FLAG

Chinese Cruiser Aided the Battleship Oregon When Stranded.

The Stars and Stripes Thereafter Floated Over the Chinese Vessel and Passing Cruisers Asked No Questions.

San Francisco, Aug. 18.—Mail advices from Yokohama, Japan, contain the following story regarding the stranding of the battleship Oregon on the Chinese coast recently.

The Chinese cruiser Hai Chi, commanded by Capt. Sah, a thoroughly westernized officer, on her way from Taku to Chee-Foo, described the Oregon in her perilous plight and offered her valuable assistance, which was most gratefully received by Capt. Wilde. The Hai Chi anchored close by to be of further use if needed. The next day a Russian cruiser came along. Her commander, coming aboard the Oregon, eyed the Chinese vessel with suspicion and asked what she was doing there. On being told he shook his head and said it would nevertheless be his duty to take possession of her.

Capt. Wilde nodded and answered: "Well, I'm a bit embarrassed just now, but there is ammunition aboard and my guns are in excellent condition."

The next day after the departure of the Russian Capt. Wilde visited the Hai Chai and suggested to Capt. Sah that as he was protecting some refugees on board it might be well for him to run up the American flag to the fore. This was done and no questions were asked by passing cruisers afterwards.

COLORED MEN HONORED.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—Cyrus Field Adams, a colored editor, linguist and orator, and Bishop Arnett, of Ohio, also colored, have been appointed by Chairman Hanna members of the advisory committee of the republican national committee.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 18.—The Courier Journal Friday says:

Cyrus Field Adams, a colored editor, linguist and orator, has been appointed by Chairman Hanna a member of the advisory committee of the republican national committee. Adams was born in Louisville, and for many years his father was pastor of the colored Baptist church on Fifth street.

Adams, who is now a resident of Chicago, is one of the most distinguished and learned Negroes in the United States. He was educated at Oberlin college, and at the completion of his college career, which was in 1879, he began the publication of the Bulletin, a weekly paper devoted to the interests of the Negroes.

WILL APPEAL TO CONGRESS.

The Immigration Question and Its Bearings on the Clothing Trades Discussed at Detroit.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 18.—The boycotts in force against clothing manufacturers in Rochester, N. Y., were raised by the United Garment Workers it having been announced that these manufacturers had unionized their shops.

A committee was appointed to investigate the immigration question and its bearings upon the clothing trades with a view to securing favorable action in congress looking toward restricted immigration from Europe. The tailors say the shops in New York are mostly filled with foreigners; that as soon as they become accustomed to America they leave the sweatshops, but that their places are immediately filled by others who are imported. The New York delegates assert that traveling expenses across the ocean are paid by aid societies in Europe in order to get rid of the undesirable labor.

American Firemen Ahead.

Paris, Aug. 18.—The preliminary contests in the international exhibition of fire apparatus came off at Vincennes, some 5,000 firemen, representing many nationalities, participating. The American representatives, Chief George C. Hale, of Kansas City, and the men of the Kansas City fire brigade caused great wonderment by their quick harnessing and running, together with their methods of life saving. They received an ovation and by consent was assigned the first place. The contests was not finished.

Gen. DeWet Escaped.

Pretoria Aug. 16 (Thursday).—Gen. DeWet has managed to elude Gen. Kitchener, in spite of the fact that all the British wagons had double teams of picked animals. The Boers evaded the British by marching at night over grounds known to them, while their pursuers were obliged to march in the daylight.

GRASSHOPPER PLAGUE.

A Terrible Scourge Visits Kalamazoo and Vicinity, Interfering With Business and Traffic.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Aug. 19.—For the past week Kalamazoo and vicinity has been bombarded by vast swarms of grasshoppers, the worst ever known here—or, in fact, in Michigan. Houses and stores have been literally choked with the insects, and apparently there is no way of abating the nuisance.

In the Poli restaurant the serving of meals was discontinued until a large swarm of grasshoppers could be driven out. On account of the plague the city has been in darkness, because the hoppers have completely filled and choked up the arc lights. Storekeepers have been compelled to close at 6 o'clock because of the insufferable nuisance. Some of the grasshoppers are three inches in length, and they sing like locusts. In the celery fields, for which Kalamazoo is famous, their music is fairly deafening.

Between Cressy and Delton, on the Chicago & Kalamazoo railroad, a train was stopped by an army of grasshoppers, which extended for half a mile and covered the tracks for several inches. The engine crushed their bodies, which, being reduced to pulp, acted like grease on the rails. The driverwheels of the engine refused to work until the insects had been shoveled away by the train crew.

TWO GIANTS.

They Enlisted in the United States Service After Securing Consent of the War Department.

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 19.—There are two recruits at the Columbus barracks that had to gain permission from the war department to enlist in the army before the recruiting officers could accept them. This permission was granted by the military authorities at Washington. The barracks now boasts of two giants, over six feet tall—one six feet five inches and another six feet two inches. John Spivey is the taller. He comes from Hamilton, Ohio, and enlisted in Cincinnati. He was a laborer and is 24 years old. The other man hails from Pittsburg, Ind. Regulations forbid the custom of enlisting men of too great height or too low stature in the army. The former would make excellent shots for sharpshooters concealed from view.

A COLLIE DOG.

It Saved Its Little Master From a Terrible Death Under a Street Car in St. Louis.

St. Louis, Aug. 19.—The collie dog of the Loeb family of 3960 Finney avenue, saved the life of Arthur Loeb, the five-year-old child of the household. The dog dragged the child off the street car tracks on Finney avenue just in time to prevent his little life being crushed out by an electric car which was bearing down upon him at a rapid rate of speed. The faithful collie dog in an instant realized the danger of his young master, and with two or three bounds was by his side. Grabbing hold of his clothes between his teeth the animal dragged the little boy off the track, getting his prostrate form out of harm's way just as the big car went rolling by.

Lisbon, Portugal, Aug. 19.—The story has just leaked out that Queen Amelia of Portugal had fired pointblank at her husband, who was playing the gay Lothario. The affair occurred some ten days ago, at the summer residence of the royal couple. The queen resorted to the old, worn-out, melodramatic trick of the stage. She started ostensibly on a trip to the capital, with the usual result. The lady in the case proved to be one of her maids of honor. The shot went wide of the mark.

His Body Cut In Two.

St. Louis, Aug. 20.—Allen Nichols, 20 years of age, of Nichols, N. Y., was killed by a Big Four freight train in East Alton. Young Nichols, while attempting to board a moving train, missed his footing and fell between the cars. His body was cut in two at the hips. He lived long enough to give his name and the address of his parents, who are well to-do, and live in Nichols, N. Y.

POWERS FOUND GUILTY

The Jury Returns Its Verdict in the Celebrated Case.

His Punishment is Fixed at Life Imprisonment—The Jury Took But One Ballot and Were Unanimous —Will Appeal.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 19.—Caleb Powers is guilty of conspiring to bring about the murder of William Goebel. So said 12 men Saturday in a verdict that was arrived at without argument or wrangling in the jury room.

Commonwealth's Attorney Franklin concluded his marvelously eloquent and convincing speech at 11:30 Saturday morning, and court adjourned till 1 o'clock, but it was 1:32 when Judge Cantrill said to the jury:

"Gentlemen, retire and make a verdict."

The jury filed into the east jury room, just behind where Powers, smiling, sat talking with the Misses Dangerfield, two young ladies who had made his acquaintance since the trial began. He seemed the same cold and unconcerned man he had been all during the trial. After the Youtsey case had been called and passed Judge Cantrill adjourned court and walked out, instructing the sheriff that if a verdict was reached to send for him.

At 2:38 o'clock there was a knocking on the jury room door from the inside. The sheriff answered the call and immediately hurried out for Judge Cantrill. It was instantly flashed all over the courtroom that a verdict had been reached. The knowing ones thought they knew that such a quick agreement meant a conviction.

Powers never stopped talking and smiling.

Judge Cantrill returned. "Bring in the jury," he said.

"Gentlemen, are you ready to report?" said the judge, and Foreman I. G. Stone nodded assent. The verdict was passed up to the clerk.

"Read the verdict, Mr. Clerk," said Judge Cantrill, and the clerk read as follows, while all the room held their breath:

"We the jury, find the defendant guilty, and fix his punishment at confinement in the state penitentiary for life. I. G. STONE, Foreman."

"Gentlemen, is that your verdict?" asked Judge Cantrill.

"It is," answered the jury.

Powers was watched closely. He seemed shocked for an instant, and a pained look crept into his cold, pale face, great beads of sweat broke out on his forehead and he for the first time betrayed nervousness, but it was only for a moment. Regarding his composure, he turned to the Misses Dangerfield and said: "I was not expecting that. The verdict is unjust."

Attorney Kinkead leaned over and seemed to be speaking some words of encouragement to Powers, who nodded his head and smiled.

Judge Cantrill thanked the jury for their patience under such a long strain and the court adjourned and all was over.

Powers will take an appeal.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 20.—Caleb Powers, who on Saturday was convicted of being an accessory before the fact of the assassination of William Goebel, has issued the following statement:

"To the Public—I am asked my opinion concerning my trial and the verdict of the jury. Could I have but one opinion? Can any fair minded man or woman of this state have but one. That one of the greatest judicial farces known to history has been enacted here in my trial, under the forms of law, no well informed man can doubt. Innocence is no shield with $100,000 and the methods of Campbellism against you. The recitude of one's past life counts for naught. They say Taylor is guilty because he was at his office, and that I am guilty because I was away from mine. This has been a political trial throughout for political purposes, and no greater mistake has been made by the democratic party since they robbed us of the offices to which we were fairly elected by the people.

"There are good men and noble women in the democratic party, and many of them. They are not all bad, far from it. A great many of them do not endorse the theft of the state offices. A great many more will not endorse this mockery of a trial, this prostitution of the courts of justice for certain ends. From the beginning of the campaign until now, I have stood with what little of merit I have had, for the rights and liberties of the people. That is my crime. That is the only offense I have committed. That is the only thing proven against me. I swore to that myself in my testimony. I have never had, and I have now no apology to make for being true to the trust imposed upon me by a majority of the voters of this state. History will draw its dark lines around those who have outraged me, and disgraced the judiciary and blackened the history of the state. I am, very respectfully,

FIGHTING IN PEKING.

The Allies Are Bombarding the Inner City of the Chinese Capital.

CHINESE MAKING A FINAL STAND

The News That the Relief Column Had Reached the Legations Confirmed From Several Points.

The Long Silence of Gen. Chaffee at Last Broken to the Relief of the Officials in Washington—Latest Chinese News.

London, Aug. 18.—The allies have entered Peking without fighting, the legations are relieved and the foreigners are liberated.

Shanghai, Aug. 18.—Li Hung Chang has received a telegraphic dispatch announcing that all the allied forces entered Peking Wednesday, August 15, without opposition.

"Taku, Aug. 17, 1 a. m.—Bureau of Navigation, Washington: Just received telegram from Tien-Tsin dated 16th, 10 p. m.: 'Peking was captured on August 15. Foreign legations are safe. Details follow shortly.'

(Signed) "REMEY."

London, Aug. 18.—The second edition of the Daily Telegraph publishes a special dispatch from Shanghai, which says: "The allies entered Peking unopposed and met with a friendly reception from Prince Ching. All the hostile elements have already escaped from the city. The imperial court left for Shen-Si on August 11, with the Manchus. The Kansu troops have gone southwest with the object of drawing off the allies and preventing them from following up the court."

Tokio, Aug. 17.—Gen. Yamaguchi wires from Peking under date of August 17 as follows:

"The allies attacked Peking early the eastern side. The wall was obstinately held by the enemy. The Japanese and Russians were on the northward of the Tung-Chow canal. The Americans and British were on the south side. At nightfall the Japanese blew up the two eastern gates of the Tartar City and entered. In the meantime the Americans and British entered the Chinese city by the Tung Pien gates. Detachments of each force were sent towards the legations. The parties met near the legations and opened communication. All the ministers and their staffs were found safe. The Japanese loss was over 100 killed, including three officers. The losses of the allies have not been ascertained. Four hundred Chinese were killed."

Washington, Aug. 19.—The following cablegram was received at the war department Saturday morning from Brig. Gen. Barry, of Gen. Chaffee's staff.

"Cheefoo—Adjutant General, Washington.

"Taku, Aug. 17.—Indiana transport arrived on the 16th. All are well. Will go to front. Peking taken 15th. Legations safe.

"BARRY."

Washington, Aug. 20.—From Gen. Chaffee the war department received official confirmation of the fall of Peking and the resene of the besieged legationers. The dispatch of the American commander was not long and contained few details, but the unconcealed satisfaction with which it was received by officials of the administration indicated clearly the anxiety that had been engendered by his prolonged silence. The last communication to the government, prior to the receipt of this dispatch was dated August 11 at Matow, almost 30 miles from Peking. The explanation of his silence is suggested in advices received by the navy department from Adm. Remey, who, telegraphing from Taku on the 18th, says the telegraph line between that point and Peking is interrupted.

The cablegram from Adm. Remey contains some important information not mentioned by Gen. Chaffee. He makes the startling statement, on Japanese authority, that the inner city of Peking was being bombarded by thee allied forees. Adm. Remey says also that the dowager empress is detained in the inner city by Prince Yungedo.

Advices received from the foreign office at Tokio, Japan, by the Japanese legation in this city, confirm and amplify previous accounts of the capture of Peking by the allied forces.

"Chee-Foo, Aug. 19, 1900.

"Adjutant General, Washington:

"Peking, Aug. 15.—We entered legation's grounds at 5 o'clock last night with 14th and light battery. Eight wounded during day's fighting. Otherwise all well.

(Signed) "CHAFFEE."

It will be noticed that the dispatch indicates that the American troops entered the legation grounds at 5 o'clock on the evening of the 14th inst. By the Washington officials and by the several legation officials to whom it was shown, the date of Gen Chaffee's communication is regarded as an error of transmission. It is believed that the word "fifteenth" should be "sixteenth." All previous dispatches have indicated that the legations were relieved on the evening of the 15th, Wednesday, after a day of sharp fighting. Minister Wu, the Chinese representative, and Minister Takahira, of Japan, were quite positive on this point, all their official advices being that their entrance to the city of Peking was effected early in the evening of Wednesday, the 15th inst.

"Chefoo (no date).

"Bureau of Navigation, Washington:

"Taku, 18th—Telegraph line to Peking interrupted. Information, Japanese sources, empress dowager detained by Prince Yungedo, inner city, which being bombarded by allies. Chaffee reports entered legation grounds evening 14th. Eight wounded during day's fighting; otherwise all well. REMEY."

The startling feature of the dispatch is that fighting within the city of Peking was continuing, according to the advices of Adm. Remey. The inner, or, as it is popularly known, the forbidden city, evidently had not been taken. It is surrounded by a massive wall of solid masonry more than twenty feet high, and it is not regarded as surprising that the Chinese should make their final stand within its shadows. Prior to the receipt of the dispatch it was accepted generally as a fact that the dowager empress, in company with the emperor and a large suite, had left Peking. While nothing is said in Adm. Remey's advices as to the emperor, it is deemed scarcely probable that he left the city without the empress dowager. Some doubt of the accuracy of the information received by Adm. Remey is expressed, particularly as the Chinese minister, Wu, is very positive that the emperor, empress dowager and the entire Chinese court left Peking before the arrival at the gates of the allies.

Peking comprises possibly four cities in one. In extent of area it is about the size of New York city. The four segments of it are the Chinese city, the Tartar city, the Imperial city and the Forbidden city. The last is the "inner" mentioned in Adm. Remey's dispatch, and is the residence of the emperor and the seat of the imperial court.

London, Aug. 20.—Rr. Adm. Bruce cables the admiralty from Chee-Foo, August 19, as follows: "Am informed on the authority of the Japanese that street fighting still continues in Peking, part of which is on fire. Yung Su prevented the empress from leaving, and a last stand is now being made in the inner city which is surrounded by the allies and being bombarded."

Rr. Adm. Bruce's report of the continuation of the fighting in Peking puts a more serious aspect on the Chinese situation than was generally expected here. It appears effectually to dispose of all statements that the empress dowager had fled, although circuatial accounts of her departure continue to come from Shanghai.

Despite defeat, the Chinese are apparently resolved to make a desperate struggle not only in their ancient capital but also in other parts of the empire. Chang Chi Tung, viceroy at Hankow, and Liu Kun Yi, viceroy at Nankin, according to advices from Shanghai, have threatened the consuls, saying that if the person of the empress dowager is not respected they will withdraw from their present friendly attitude.

Another Shanghai dispatch announced the death of Li Ping Hoeig, Cheug and Chang Lul Lin in the fighting before Peking.

WATER AND FIRE.

Four Drownings and One Death By Burning Were Sunday's Fatalities in Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 20.—Four drownings and one death by burning is Pittsburgh's fatal accident record for the day. The dead are:

Chris Paffenbach, aged 50, fell from a raft in Allegheny river and was drowned.

Edward G. Brillinger, 8 years old, fell from a raft while fishing in the Allegheny river and was drawn under and drowned before his father, who was a short distance away, could rescue him.

James Gallagher and Hugh McGrady, boys, were drowned together while swimming in the Monongahela.

Mrs. Mary C. Boyd, wife of the assistant superintendent of the New York and Cleveland Coal Co., at Oak Hill, was burned to death in a peculiar manner. She was cleaning a rusty saw and was using what she thought was cleaine oil as a cleanser. She placed the five gallon can on the floor about six feet from the stove and turned around to get a rag. Immediately there was an explosion. She ran from the house a mass of flames and though her husband quickly wrapped her in a blanket and smothered the flames, she was so badly burned that she died in agony three hours later.

While the neighbors were working over Mrs. Boyd her house burned to the ground.

The allies may advance on Peking under a flag of truce.

A FOUL CONSPIRACY.

Anarchists Arrested Suspected to Be in a Plot to Kill McKinley.

They Have Been Taken Singly and in Pairs From Incoming Ocean Liners for the Past Ten Days.

New York, Aug. 19.—The Evening World Saturday published the following relative to the news received from Washington Friday of the detention at the barge office in this city by secret service agents of Notabe Maresca and Michil Weida, supposed anarchists, who arrived Friday on the Kaiser Wilhelm II. These two men are understood to have come to this country as conspirators, whose object, it is alleged, was the assassination of President McKinley. The Evening World says:

"Instead of two, a high government official informed the Evening World Saturday that there are 14 anarchists under arrest at the detention prison of the bureau of immigration. They are all charged with being in a conspiracy to assassinate President McKinley, and have been taken singly and in pairs from incoming ocean liners within the last ten days.

"United States secret services learn that an anarchist circle in Naples had cast lots to determine who should be the assassin. Eleven Italians and three Austrians were selected. Closely followed, they sailed for different ports. Their object was to strike individual blows at the president at the same time. That would make success sure.

"As fast as the men arrived secret service agents, disguised as emigrants, went among them and they were arrested. Maresica and Weida, caught Friday, were two of 14.

"The conspiracy was made on a night early in August. By working with the Italian police the secret service agents disguised as emigrants meeting of the circle in Naples. The men selected for the work in this country were notified what they were to do, operators going singly or in pairs to different ports in Europe. Some went to France, others to Germany, while others crossed the channel to England.

Maresca professed to have no money when he boarded the steamer and made application to be taken as cook. Failing in that, he asked for a stewardship. There was a vacancy in the steerage room and he secured that. It was not known that he had a companion. He and Weida did not come aboard together. As far as is known, no one saw Weida come aboard, and he was not discovered until six hours after the vessel sailed. When found he was secreted as a stowaway. He was put to work in the hold with the coal passers, and kept busy until the boat reached quarantine.

Chief Hazen admitted Saturday that the two men were supposed to be anarchists, and confirmed the story of the plot hatched in Naples in August, to kill President McKinley. Further than this Chief Hazen declined to talk, on the ground that he was in communication with Chief Wilkie in Washington who had asked that all news concerning the suspects come from him (Wilkie).

Chief Wilkie is quoted as saying: "The two men are not arrested. They are simply detained at quarantine. They will be deported when the Kaiser Wilhelm goes back to Europe. It is true that on August 1 this government was advised from Naples that Maresca had left Italy for the United States with the purpose of attacking the president. It was said that the man was a most undesired emigrant. I may have a more interesting story to tell later."

WORSE THAN DEATH.

Years in Solitary Confinement Will be the Punishment of King Humbert's Murderer.

Rome, Aug. 19.—Worse than death will be the penalty inflicted upon Bresci, the assassin of King Humbert.

In Italy the death penalty has been replaced by a made of punishment which is certainly more dreadful than the guillotine, the ax, hanging or electrocution. Bresci will be sentenced to hard labor for life, but he will be previously submitted to ten years of "carcere duro," a kind of solitary confinement peculiar to the Italian penal code.

This means that he will be chained to the bottom of an iron funnel-shaped cell constructed under the ground, where he will never see the light of day, speak to no one—not even to his guardians—receive no medical attention, and be fed on scanty rations of bread and water. If he stands the ordeal he has the chance to be sent to hard labor, unless he becomes hopelessly insane, as did Passannante, who was the first one who attempted to kill King Humbert.

What Gave Them Away.

London, Aug. 20.—The Rome correspondent of the Daily Mail says: "The arrest of Maresea and Guida in New York arose out of some letters received at Bresci's lodging subsequent to the assassination of King Humbert. One of these, dated New York, July 25, and signed 'Mabor,' urged Bresci to commit the crime, urging that Maresca and Guida would do their duty toward President McKinley. Maresca is known to the Italian police as a most fanatical anarchist.

CLAWED BY A PANTHER.

A Tennesseean's Fearful Battle on Lookout Mountain—Hovering Between Life and Death.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Aug. 20.—F. W. Johnson, an ex-member of the Third Tennessee Infantry, is hovering between life and death at his log cabin on Lookout Mountain, the result of a fight he had with a panther last Monday afternoon. Monday afternoon, in company with his dogs, he started out to hunt, and had not proceeded far before he was furiously attached by a large female panther.

The animal grasped him by the throat and knocked him over and was chewing on his ear, when his dogs came to his rescue. They attacked the panther, and to save itself it was forced to loosen its hold upon Mr. Johnson. The dogs and man wrestled with the panther for quite a while, Johnson being finally compelled to retire on account of loss of blood, as the animal had gashed his neck and face fearfully with its claws. The panther was about to get the best of the dogs, when a negro, who was hunting, came along and killed it with a shot gun.

The latter scattered in all directions and the girl was about to return home when the brick was thrown. She died in a few minutes. The Negro suspected of throwing the brick has not been captured.

A Bloody Hammer Was the Instrument Used and Robbery Was the Motive.

New York, Aug. 20.—Catherine Scharf, aged 22, was beaten to death with a hammer in her rooms on the second floor of 674 Second avenue, some time between 7 p. m. and midnight Sunday, the body not being found until early Sunday morning. Her brother made the discovery when he came home after midnight.

The woman's body lay in a pool of blood face downward. Nearby, on the floor, was a bloody hammer and the rooms had been ransacked of everything of value. It is the opinion of the police that a thief entered the house and was uprised in his work by the girl and that he killed her to prevent identification.

STATE NEWS HAPPENINGS.

AN EXTRA SESSION.

Gov. Beckham Issues a Proclamation Convening the Legislature Tuesday, August 28.

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 16.—Gov. Beckham Wednesday issued a proclomation convening the legislature in extra session Tuesday, August 28. The Goebel election law is the only subject meationed in the call and will consequently be the only subject of consideration by the legislature.

It is understood the amendments which are to be adopted to this were practically agreed upon at a conference between the governor and a number of democratic leaders of both houses of the legislature which was held here last week.

Senator Carter, president pro tem of the senate and acting lieutenant governor, will issue a call for a caucus of the democratic members to be held about the 27th, or a day or two later, at which the various proposed amendments to the election law will be considered. The republican leaders have not caucused but will also do so early in the session. They will make a fight for straight out repeal of the law and claim that they have a majority of one in the senate in favor of repeal. In this they count on five anti-Goebel democrats voting with them. The republican side of the senate has been increased one vote since the last session by the election of Senator Dyer, of Newport.

The democrats do not concede that the friends of straight out repeal of the law will have a majority in the senate in any event but admit that the lines are very closely drawn, perhaps a tie, and contend that there is no danger that the republicans and anti-Goebel democrats can control the legislation of the session.

Gov. Beckham has not commenced his message and has not signified what will be the nature of the changes he will recommend.

A Farmer Tried to Put His Wife In an Insane Asylum But Makes a Failure.

Owensboro, Ky., Aug. 17.—About two weeks ago Wes McDaniel, of Knottsville, came to this city and swore out a lunacy warrant against his wife, and the warrant was placed in the hands of Deputy Sheriff Ollie Haynes, who went to McDaniel's home to serve it. He conversed with Mrs. McDaniel for a short time and decided that she was about the most intelligent lunatic he had ever met, and that she was as sane as anybody. He returned home without serving the warrant or saying a word to Mrs. McDaniel about the matter. He went, however, to the homes of some of the best people of the neighborhood in order by inquiry to satisfy himself as to her sanity. All agreed that they had seen nothing wrong, and were indignant at the charge.

On Monday McDaniel brought his wife to town himself, after offering her, she says, $100 to leave him, which she refused. She was tried before Judge E. P. Taylor for lunacy, and was acquitted after only one witness, Dr. Early, of Knottsville, who considered her perfectly sane, had been examined.

Mr. Collier was informed by the auditor that this matter had been referred to Judge H. P. Hines, state inspector, who had been directed by the governor to examine into his accounts, and that his report and vouchers would be referred to Mr. Hines.

The auditor declined to make a settlement with Collier for the reason that this matter had passed out of his hands to those of Inspector Hines and he received Collier's vouchers, checks and reports with a statement to Collier that they would be turned over to Hines, who would make out a report of the state of his accounts next week.

Your correspondent will boom the Recorder from this place when he gets moved and rents a telephone.

Mrs. Maud Johnson and children returned home, to Covington, after spending several days with her parents

The wind, last Sunday week, did considerable damage to crops and fruit trees. Appies in many places were all blown off.

The wedding of Mr. Russell Hume to Miss Annette Floore at Cincinnati on the 9th inst., was a surprise to many. The Recorder wishes Mr. and Mrs. Hume a happy, prosperous and useful life.

The friends of Mrs. Bettie Roberts will be sorry to hear of her death. She died here on the 16th inst. She was a consistent member of the Baptist church. Her remains were placed in New Bethel cemetery to await the resurrection.

Mr. Frank Callahan was able to sit up a while one day.

Miss Ogden, of Sherman, is the guest of Miss Jennie Smith.

The Misses Calendar of Glencoe are visiting Miss Carrie Myers.

Several from here attended church at Crittenden Sunday evening.

Prof. J. H. Craven and Miss Carrie Myers will teach the school here this fall.

Rev. S. M. Adams filled his appointment here at the Baptist church Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Garvey of Jonesville and Mr. Kemper of Glencoe were calling on Miss Callahan Sunday.

A series of meetings will begin at the Baptist Church on Monday night before the 3rd Saturday in Sept.

The time is not far distant for the election of County Supt. We would suggest the name of Prof. J. H. Craven as he has all the qualifications to make us an excellent Superintendent.

On Wednesday night the death angel again appeared and took away Mrs. Bettie Roberts, a faithful soldier of the cross. She was buried at New Bethel Friday after a very touching discourse by Rev. L. Johnson.

The teachers from this part of the county were delighted with the Institute this year, although the weather was extremely warm, yet their Instructor was a live, wide-awake man, and benefitted the teachers more than usual.

Death has visited our community. The first was Mr. Ed McElroy, who died Monday morning. Rev. L. Johnson preached the funeral sermon at Walton Tuesday. His remains were interred in Independence cemetery. He leaves a wife and bright little boy, besides a host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

Several of our people attended the Carthage fair last week, and all report a large attendauce and a good exhibition.

Quite a number of our young people were entertained by Miss Dora Baker, last Saturday evening. All present report a good time.

Edgar, the 9 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Will Anderson, died, last Saturday, after a lingering illness of many weeks. Sunday afternoon the remains were brought to Hebron for interment, when a large concourse of relatives and friends were present to pay their last tributes of respect. Death has cast his magic wand and taken from our midst another of those bright stars, who is now at rest with the angels, for He Who rules and holds the world in the hollow of His hand, has said, "Except ye be converted and become a little child, ye can not enter the gates of heaven." Sad, indeed, it would be if there were hearts so hardened that would not be touched by the death of an innocent child; and such tender words of love and hope as Bro. Lentz spoke to the bereaved parents, were words to be remembered by all those present. Edgar's school mates acted as pall-bearers, and each one seemed to feel in his heart a tender farewell for the little wasted form lying beneath the sweet scent of beautiful flowers on that bright summer's day. Asleep in Jesus, now and forever.

Cook's Mammoth Romau Hippodrome and Wild West Show will give, absolutely free to every visitor at the fair, exhibitions daily on the track at Lawrenceburg Fair, Aug. 22-25. Chariot Races, Romau Standing Races, Hurdle Races, Steeple-chase Races, Bronco 'Bustery' and many other attractive and novel features of horsemanship. It is free." 3t

Mrs. Perry Ryle was found unconscious in the yard a few days ago, supposed to have been overcome by heat. She is quite poorly yet.

OUR GLORIOUS COUNTRY.

Have you watched its marvelous growth? If not, the Weekly Enquirer wants to study the strides it has made. The first census of the United States was taken in 1810. Since then every succeeding ten years. The result has been as follows:

Year.	Population.	Year.	Population.
1850	23,191,876

Here you have the figures of a basis of calculation. The problem now is: What will be the population of the United States, excluding recent acquisitions. The result is usually announced in July of the census year.

THE WEEKLY ENQUIRER is anxious to engage all in a study of their country. To this end it will distribute cash amounting to $25,000, for solutions received of the population of the United States Census, as follows: -

To the first nearest correct guess received	$3,000.00
To the second	1,500.00
To the third	750.00
To the fourth	500.00
To the fifth	250.00
To the sixth	200.00
To the seventh	150.00
To the next 10, each $100, amounting to	1,000.00
To the next 50, each $50, amounting to	2,500.00
To the next 100, each $25, amounting to	2,500.00
To the next 500, each $10, amounting to	5,000.00
To the next 1,330, each $5, amounting to	7,650.00
2197 cash presents amounting to	$25,000.00

You can guess as often as you care to inclose subscription price to the WEEKLY ENQUIRER.

This contest will close a month before the result of the census will be known and officially certified by the Director of the United States Census at Washington, D. C.

Subscription price for the WEEKLY ENQUIRER (including guess) is only $1.00 a year. Eleven copies and eleven guesses for $10.00. For full particulars see WEEKLY ENQUIRER.

NOTES.

The poultry exhibit was unusually large and very fine.

There was no dust to interfere with the people—the heat had a monopoly in that line.

Hon. D. Linn Gooch was on hand Friday making acquaintances and pushing his canvass for Congress.

The oppressive heat did not deter the young people from dancing Saturday. The pavilion was almost like an oven.

Gen. R. J. Breckinridge's speech on Friday was not heard by a large crowd, but those who heard it were well pleased.

The fact that the attendance this year was not as large as usual is no indication that the Harvest Home has lost any of its popularity.

Chief of Police Pugh, of Covington; Dr. R. H. Orisler, of Ludlow, and C. W. Riddell, of Williamstown, were mixing with the crowd Saturday.

Squire James M. Lillard gives out this as a "sure cure" for flux, says the Harrodsburg Democrat: "Fill a tumbler half full of apple vinegar, put a teaspoonful each of Crab Orchard and Epsom salts and 1 tablespoonful of table salt. Take a dose every hour until six doses have been taken and then every two hours and you will be well before you know it." Mr. Lillard is 94 years of age, and he has seen this remedy tried where the life of the patient was despaired of, but has never known it to fail to effect a cure.

Courtney Walton, of the Utzinger neighborhood, had an experience with lightning, a week or two since, which he does not care to have repeated. He started to put a colt to a cart, when a storm overtook him out on the road, and lightning struck the ground in the middle of the road a short distante ahead of him, dazing him. The colt whirled with the cart and had run a considerable distance before Courtney came to sufficiently to realize what had happened, and to check the colt.

Circuit Court.

For several terms there has been pending a suit seeking to compel the removal of a negro who is buried in Florence grave yard, on a lot not belonging to the estate of the deceased. The suit was decided this term, and the judgment permits the negro to rest in peace, where he was interred.

The attendance at court was very small all the week, the tobacco crop and the hot weather keeping the farmers at home.

August is not a month favorable to the holding of circuit court.

The grand jurors drew $96, and the petit jurors, $190 for their services, the Sheriff paying to the trustee of the jury fund $195 of the State revenue for the jury fund.

Judge Greene's health was not such as to admit in justice to himself, of holding court during the intolerable hot weather, and he adjourned court for the term and left for home Saturday morning.

The grand jury was in session four days and returned seven indictements.

Very few cases were disposed of finally.

Not a fine was imposed during the term, consequently the Commonwealth's Attorney drew a blank as to fees and commissions.

Considerable repairing is being done on this end of the B. & F. turnpike.

SPIRITUAL VALUES.

Dr. Talmage Urges a Higher Appreciation of Things Religious.

Earthly and Heavenly Riches Compared—The Inestimable Value of a Human Soul—Christ's Vicarious Sacrifice.

From Berlin, where he preached in the American church to a great congregation, comprising many of his countrymen who are traveling through Europe, Dr. Talmage sends this discourse, in which, by original methods, he calculates spiritual values and urges higher appreciation of things religious. The text is Mark 8:36: "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

Men of all occupations are to be found in the assemblies of the house of God, but in these days of extensive business operations a large proportion are engaged from Monday morning to Saturday night in bargain making. In many of the families across the breakfast table and the tea table are discussed questions of loss and gain. You are every day asking yourself: "What is the value of this? What is the value of that?" You would not think of giving something of greater value for that which is of lesser value. You would not think of selling that which cost you ten dollars for five dollars. If you had a property that was worth $15,000, you would not sell it for $4,000. You are intelligent in all matters of bargain making. Are you as wise in the things that pertain to the matters of the soul? Christ adapted His instructions to the circumstances of those to whom He spoke. When He talked to fishermen, He spoke of the Gospel net. When He talked to the farmers, He said: "A sower went forth to sow." When He talked to the shepherds, He told the parable of the lost sheep. And am I not right, when speaking to an audience made up of bnrgain makers, that I address them in the words of my text, asking: "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

I propose, as far as possible, to estimate and compare the value of the two properties.

First, I have to say that the world is a very grand property. Its flowers are God's thoughts in bloom; its rocks are God's thoughts in stone; its dewdrops are God's thoughts in pearl. This world is God's child—a wayward child, indeed. It has wandered off through the heavens. But about 1,900 years ago, one Christmas night, God sent out a sister world to call that wanderer back, and it hung over Bethlehem only long enough to get the promise of the wanderer's return, and now that lost world, with soft feet of light, comes treading back through the heavens. The hills—how beautiful they billow up the edge of the wave white with the foam of crocuses! How beautiful the rainbow, the arched bridge on which Heaven and earth come and talk to each other in tears after the storm is over! How nimble the feet of the lamplighters that in a few minutes set all the dome of the night blaze with brackets of fire! How bright the oar of the saffron cloud that rows across the deep sea of heaven! How beautiful the spring, with bridal blossoms in her hair! I wonder who it is that beats time on a June morning for the bird orchestra? How gently the harebell tolls its fragrance on the air! There may be grander worlds, swarthier worlds, larger worlds, than this, but I think that this is a most exquisite world, a mignonette on the bosom of immensity. "Oh," you say, "take my soul! Give me that world! I am willing to take it in exchange. I am ready now for the bargain. It is so beautiful a world, so sweet a world, so grand a world!"

But let us look more minutely into the value of this world. You will not buy property unless you can get a good title to it. After you have looked at the property and found out that it suits you, you send an attorney to the public office, and he examines the book of deeds and the book of mortgages and the book of judgments and the book of liens, and he decides whether the title is good before you will have anything to do with it. There might be a splendid property, and in every way exactly suited to your want, but if you cannot get a good title you will not take it. Now, I am here to say that it is impossible to get a good title to this world. If I settle down upon it, in the very year I so settle down upon it as a permanent possession, I may be driven away from it. Aye, in five minutes after I give up my soul for the world, I may have to part with the world, and what kind of a title do you call that? There is only one way in which I can hold an earthly possession, and that is through the senses. All beautiful sights through the eye, but the eye may be blotted out; all captivating sounds through the ear, but my ear may be deafened; all lusciousness of fruits and viands through my taste, but my taste may be destroyed; all appreciation of culture and of art through my mind, but I may lose my mind. What a frail hold, then, I have upon any earthly possession!

In courts of law, if you want to get a man off a property, you must serve upon him a writ of ejectment, giving him a certain time to vacate the premises, but when Death comes to us and serves a writ of ejectment, he does not give us one second of forewarning. He says: "Off of this place! You have no right any longer to the possession." We might cry out: "I gave you a hundred thousand dollars for that property;" the plea would be of no avail. We might say: "We have a warantee deed for that property;" the plea would be of no avail. We might say: "We have a lien on that storehouse;" that would do us no good. Death is blind, and he cannot see a seal and cannot read an indenture. So that, first and last, I want to tell you that when you propose that I give up my soul for the world you cannot give me the first item of title.

Having examined the title of a property, your next question is about insurance. You would not be silly enough to buy a large warehouse that could not possibly be insured. You would not have anything to do with such a property. Now, I ask you what assurance can you give me that this world is not going to be burned up? Absolutely none. Geologists tell us that it is already on fire; that the heart of the world is one great living coal; that it is just like a ship on fire at sea, the flames not bursting out because the hatches are kept down. And yet you propose to palm off on me, in return for my soul, a world for which, in the first place, you give no title, in the second place, for which you can give no insurance. "Oh," you say, "the water of the oceans will wash over all the land and put out the fire." Oh, no. There are inflammable elements in the water, hydrogen and oxygen. Call off the hydrogen, and then the Atlantic and Pacific oceans would blaze like heaps of shavings. You want me to take this world, for which you can give no possible insurance.

Here is a man who has had a large estate for 40 or 50 years. He lies down to die. You say: "That man is worth millions and millions of dollars." Is he? You call up a surveyor, with his compass and chains, and you say: "There is a property extending three miles in one direction and three miles in another direction." Is that the way to measure that man's property? No! You do not want any surveyor, with compass and chains. That is not the way to measure that man's property now. It is an undertaker you need, who will come and put his finger in his vest pocket and take out a tapeline, and he will measure five feet nine inches one way and 2½ feet the other way. That is the man's property. Oh, no; I forgot; not so much as that, for he does not own even the place in which he lies in the cemetery. The deed to that belongs to the executors and heirs. Oh, what a property you propose to give me for my soul! If you sell a bill of goods you go into the counting-room and say to your partner: "Do you think that man is good for this bill? Can he give proper security? Will he meet this payment?" Now, when you are offered this world as a possession I want you to test the matter. I do not want you to go into this bargain blindly. I want you to ask about the title, about the insurance, about whether men have ever had any trouble with it, about whether you can get all or the ten-thousandth part or one-hundred-thousandth part of it.

There is the world now. I shall say no more about it. Make up your mind for yourself, as I shall before God have to make up my mind for myself about the value of this world. I cannot afford to make a mistake for my soul, and you cannot afford to make a mistake for your soul.

Now let us look at the other property—the soul. We cannot make a bargain without seeing the comparative value. The soul! How shall I estimate the value of it? Well, by its exquisite organization. It is the most wonderful piece of mechanism ever put together. Machinery is of value in proportion as it is mighty and silent at the same time. You look at the engine and the machinery in the Philadelphia mint, and as you see it performing its wonderful work you will be surprised to find how silently it goes. Machinery that roars and tears soon destroys itself; but silent machinery is often most effective. Now, so it is with the soul of man, with all its tremendous faculties; it moves in silence. Judgment, without any racket, lifting its scales; memory, without any noise, bringing down all its treasures; conscience taking its judgment seat without any excitement; the understnnding and the will all doing their work—velocity, majesty, might, but silence, silence. You listen at the door of your heart. You can hear no sound. The soul is quiet. It is so delicate an instrument that no human hand can touch it. You break a bone, and with splinters and bandages the surgeon sets it; the eye becomes inflamed, the apothecary's wash cools it; but a soul off the track, unbalanced, no human power can readjust it. With one sweep of its wing it encircles the universe and overvaults the throne of God. Why, in the hour of death the soul is so mighty it throws aside the body as though it were a toy. It drives back medical skill as impotent. It breaks through the circle of loved ones who stand around the dying couch. With one leap it springs beyond star and moon and sun and charms of immensity. It is superior to all material things! No fire can consume it; no floods can drown it; no rocks can crush it; no walls can impede it; no time can exhaust it. It wants no bridge on which to cross a chasm. It wants no plummet with which to sound a depth. A soul so mighty, so swift, so silent, must be a priceless soul.

I calculate the value of the soul also by its capacity for happiness. How much joy it can get in this world out of friendships, out of books, out of clouds, out of the sea, out of flowers, out of ten thousand things, and yet all the joy it has here does not test its capacity. You are in a concert before the curtain hoists, and you hear the instruments preparing—the sharp snap of the broken string, the scraping of the bow across the viol. "There is no music in that," you say. It is only getting ready for the music. And all the enjoyment of the soul in this world, the enjoyment we think is real enjoyment is only preparative.

You cannot test the full power of the soul for happiness in this world. How much power the soul has here to find enjoyment in friendships; but, oh, the grander friendships for the soul in the skies! How sweet the flowers here, but how much sweeter they will be there! I do not think that when flowers die on earth they die forever. In the sunny valleys of Heaven shall not the marigold creep? On the hills of Heaven will not the amaranth bloom? On the amethystine walls of Heaven will not the jasmine climb? "My beloved is come down into his garden to gather lilies." No flowers in Heaven? Where, then, do they get their garlands for the brows of the righteous?

Christ is glorious to our souls now, but how much grander our appreciation after awhile! A conqueror comes back after the battle. He has been fighting for us. He comes upon the platform. He has one arm in a sling and the other arm holds a crutch. As he mounts the platform, oh, the enthusiasm of the audience! They say: "That man fought for us and imperilled his life for us," and how wild the huzza that follows huzza! When the Lord Jesus Christ shall at last stand out before the multitudes of the redeemed of Heaven and we meet Him face to face and feel that He was wounded in the head and wounded in the hands and wounded in the feet and wounded in the side for us, methinks we will be overwhelmed. We will sit some time gazing in silence until some leader amid the white-robed choir shall lift the baton of light and give the signal that it is time to wake the song of jubilee, and all Heaven then will break forth into "Hosanna, hosanna! Worthy is the Lamb that was slain."

I calculate further the value of the soul by the price that has been paid for it. In St. Petersburg there is a diamond that the government paid $200,000 for. "Well," you say, "it must have been very valuable or the government would not have paid $200,000 for it." I want to see what my soul is worth and what your soul is worth by seeing what has been paid for it. For that immortal soul the richest blood that was ever shed, the deepest groan that was ever uttered, all the griefs of earth compressed into one tear, all the sufferings of earth gathered into one rapier of pain and struck through His holy heart. Does it not imply tremendous value?

I argue also the value of the soul from the home that has been fitted up for it in the future. One would have thought that a street of adamant would have done. No; it is a street of gold. One would have thought that a wall of granite would have done. No; it is the flame of sardonyx mingling with the green of emerald. One would have thought that an occasional doxology would have done. No; it is a perpetual song. If the ages of Heaven marched in a straight line, some day the last regiment, perhaps, might pass out of sight; but, no, the ages of Heaven do not march in a straight line, but in a circle around about the throne of God. Forever, forever, tramp, tramp! A soul so bought, so equipped, so provided for, must be a priceless soul, a majestic soul, a tremendous soul.

I was reading lately of a sailor who had just got ashore and was telling about his last experience at sea. He said: "The last time I crossed the ocean we had a terrific time. After we had been out three or four days the machinery got disarranged, and the steam began to escape, and the captain, gathering the people and the crew on deck, said: 'Unless some one will go down and shut off that steam and arrange that unchinery at the peril of his life we must all be destroyed.' He was not willing to go down himself. No one seemed willing to go. The passengers gathered at one end of the steamer waiting for their fate. The captain said: 'I give you a last warning. If there is no one here willing to imperil his life and go down and fix that machinery we must all be lost.' A plain sailor said: 'I'll go, sir,' and he wrapped himself in a coarse piece of canvas and went down and was gone but a few moments when the escaping steam stopped and the machinery was adjusted. The captain cried to the passengers: 'All saved! Let us go down below and see what has become of the poor fellow.' They went down. There he lay dead." Vicarious suffering! Died for all! Oh, do you suppose that those people on the ship ever forgot, ever can forget, that poor fellow? "No." they say; "it was through his sacrifice that I got ashore." The time came when our whole race must die unless some one should endure torture and sorrow and shame. Who shall come to the rescue? Shall it be one of the seraphim? Not one. Shall it be one of the cherubim? Not one. Shall it be an inhabitant of some pure and, unfallen world? Not one. Then Christ said: 'Lo, I come to do thy will, O God," and He went down the dark stairs of our sin and wretchedness and misery and woe, and He stopped the peril, and He died that you and I might be free. Oh, the love; oh, the endurance; oh, the horrors of the sacrifice! Shall not our souls go out toward Him, saying: "Lord Jesus Christ, take my soul. Thou art worthy to have it. Thou hast died to save it?"

God help you rightly to cipher out this sum in Gospel arithmetic: "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

Tobacco seeds are so minute that a thimbleful will furnish enough plants for an acre of ground.

THE GOLD DEMOCRATS.

Getting Back to the Only Party That Relieves from Extortion.

The Palmer and Buckner democrats of McLean county, Ill., formally announce that they are now supporting Bryan and Stevenson.

They have issued a statement in which they declare that their views on the silver question, which was the leading issue in 1896, have undergone no change.

But in their judgment this issue has, for the time being at least, given place in importance to two others, which have been forced upon the country by the republican party and which now, in their belief, "threaten our basic national principles and organic national life." They state these issues as follows:

1. "Un-American colonization, disruptive not only of our national integrity and morals, but also of our national peace, prosperity and perpetuity.

2. "The fostering of trusts and of unjust and flagrant private monopoly."

The colonization to which the McLean county democrats object is indeed un-American. Properly speaking, it is not colonization at all, which means the sending forth of people from a parent country to occupy the wilderness and plant there the laws, the institutions, the civilization of that country.

What the republican party has undertaken to do is not to people a wilderness, either adjoining or remote from the United States, with Americans, but to establish American dominion over countries already as densely populated as Illinois or even Massachusetts—over millions of people occupying regions where there is no room for American colonies in the proper sense of the word.

To true colonization—that is, to the overflow of American people and institutions into unoccupied territory or territory occupied only by a few roving savages who practically make no use of the soil and other resources available—there is no rational objection.

To the conquest of countries already densely populated, where there is no room for genuine American colonization—to the subjugation of millions of people and their government as subjects upon the assumption that they are not capable of governing themselves—there is great objection.

That sort of thing unquestionably is "disruptive not only of our national integrity and morals, but also of our national peace, prosperity and perpetuity."

As to the trust issue there can be no mistake. The republican party is responsible for the Dingley tariff, in the absence of which nine-tenths of the trusts would be harmless.

The trusts recognize the republican party as their party. They go to it for such legislation, including the Porto Rican law, as will help fatten their bank accounts. They multiply and wax defiant of law when that party is in power.

These notorious facts point unmistakably to the only party from which relief from trust extortion is to be expected.—Chicago Chronicle.

A Republican Subterfuge.

The managers of Mr. McKinley's canvass for a second term apparently are planning "a business scare" as the most convenient means to the end which they have in view. For the purpose of forcing large contributions to the campaign fund in the first instance and of stampeding the voters ultimately they seem to be striving to excite the public mind anew on the silver question. There is manifest a disposition among them to divert political discussion from the concrete problems of the hour to what is at present an idle and untimely abstraction. In other words they are doing their utmost to make the country believe that the free coinage of silver is involved in the result of the election in November, and are employing premises and conclusions which are equally fictitious.—Boston Globe.

THE PRINCIPAL ISSUE.

As the Democratic Platform Says, It Is Imperialism, and Not 16 to 1.

It is the way of the American people to settle one issue at a time. In the war of 1861 the one object of the north was to save the union. Everything else, as Lincoln so often said, was a side issue. In 1898 the one object of the nation in going to war with Spain was to free Cuba. Other consequences were not considered.

In all our presidential elections one issue has been paramount—determining. In 1860 it was to stop the extension of slavery into the territories. In 1864 it was to sustain the government in prosecuting the war. In 1868 it was to "preserve the fruits of the war." In 1876 it was reform—the battle cry of Tilden. In 1884 the election turned mainly upon the political character of James G. Blaine. In 1892 the dominant issue was the odious McKinley tariff. In 1896 it was, of course, free silver at 16 to 1.

This year, as the Kansas City platform truly declares, "the paramount issue" is "the burning issue of imperialism, involving the very existence of republic and the destruction of our free institutions." Surely nothing can be more paramount or more fundamental than this.

Why, then, is there any question that this is the one dominating issue? Why did Mr. McKinley in his speech of acceptance so promptly accept the challenge of the 16-to-1 plank in the democratic platform and seek to make that again the paramount issue? Is it not, as the Brooklyn Eagle so acutely says, because "honest money is a universal interest?" Is it not because the shrewd republican managers know that ten hesitating voters will vote to protect their money and property to one who will vote upon so splendid an abstraction as equal liberty and a republic true to its ideals?

With Mr. Bryan himself rests the determination of the question whether "the paramount issue" shall be in fact paramount. Mr. McKinley, by his frank declaration of the republican purpose to hold and to rule the Philippines by "supreme authority," outside the constitution—regardless of the effect of this poisonous graft of empire upon the healthful stock of the republic—renews the inestimable opportunity to make "the burning issue of imperialism" the pivot of the election.—N. Y. World.

POINTS AND OPINIONS.

——One of the most grateful results of democratic victory this year will be the elimination of Mark Hanna as a dominating figure in American public life.—St. Louis Republic.

——Every list of killed and wounded that comes to us from the Philippines is a record of unjustifiable cruelty to our own sons and adds to the long chapter of dishonor with which the McKinley administration has darkened our national annals.—Atlanta Jonrnal.

——Mr. Bryan is a dangerous man. He is a man of the people, and that sort of a man should not be allowed to go at large these times. He might intrude himself in some rude way upon the palatial repose of a protected monopoly and smash some of its crockery.—Columbus (O.) Press-Post.

——There is every reason to believe that the south will be solid for Bryan and Stevenson in November. Kentucky, Maryland and West Virginia will follow North Carolina in giving an increased democratic vote sufficient to place them again firmly in the democratic column.—Buffalo Courier.

——Democracy is not making a campaign of apology and explanation this year. Apologies and explanations are the chief products of the republican machine in this campaign. The republican machine has a patent on that sort of thing now, and democracy has no disposition to infringe upon it.—Omaha World-Herald.

DECLARE FOR BRYAN

The Policy of McKinley Administration Based Upon Imperialistic Principles—Philippine and Chinese Troubles.

At the first day's sessions of the National Anti-Imperialist league, Indianapolis, August 15, the name of William J. Bryan was greeted with the wildest enthusiasm and the addresses of Temporary Chairman Edwin Burritt Smith and Permanent Chairman George S. Boutwell were interrupted by lengthy applause at every mention of the democratic candidate for the presidency. The minor speeches, those of the delegates, all favored Mr. Bryan's election. Permanent Chairman Boutwell's speech is here given in part:

"This is an historic occasion. If the peril of this country is what we think it is; if the question before you and before your countrymen is the question of the continuance of the republic, then no graver question has ever been committed to an assembly of men or to the country. We are opposed to imperialism. We are in favor of a republican form of government. We respect the teachings of our ancestry, the glory of their history. They have left to us; and standing between the past and the future it is our duty to transmit to posterity the principles of the fathers and the institutions that they founded. That is your mission to-day as the representatives of 45 states of this union.

"I charge that the policy upon which this administration has entered will mean the abandonment of the principles upon which our government was founded; that it will change the republic into an empire. The first of the means before us for the preservation of the union, if our allegation is true, is the overthrow of the administration.

The President Responsible.

"We are told there is peace in the Philippines, and our 60,000 soldiers there are merely performing police duty. The president has said the Philippines are ours, and there will be no abatement of our rights and no scuttle policy. This seems to indicate that we have entered upon a colonial policy. I always follow the president by his doings, not by his speeches. When the speeches of men and the actions of men appear not to harmonize, I look to their actions for the truth, therefore I have never looked to the words of President McKinley as presenting substantial evidence of what he would do. I am not able to explain the motive of Mr. McKinley in taking this policy. I believe he is the master mind in his cabinet, and that nothing has transpired except that which he himself has originated. And he has carried it through thus far without interruption. He intervened the protocol with Spain contrary to its language, and framed the treaty of Paris according to his own ideas; and he has since interpreted his powers upon his own theory as to what he was authorized to do. He is the one personage for whom has been done, and it we are opposed to what has been done, our chief duty is the overthrow of the administration of which he is the head.

The Chinese Trouble.

"The troubles in China have been aggravated and the missionaries and ambassadors of the various governments have been put in peril by the policy of the United States. Is it not true that in the last ten years there have been statements again and again that it was the purpose of the various states of Europe to partition China? When we entered the Philippines it was an additional menace to the Chinese empire, and it has led to the revolution in China and put the missionaries and ambassadors in peril of their lives. Instead of being a fortunate circumstance, the fact that we were in the Philippines was the chief occasion of that revolution in China. I ask, is Gen. Chaffee or Gen. Grant to be put under the head of a prince of the house of Germany, or on the other hand, is the government of the United States to take upon itself the peril of allowing one of its officers to take command of the troops of England and France and Germany, and be responsible for all the mistakes? If we had treated China in the month of June as we would have treated Great Britain under similar circumstances, there would have been no peril. If a rebellion should occur in London, and our minister there should be in peril of his life, would we send a force up the Thames to bombard London? No, we would appeal to the different nations through diplomatic channels before engaging in a military undertaking. Was it not a declaration of war when we trained our guns upon the citadels of the Chinese empire? Who authorized it? Under the constitution, congress alone can declare war. Can the chief magistrate make war in the absence of a congressional declaration of war?

Leaves Republican Party.

"How is the overthrow of the administration to be accomplished?" concluded Mr. Boutwell. "In my youth I had no disguises. I turned aside and left the democratic party when it surrendered to slavery. In my age I leave the republican party, now that it has surrendered itself to despotic and tyrannical motives. (Great applause). I helped create the republican party, a party at that time of justice and equality and honesty. I now believe it is a party of injustice and despotism, and I will help to destroy it. And how? There is but one available means, and you know what that is. I am for Bryan.

"We are to have a platform containing a plank against this administration, and I hope a recommendation to support Bryan. Next March I trust we will have an inauguration to be followed by a policy which will bring the troops out of the Philippines, diminish the death roll and the massacre of people in these distant lands; and we shall then set up three young republics which will add glory in their origin through the policy of the American people; raised from a condition of tyranny into an opportunity to govern themselves and to enjoy the fruits of their own industry, and to decide for themselves what their public policy shall be."

——In his public speeches and private utterances, Gov. Roosevelt continues to place very effective campaign ammunition in the hands of the democratic enemy.—Denver Post.

——The cost of republican administration steadily increases; but, unlike the commodities controlled by the Dingley-fostered trusts, republican administration is not one of the necessaries of life.—Albany Argus.

——The Chicago Record says Mark Hanna has not yet decided whether he will or will not have Colorado go republican this year. The esteemed Record is respectfully informed that the big boss is looked upon by the intelligent Coloradoans as about on a level with the yaller dog under an emigrant wagon.—Denver Post.

RIDDLES THE HYPOCRITES.

Weakness of Republican Cause Exposed by Bryan In His Acceptance Speech.

The magnificent appeal for the perpetuation of the time-honored principles of the republic with which Mr. Bryan acknowledges the official notification of his nomination is now before the American people. It possesses the ring of a second declaration of independence. There is no sophisticated play on words, no beating around the bush, no cowardly attempt to escape the issue which most vitally affects the governmental structure. The language is simple, straightforward and strong, absolutely void of equivocation. It is the creation of a statesman who has a policy to propose of which he feels absolutely sure. There is no timidity—no shrinking.

No surer proof of the weakness of the republican cause can be adduced than the refusal of republican leaders to discuss Imperialism in detail. Instead, their mere campaigners resort to ridicule and meaningless harangue concerning honor and glory, while those pretending to statesmanship have recourse to vague, orneulur assertions that leave their exact positions in doubt. The men chosen to make and execute our laws are merely public servants. The people, then, have a right to know exactly what they propose to do, and when and how they propose to do it. We have no prophets whose word is law. In striking contrast to the republican plan Mr. Bryan meets every point in a manly manner and discusses it with thoroughness. There is no wild declaration, nothing dangerously radical, nothing bitter or purely partisan. His discussion throughout is calm, temperate and patriotic.

The most bigoted party antagonist cannot place his finger upon a sentiment that is not distinctly American. A high moral sentiment pervades the whole. Liberty is the keynote.

Commending expansion he attacks imperialism, demanding that the constitution accompany the flag into every territory under American dominion; disputing the appalling assertion that men with souls may be purchased with inanimate earth and ruled as "possessions," he riddles the hypocritical plea of duty, holding our supreme duty to be the discharge of moral obligations.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

MUST MEET ON IMPERIALISM.

Opponents of Mr. Bryan Will Not Be Able to Dodge the Paramount Issue.

The oft-demonstrated ability of William Jennings Bryan was never more effectively exercised than in the preparation of the really great speech which he delivered in formally accepting the nomination for president by the democratic party. That speech is in itself a lofty, serious and patriotic discussion of the greatest issue that has confronted the American people since 1860. The man who made that speech is a developed Bryan, if not a new Bryan, and his opponents will be compelled to meet him and do battle with him on different grounds than those of 1896. On the currency question he dwells not at all, except to say that "man, the handiwork of God, comes first; money, the handiwork of man, is of inferior importance," which is the nearest he comes to a possible hint at a subordination of the silver issue. The opponents of Mr. Bryan will be compelled, whether they like it or not, to meet him on the issue of imperialism. He presents it in such form and with such masterly force that they cannot evade it if they would. In his first utterance of the campaign Mr. Bryan gives assurance that the contest is not to be one-sided by any means, and that the supporters of McKinley will have no reason to possess overconfidence when the battle opens. They are dealing this year with Mr. Bryan at his best.—Utica Observer.

Treasured by Genuine Americans.

Such force is there in Bryan's arguments against our conquering and enslaving of foreign races, and with such limpid clearness are they set forth, that the best of the republicans' ability will straightway rush to challenge them, will count itself lucky to be allowed to break even an impotent lance against them. It is a speech that will be an inspiration in the campaign—of comfort and assistance to the democrats, of dread and discomfiture to the republicans. It will be a whole armory in itself of the very finest campaign material to the democrats; the republicans will spend the next three months in ceaseless, but vain, attempts to rebut its reasoning and to lessen its effect upon the national mind. It is a speech which the genuine American, who is proud of his republicanism, of his constitution, of his traditions and of his declaration of independence, will read and will treasure with pardonable pride; for never did a statesman of the United States deliver himself of a speech placing Americanism on so pure and lofty a plane and making it an oriflamme for the nations to follow.—N. O. Times Democrat.

——Mr. Bryan's speech appears of appalling length, but no one who reads beyond the opening paragraphs will put it aside before he has reached the end. It is an exceedingly able speech, clear, coherent and logical, and as earnest as eloquent, and all the more forcible because it is confined closely to one subject, which he takes as the significant leading issue that typifies all the general issues of the campaign. —Philadelphia Times.

MOST CONVINCING EFFORT.

Mr. Bryan's Argument Against Imperialism in His Speech at Indianapolis.

Considered thus as an argument against the imperial policy, as a warning against militarism and a plea for liberty for all men, Mr. Bryan's speech will rank as perhaps the most logical, eloquent and convincing of all his public efforts. His analysis of and answer to the republican reasons for holding the Philippines is most searching and conclusive.

Mr. Bryan indorses as "an easy, honest, honorable solution of the Philippine question" the plan set forth in the democratic platform, and says:

"If elected I shall convene congress in extraordinary session as soon as I am inaugurated and recommend an immediate declaration of the nation's purpose, first, to establish a stable form of government in the Philippine islands, just as we are now establishing a stable form of government in the island of Cuba; second, to give independence to the Filipinos, just as we have promised to give independence to the Cubans; third, to protect the Filipinos from outside interference while they work out their destiny, just as we have protected the republics of Central and South America, and are, by the Monroe doctrine, pledged to protect Cuba."

It cannot be charged that this pledge is lacking in a definiteness, and the parallel which it runs with Cuba and with the traditional policy of our government in Central and South America is pertinent and unassailable.

Mr. Bryan has done well in confining his first formal speech to this "burning issue" and in adopting a moderate, reasoning and truly patriotic tone.—N. Y. World.

Forcible in His Demonstration.

Mr. Bryan made clear the distinction between imperialism and expansion, between forcible annexation and the requisition of territory to be divided into states. He showed by the experience of colonizing nations of Europe that tropical colonies were not suitable for the habitation of the white race. The status of the Filipino under the republican policy was next discussed. Was he to be a citizen or a subject? Clearly not a citizen. "A subject is possible only in government resting upon force." A republic, deriving its powers from the consent of the governed, can have no subjects. The evasive and insincere promise of the republican platform to the Filipinos of "the largest measure of self-government consistent with their welfare and our duties" was exposed. Sixteen months had elapsed after the treaty was ratified, but instead of any self-government the president's will was the only law. Mr. Bryan was forcible in his demonstration of the abstract right of people to govern themselves, and of the injustice of a stronger nation depriving the weaker of a natural right. Jefferson and Franklin were quoted to the effect that a plundering nation making an unjust war is as much a robber as the individual highwayman.—Washington Times.

EDITORIAL OPINION.

——Mr. Bryan has touched the button and set the pace. He talks for the Americanism which has made our country strong and great; he talks for principles which have grown with the civilization of the people. Democracy affords the only hope of saving the nation from imperialism.—Atlanta Constitution.

——Unmistakably Mr. Bryan has drawn the issue, and while the Chicago platform is firmly upheld by himself and his copominee, Mr. Stevenson, the dangers growing out of the recent war with Spain have appealed to his sturdy Americanism with such overmastering force as to lead him to seek first of all the safety and security of the republic.—Pittsburgh Post.

——There can be no misunderstanding of Mr. Bryan's position upon the "paramount issue" before the American people and no equivocation about it. He is first, last and all the time for the independence of the Filipinos. That is his interpretation of the platform adopted by the democratic national convention at Kansas City. To the independence of the Filipinos, therefore, the democratic party is doubly pledged in its platform and by its nominee for president.—Baltimore Sun.

——No public utterance made by Mr. Bryan since his nomination at Chicago in 1896 shows such scrupulous care and well-digested judgment as his address of acceptance. If the republicans flattered themselves with the anticipation of a flamboyant and florid effort they have been bitterly disappointed. There are no pyrotechnics in Mr. Bryan's discussion of Imperialism at Military park the other day—nothing resembling his famous Chicago metaphor about a cross of gold and a crown of thorns. The manifest purpose to safeguard himself against ridicule on the charge of extravagance and exaggeration has been abundantly successful.—Kansas City Star.

——The Herald, as is well known by this time, does not take the same view of the subject discussed that is held by Mr. Bryan and does not support his candidacy. But to say of this address that it lacks the quality of full manliness, intellectual or moral, would stultify our judgment. It is the utterance of a robust, earnest, competent disputant on a high theme of statesmanship. We have no motive to overpraise it, but our feeling is that this speech will give Bryan higher rank among the statesmen of the nation than he has had before.—Boston Herald.

$25,000 For Flying Machines.

The American government is to devote $25,000 to the purpose of experimenting with flying machines to ascertain their practicability for use in the army. This is a large sum to use for an experiment, and yet it cannot compare with that spent uselessly by those who experiment with various so-called dyspepsia cures. Chinaman and Christian

A Chinaman of great dignity and some splendor of dress was getting off an elevated train at Twenty-third street the other day when a white rowdy called after him:

"Say," said the tough, "are you a boxer?"

The other tough added some abuse and roared with laughter, after the Chinaman, who got off the car, then turned. He waited till the gates were closed, then he answered in pretty clear English:

"Say, I is Christian!"

Then the gateman and some passengers laughed, and the toughs slunk into the car. —N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

NEBRASKA THE LAND OF PLENTY

I wonder why it is that so many men spend their days working hard on rented farms, barely making enough to get along, with no great prospect ahead of owning their own homes, when within a few hours' journey is a land of plenty —Nebraska—where all kinds of grain and fruit can be raised with the least amount of labor; where cattle and hogs fed on corn bring a handsome profit; where the climate is healthful and churches and schools abound; where land is cheap and can be bought on very easy terms.

Think of this, and if you want information about the country send to me for "The Corn Belt," a beautifully illustrated monthly paper that tells all about Nebraska, and also for "The West Nebraska Grazing Country," an interesting illustrated booklet containing a large sectional map of Nebraska.

On the first and third Tuesdays of each month during the balance of this year cheap excursion tickets will be sold over our road to Nebraska, so that people may go and see for themselves. Ask your ticket agent about this.

Teachers' Institute.

The Boone County Teachers' Institute convened in Gordon Hall, Petersburg, Aug. 5, at 10 o'clock a. m. After enrollment of teachers, and an address by Supt. L. H. Voshell, Prof. J. W. Withers, of Lebanon, O., was introduced, who then outlined the work for the week.

In the afternoon Prof. Withers took up School Management and gave an interesting and profitable talk on the subject. After recess, Lucy Clayton introduced the subject of Primary Reading, followed by M. J. Brough, Mrs. Myers, Prof. Withers and the Superintendent. The majority favored teaching this subject by combining the word sentence and phonic methods.

TUESDAY.

After roll call, devotional exercises, and the appointment of the various committees, Laura Wolfe took up the subject of Intermediate Reading. The discussion was continued by Nannie Bristow, Prof. Withers and Supt. Voshell.

Advanced Reading was the next subject for discussion. The points emphasized in reading were, teach the pupil to understand what he is reading, teach him to read in an conversational tone, and furnish him much supplementary reading matter.

Katie Craig introduced Spelling, followed by Lottie Burnett, D. M. Snyder, Prof. Early, Rev. Harris and Prof. Withers. It was the opinion of the teachers that there were better spellers in the time of Webster's "Blue Back" than at present, which can be accounted for from the fact that there were not so many branches to teach in those times as there are now. The conclusion was, use a text book, give more time and attention to the subject, always consult the dictionary when in doubt, and teach both oral and written.

Writing was discussed by J. H. Craven and Olive Orem, Points emphasized: legibility, neatness, and rapidity; practice daily and at a time when the muscles are steady.

In the afternoon Language was taken up and thoroughly discussed by Marie Korn, W. J. Griffin and others, after which Grammar was introduced by Prof. Withers, and a lively discussion followed. Adjournment.

Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock a social was given the teachers, after which Prof. Withers gave an interesting lecture on "Intellectual Emancipation."

WEDNESDAY.

After roll call, singing and prayer by Prof. Early, Prof. Withers took up the subject of Psychology, and in a very able manner showed the teachers how it was applied in the every-day work of the school room. This subject occupied the whole of the forenoon. In the afternoon, at 2 o'clock the common school graduates held their exercises. Notwithstanding the oppressive heat a large audience was present and were pleased with the manner in which the young graduates acquitted themselves. There were seven in all, two being absent—Arrelda Roberts, of Verona, and Virgie Johnson, of Walton. The following is the program:

INVOCATION.

MUSIC.

Ambition,..... Edgar C. Riley, Bullittsville.

MUSIC.

From Victory to Victory,..... F. B. Hamilton, Verona.

King Robert of Sicily,..... Everett Jones, Utzinger.

"A Cry in the Darkness," Valedictory, Eupice Johnson, Verona.

Presentation of Diplomas,..... Supt. L. H Voshell.

THURSDAY.

After devotional exercises arithmetic occupied the forenoon. Prof. Withers lead the discussion, many teachers taking part.

In the afternoon Geography and History elicited lively discussion.

Thursday evening at 8 o'clock an entertainment was given by the young ladies and gentlemen, of Petersburg, and teachers.

FRIDAY.

After roll call and devotional exercises, the institute was highly honored with an address by Prof. D. C. Peck, of Trimble county. Away back in the sixties he taught several sessions of school in this county, near Petersburg. He has not taught since that time, but is versed in the methods of today. He came to enjoy the institute with us, and to meet once more his former pupils and friends. Although time had left his footprints, in most instances both teacher and pupils recognized eachother, and it did us a world of good to see that hearty grasp of the hand and happy smile upon meeting. We are lead to believe with him: "The true reward of a teacher is not the small sum of money he receives but it is the true friendship of his pupils and the thought of having done what he could to help them live useful and happy lives."

Physiology was the next subject that came up for discussion, M. J. Brough, Prof. Withers, Supt. Voshell and others taking part. It was decided that hygiene should receive the most attention.

After discussion of Reading Circle work and Composition, institute adjourned for noon recess.

After reports from the committee in the afternoon, and miscellaneous business, the institute adjourned to meet at Walton next year in October, with Prof. Withers instructor.

The committe on resolutions reported the following:

Resolved, That we, the teachers of Boone county, do hereby express our appreciation of the cordial reception given by the people of Petersburg and of their efforts to provide for us pleasure, profit and entertainment

2, That we heartily approve of the manner in which Prof. J. W. Withers has instructed this Institute and recommend that our Supt. secure his service for next year, and further that our next Institute be held at Walton, Ky.

3. That, after having suffered from the heat of this week, we implore our Superintendent to have the next meeting of the Institute sometime in October.

4. That the thanks of the teachers of Boone county, are extended to our Superintendent, L. H. Voshell, for the faithful, efficient and impartial administration he has extended to us in all his official relations.

5. That our thanks are due to W. J. Hon, of the John Church Co., for the excellent "Harvard Piano" furnished the teachers on this occasion.

6. That a copy of these Resolutions and proceedings be sent to the "Boone County Recorder" for publication.

Whereas, We note with sadness the vacancy in our midst, caused by the removal of Miss Lizzie Kipp from her field of labor to her reward since the last meeting of this institute:

Resolved. That in her death the teachers of Boone county suffer an irreparable loss, as she was a true christian woman, gentle, sympathetic, beloved by all, and we would kindly tender our condolence to her family and relatives, and treasure with delight her memory still; and further, that a copy of these resolutions be presented to the family and sent to the BOONE COUNTY RECORDER for publication.

NOTES.

Hotel Crisler was a very popular place with the teachers.

Rev. Davis was present most of the time and gave some valuable suggestions.

The teachers are very thankful to the Christian church for the use of their organ and song books.

Of the 55 teachers enrolled there were only 12 male teachers. Looks like women are taking the lead.

Messrs. Davis and Hann, former teachers of Boone, attended a day or so, and took part in the discussions.

Robert Riggs, Chas. Britting and Geo. Tupman, all of Kenton county, were among the visitors from a distance.

Prof. Early, who teaches the select school at Petersburg, was present each day and rendered valuable assistance.

Miss N. E. Hamilton, Principal of the League Institute, at Verona, came down to attend the graduating exercises. Frank Hamilton and Miss Kate Baker were her pupils.

Prof. J. W. Withers is President of the National Normal University, at Lebanon, O., and was decidedly the best instructor Boone has had for some time.

Prof. M. J. Brough, of Lincoln county, is perhaps the most experienced teacher in the county. He took an active part in all the discussions, and it takes a good one to "floor" him. He will teach at Hamilton.

There were just enough teachers enrolled to fill all the places in the county—a pretty close shave. Several of these have never taught. It begins to look as if teachers do not receive better pay soon some schools will go untaught.

J. H. CRAVEN, Secretary.

Prevented a Tragedy.

Timely information given Mrs. George Long, of New Straitsville, O., saved two lives. A frightful cough had long kept her awake every night. She had tried many remedies and doctors but steadily grew worse until urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle wholly cured her; and she writes, this marvelous medicine also cured Mr. Long of a severe attack of pneumonia. Such cures are positive proof of its power to cure all throat, chest and lung troubles. Only 50c and $1. Guaranteed. Trial bottles free at McKim's, Burlington; Oelsner's, Florence and Crouch's, Union.

Crop and Stock.

The government crop bulletin places the total wheat yield in Manitoba at 11,000,000 bushels. Winds and drought destroyed 348,819 acres. The yield is estimated at 7 1-2 bushel per acre.

At Chicago recently a herd of short horn cattle were sold that brought the highest average price since 1884. The highest average bull brought $1,510 and the highest price paid for a cow was $2,600. Forty-four females averaged $798,52 and 15 males, $779,32.

The automobile is to be turned to practical account by the farmers of Kent, England. Every year a large part of the fruit crop rots from lack of transportation, the railways not being able to meet the emergency, and the plan is for the farmers next year to take things in their own hands, starting motor cars around the orchards during the evening and night and bringing the day's picking to London by the early morning.

W. C. Sebree owns a sheep that has a record for productiveness. Last March she gave birth to a lamb, raised it, and on July 20th became the mother of lamb No. 2. Mr. Sebree says he sold the first lamb for $5 and has the second one is spry and healthy he expects, in due time, to realize as much for it. The value of such a productive animal is considerable and she is, accordingly, highly prized by Mr. Sebree but he says that he has yet to learn of a parallel case.—Ghent Herald.

Mr. L. C. Grimes, one of our staid and sturdy farmers, whose prophecies concerning crop and climatic conditions, familiar to a number of our readers because of their frequency and correctness, now predicts that the wheat crop next year will be very poor in Kentucky, and advises our tillers of the soil against preparing for a large acreage. He bases his forecast on the short crop of wild fruits and nuts this season, stating that when this is the case a poor wheat crop invariably follows.—Pendletonian.

One of the most striking features of the tobacco breaks now a day is the comparatively small number of buyers as contrasted with a decade ago. The bulk of the offerings fall into a few hands, and the monotone of the auctioneer as he daily repeats the same names shows how few strings he has now to his bow. As matters are tending, and have been, for some time past, the circle of buyers appears to be narrowing, and many of the old timers whose presence on the breaks forms the sole connecting links with the past, feel, and have the air of men who have realized the fact that they "linger superfluous on the stage" like Shakespeare's old actor who persisted in hanging around the green room because he could not tear himself a way.—The Weed.

The peach crop in this section is something enormous this year, being one of the largest ever known. This country is well adapted for fruit growing and which proves a profitable business especially in a good season. Mountain View Fruit Farm near Tazewell, is one of the largest in this section. This is owned by Mr. Albert Woolum, who came from the East a few years ago and purchased the tract of land where he now has his farm. Mr. Woolum put out 5,000 peach trees, and the first year's crop, he says, while here one day last week, more than paid him out. This year, he says, each tree will average two bushels and he will receive for his crop from $7,000 to $10,000. Mr. Woolum ships fruit to Louisville, Knoxville, Cincinnati and many other points.—Middlesboro News.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 29, 1900. NO. 45

A FULL attendance of the candidates for Congress is expected at the fair this week, where they will be glad to have the weary voter give them audience.

DON'T say because a candidate for any office is wealthy, "oh, he can't be beaten—he's got too much money." Wealth ought to cut no figure in the selection of officers in this country.

Two of the candidates for Congress in this district, Berry and Gooch, took in the Lawrenceburg fair, last week, making it a more interesting occasion to the boys from this side of the creek.

THE General Assembly is now in special session. Whatever it does should be done without delay. The present election law is the only subject it can consider, and the deliberations along that line should be brief and descisive.

THE farmers in this county smile as they look out over their fields of fine corn and immense tobacco, but they are not so ungrateful as to give the government at Washington the credit for the gratifying crop prospects.

NEXT Saturday the Owen county Democrats will hold a primary election to nominate candidates for the several county offices to be filled at the election in November, 1901, over one year hence. There is a large number of candidaets in the field, and a warm party campaign is drawing to a close.

THERE appears to be some disagreement among Power's attorneys on the question as to how the $4,500 contributed for his defense shall be divided. It is said that two or three of the attorneys want to hog the whole amount, against which action the lesser lights of the defendant's aggregation of legal advisors are protesting most vigorously.

WESTOVER and Rhinock weighed in last week as candidates before the Congressional primary to be held in this district on the 22d prox., by sending to chairman Lassing their checks for $750, the amount assessed against each candidate. This action on the part of these two candidates disposes of the claim being made by some that they would withdraw before the day of the primary election.

PORTER, the straight Republican who was a juror in the Powers case at Georgetown, was approached with a view of getting him to say that it was through fear that he consented to the verdict fixing Power's punishment at confinement for life in the penitentiary, but that not being true, he would not say it was, and adheres to his first statement that Power's own testimony satisfied him that he was guilty.

THE terrible work of the Akron, Ohio, mob last week, emphasizes the fact that human nature is the same everywhere, and those in the north who have been pointing the finger of scorn at Kentucky and other States because of the lawless acts of some of their citizens, can now, to be consistent, direct some of their denunciation at people nearer home, of whom the spirit of anti-civilization has acquired control.

JUDGE WESTOVER made a swing around the circle in this county, the latter part of last week, looking after his political fencing. A close canvass appears to be to the liking of each of the candidates. This is the first time in the history of the district that a primary election was called for nominating a candidate, and, as a result the masses are getting to see more of the gentlemen who desire to represent them in the National Congress.

SENATOR GOEBEL was shot down from ambush, on the capitol grounds in Frankfort, January 30, 1900, just seven months ago to-morrow, and during all that time an earnest effort has been prosecuted trying to run to earth the foul assassin, and although the Republicans in their conventions have repeatedly denounced the assassination, never a move have they made to assist in bringing to the bar of justice the perpetrator of a crime which they denounced in many conventions. In many cases actions speak louder than words.

THE negro whose fiendish acts caused the loss of several lives and the destruction of a large amount of property at Akron, Ohio, last week, is now serving a life sentence in the penitentiary at Columbus. He was taken back to Akron, very quietly, last Friday, and before his return to that city was generally known he was tried, given a life sentence and started on his way to the pen. It was a light sentence, considering the enormity of the offense.

THE trial of Caleb Powers as an accessory to the murder of Senator Goebel, developed the fact that the editors of some of the small fry journals in this part of the country have missed their calling—that they are eminent criminal lawyers. Some who are not possessed of legal ability sufficient to attempt to defend a neighbor should he be charged with a breach of the peace, are proclaiming that Judge Cantrill did not give to the jury the law in the case. The criticisms which these self-constituted attorneys are indulging in serve as an expose of their presumptuous natures.

THE candidates for Congress understand the value of the RECORDER in presenting their literature to Boone county people.

GOV. BECKHAM'S message to the legislature is brief. It appears in another column.

[Pendletonian.]

After a desperate chase lasting several hours, Sheriff Hume and posse, including Marshal McMath, Deputy Sheriff Carnes, Jailer Colvin, Wm. Bishop, Al Gribble, Harry Galloway, Bill Gifford, Lou Rust and others, Wm. Stephenson and Wm. Moore, the two boon companions who a few weeks ago figured in a difficulty with the negro Bob Huey, were arrested in a woodland on Lightfoot's Fork, Tuesday just before noon, and are charged with horse stealing. The theft was committed on Saturday night last from the farm of Mr. Elisiah Hudson, near Walton, Boone county. A horse answering the description of this one was sold in Mt. Olivet Monday by Stephenson and Moore, at $65. They purchased another horse for $20, and were enroute to their home in this county, when the officers here received a telegram authorizing the arrest. The boys evidently scented the trouble and took to the woods, where they were later taken captive, and now languish in our county jail to await trial.

Another youth, who doesn't appear to be more than twelve or fourteen years of age, assuming the name of Frank Jones alias Walter Johnson, was also taken into custody Tuesday afternoon a few miles below Falmouth by Marshal McMath and Mr. H. T. Drake. When arrested the boy was riding a horse he had taken from Mr. Drake's stable near Antioch Mills. The boy's only excuse for the theft was that he was on his way to see his sick brother in Covington and wanted to hurry on his way.

The three will probably have their examining trials Friday, at which time Stephenson is also to answer to the charge of malicious shooting and carrying concealed a deadly weapon.

Jailer Colvin went to Mt. Olivet yesterday and returned to Falmouth last night with the stolen horse, which has been identified by the owner, Mr. Hudson, who is now here.

A minister down in Missouri found his people too poor to purchase hymn books, says an exchange and being offered the same book free by a patent medicine house provided they be allowed to insert their advertisement, ordered three dozen for the congregation. He was elated upon receiving them to find no ad in the same. The next Sunday he distributed the books, telling the people of his good fortune, and requested that they sing page 130. His chagrin may be imagined when they sang as follows: "Hark the heavenly angels sing, Johnson's pills are just the thing, the angeas voices meek and mild—two for 1mn and one for child."—Exchange.

A northwest railway official says farmers are holding their grain for higher prices. Crops have not begun to move, but early damage will not curtail tonnage more than 25 per cent below that of 1899. Harvesting is general and threshing shows small grain yielding more than expected.

MISSOURI LETTER.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 24, 1900.
To the Editor of the Recorder:

Dear Sir:—I recently disposed of my interest in Springfield property and moved to this city. I attended the Modern Woodmen's Annual Convention at Sedalia on my way here. Sedalia is a desolate prairie town of about 15,000. It is at the crossing of the Mo. P. & M. K. and T. Railroads—a railroad town pure and simple. She has scarcely held her own the past 17 years. It gets its main support from railroad business, shops and home of the employees. If left to judge by the present crop prospect, I wouldn't select that locality as a prosperous farming district; the same can be truthfully said of all lands near the railroad, until you reach Warrensburg. Some few patches of good land, but so little of it. The soil is inferior and drouthy—in fact, the driest place I found in 200 miles travel. From Warrensburg on to Kansas City the corn crop is excellent, especially in the vicinity of Pleasant Hill, where I spent four days with Simeon Ryle. He has a nice little home, about 8 acres in berries, vegetables and fruit. He did well the past season with berries, but it is not a good market for fruit and vegetables, owing to overproduction and distance from any large city. Kansas City is the nearest large market, 31 miles.

The land around Pleasant Hill is very rich and productive. All cereals, fruit and vegetables, grow in abundance. The land is rolling and reminds one much of the Gunpowder hills of Kentucky. I saw the best corn, and some of the finest stock, especially cattle, of any place in this State. Even tobacco grows and flourishes, but not raised extensively. The farms are well improved, good houses and barns and their owners seem in easy circumstances. The town claims 3,000 people, but I would have to see them rounded up before counting. It is scattered out over 500 acres of ground. [illegible] to each one owning his own vine and fig tree, they have big gardens and a small farm besides. Each house owner has from a half to 4 acres of ground. Still there is but little enterprise shown by the people. No water, gas or electric company, nor street cars. The city is loaded down with old railroad bonds, $45,000, and the county (Cass) has $65,000 more: While the bonded indebtedness was compromised, they have nothing to pay them off, and can barely pay the interest.

Kansas City is a thrifty and growing city, and is truly the gateway to the South and West. It will make a large place.

I visited Lou Ryle several days. I had not met him for 21 years. It had been 28 years since I saw Sim. Lou carries his age well while Sim has broken considerably.

There is considerable building going on here, and through the assistance and intercessions of friends I soon found employment at pipe fitting. J. L. CONNLEY.

Iowa's Corn Crop.

Director Sage, of the Iowa division of the United States Department of Agriculture, has returned to Des Moines after an extended tour over Iowa inspecting the crop conditions. The director says that it is impossible to appreciate the immensity of Iowa's corn crop. Such favorable conditions have not prevailed for years and the corn in all parts of the State is well along. Nothing save an unseasonable frost could do any injury now. Most of the crop will be ready to cut by the first of September, and it is rare that damaging frosts occur in August; in fact, the director says, there has been only one in the last twenty-five years. The heavy rains of the past two weeks, which broke the threatening drouth, did little damage to standing corn save in a few widely scattered places, and in no section of the State is the damage very serious.—Minneapolis Journal.

Story of a Slave.

To be bound hand and foot for years by the chains of disease is the worst form of slavery. Geo. D. Williams, of Manchester, Mich., says: "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This supreme remedy for female diseases quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, backache, fainting and dizzy spells. It is a godsend to weak, sickly, run-down people. Cure guaranteed. Only 50c. Sold by McKim, Burlington, Oelsner, Florence, Crouch, Union.

A Rattlesnake in the Kitchen.

[Monticello Record.]

A very large rattlesnake was killed at A. T. Washam's last Wednesday night. Lettie Washam, after coming home from church, when she opened the kitchen door with a lamp in her hand, found a very large rattlesnake trying to swallow a rat it had in its mouth. After taking the rat to a hole behind the cupboard, it returned to fight. John Duncan striking at the snake, it jumped at him. It jumped within five or six inches of his mouth; then Mr. Washam came with a hoe and killed it. It had ten rattlers and a button.

[Versailles Sun.]

Parthenia Bragg, colored, who claimed to be 102 years old, died recently near Ft. Spring, 6 miles east of Versailles. "Aunt Perfeena," as she was called, was born in Virginia, and professed to have known Gen. Washington and Daniel Boone in her childhood and to have played with Henry Clay many a time when he "wuz a little bit uv a boy." She was married four times, and left children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren to a very large number. Her oldest daughter is over 80 years old. Parthenia had been without teeth for 25 years, but easily masticated any kind of food with her gums, which were as hard as stone. Her physical strength, up until four or five years ago, was phenomenal, it being not uncommon for her to walk to and from Lexington, which is six miles from her home.

Bob Breckinridge's "Church."

"For the first time in the history of Lexington a white people's church is to be sold under foreclosure of mortgage, said a well-known citizen to the Leader, referring to the advertised sale of St. John's Episcopal church. "There seems to be an oversupply of churches. Many persons wonder who will bid in a church and what could be done with it." "I recall to mind," said he, "that the Hon. Robert J. Breckinridge, of Danville, Attorney General of Kentucky, bought a Methodist church in that city under similar circumstances, and built partitions in it, making parlor, bedrooms, library, kitchen, etc., all well built. It is now a comfortable house without stairs. He has left the steeple as it was, and claims he goes to church every day he is in Danville. Anyone can do the same in Lexington."

IT is claimed that the Republican as well as the Democratic poll of Indiana, made in the last few weeks, shows that State to be Democratic about 20,000. The majority at the close of the polls in November is the one that will count; but if the Democrats have that much advantage in the beginning of the campaign, it will not produce that uncomfortable feeling on their part that the other fellows will experience.

FIRST GUN FIRED

In Kenton County by Mayor Rhinock, Who Denies That He Was Ever an Employe of the Standard Oil Company.

[Ky. Post of Aug. 25, 1900.]

The opening gun of the Democratic congressional fight in Kenton county was fired in Central Covington Friday, when ex-Mayor Joseph L. Rhinock in a speech gave his views of the national and local politics. For several weeks Berry, Gooch, Westover and Rhinock have been giving each other hot-shot in great shape, much to the amusement of the people.

A Bryan and Stevenson Club was organized in Central Covington Friday night, and Rhinock was the principal orator. Referring to Berry he said:

"Do you want a man in Congress who will pose as a Democrat and yet vote with a Republican majority in payment for favor at the hands of a Republican President, or do you want a man whose views will accord with those of the Democratic Administration, whose humble efforts will be given to assist in the gigantic work which awaits President Bryan, of bringing this Nation back to the faith of our fathers?

"Now, my friends, I have but one question to ask you on this point. You have heard my declaration, what would you think of me if I should go to Washington as your Congressman and there, after my assurance to you, should trade my Democratic vote for Republican appointments? But the question is unnecessary; in the first place I would have too high a regard for the obligations of my office to do that, and in the second place, there is not going to be any Republican Administration at Washington next year.

"When I talk about the man in Washington who is a traitor to Democracy, you know I am talking about Mr. Berry, and you know I am telling the truth about him. It is the same Mr. Berry who has fooled and betrayed the Democracy from the time in 1872 when, to get Republican votes, he declared the Democratic Party was dead. He constituted himself a Coroner for Democracy then. (Laughter.) He has been trying ever since to kill the party, and make his word good, and you can see the result. Berry first betrayed Goebel in the hope of defeating him for the nomination for Governor, and after Goebel was the Democratic nominee Berry fought the Democratic ticket.

"You know Goebel got about 7,000 majority in this district, with Berry fighting him. I hope I will do as well. I am much encouraged by the fact that Berry is opposed to my nomination and election. I say that Mr. Berry is no Democrat, and I am prepared to prove it. Mr. Berry is running around the district saying: 'Why, Joe Rhinock is the Standard Oil candidate. He is employed by the Standard Oil Company.' Now, that might be true, but it isn't. I never owned one cent's worth of stock in that company. For many years I was gauger and inspector of oils for the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce. I was appointed to that office by the Directors of the Chamber. In my official capacity I did work for the Standard Oil Company, just as I did for many other mercantile establishments in the bottoms. That is the whole of my connection with the Standard Oil Company.

"If there is anything else any other gentleman who is a candidate in this contest has to say about me I shall be glad to hear it and meet it. I shall not lie about anything in this canvass, and I shall do my own talking. I shall not engage any orators to make my speeches, nor shall I buy any non-union newspapers to air my views. Gentlemen a candidate in this county has adopted as his organ an alleged weekly newspaper which has no journalistic standing or creditability. I am being assailed through the columns of this bought-up-sheet, which lived for the soul purpose of slandering our dead Governor and friend, William Goebel. Wm. Goebel was my warm personal and political friend, as you know. I appointed him to the only appointive office he ever filled, that of President of the Library Trustees, and the last act he introduced in the Senate was one permitting the city of Covington to accept a donation of $40,000 for library purposes, which I obtained from Mr. Andrew Carnegie."

[Cincinnati Enquirer of Aug. 26, 1900.]

Said a well-posted Sixth District (Kentucky) Democrat yesterday: "I firmly believe Rhinock will capture the nomination for Congress on the 22d day of September. Here are my reasons for believing it. The indications are that he will get in Kenton county between 3,500 and 4,000 votes, and every politician whom I have conversed with from Campbell county says that the fight over there is strictly between Berry and Rhinock, with the indications that Rhinock will carry the county. You can readily see that these two counties will give him between 5,000 and 6,000 votes. The other candidate from Kenton county, having bought up and circulated in his interest a non-union rat paper, the paper that maligned and slandered the martyred Governor Goebel, the proprietor at present being under indictment in the Kenton Circuit Court for publishing a slanderous and libelous article concerning Goebel, has destroyed any chance he ever did have. This has resulted in making Rhinock hundreds of votes. Rhinock has conducted his campaign in a clean, gentlemanly manner, making his fight wholly against Berry, who, he says, the Democracy cannot nominate because of his treachery to the Democratic party, which has four times honored him with a seat in Congress. It is my opinion that Rhinock will get a good vote in the other counties, and with the vote out there divided between four candidates, and Rhinock's big Kenton county vote, I cannot, for the life of me, see how he can lose."

REPUBLICAN CONVERTS.

Following are the names of a few of the most prominent Republicans who have in the past few weeks declared for Bryan:

Ex-Congressman and ex-Governor George Boutwell, of Massachusetts. Governor Boutwell has been a leading Republican for forty-five years.

United States Senator G. C. Wellington, of Maryland.

Congressman Henry U. Johnson, of Richmond, Indiana.

Gen. William Birney, of Washington.—Maj. General in the Union and a life long Republican.

P. Tecumseh Sherman, son of the late Gen. W. T. Sherman.

Ex-Lieutenant Governor Felt, of Kansas.

Ex-United States Senator J. E. Henderson, of Missouri.

Henry F. Keenan, author of the "Money Makers," "Trojan," and many other works.

President Brown, of the Northern Indiana College.

Dr. W. A. Crowfutt, who cast his first vote for Lincoln and stumped Maryland for McKinley in 1896.

Besides these—all Republicans to the manor born—a host of lesser lights are turning from McKinley to Bryan. Beyond all doubt Democratic chances are daily brightening.

A Minster's Good Work.

"I had a severe attack of bilious colic, got a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, took two doses and was entirely cured," says Rev. A. A. Power, of Emporia, Kan. "My neighbor across the street was sick for over a week, had two or three bottles of medicine from the doctor. He used them for three or four days without any relief, then called in another doctor who treated him for some days and gave him no relief, so discharged him. I went over to see him the next morning. He said his bowels were in a terrible fix, that they had been running off so long that it was almost bloody flux. I asked him if he had tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and he said 'No.' I went home and brought him my bottle and gave him one dose; told him to take another dose in fifteen or twenty minutes if he did not find relief, but he took no more and was entirely cured." IF each of the candidates for the Democratic nomination receives at the primary election as many votes as he is claiming, about 50,000 votes will be polled in this district.

A GLORIOUS FUTURE.

Sermon Suggested by His Contact with Imperial Splendors of Europe—The Royal House of Jesus.

In this discourse Dr. Talmage, who, during his journey homeward, has seen much of royal and imperial splendors in passing through the capitals of Europe, shows that there is no higher dignity nor more illustrious station than those which the Christian has as a child of God; text, Judges 8:18: "Each one resembled the children of a king."

Zebah and Zalmunna had been off to battle, and when they came back they were asked what kind of people they had seen. They answered that the people had a royal resemblance. "Each one resembled the children of a king." That description of people is not extinct. There are still many who have this appearance. Indeed, they are the sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty. Though now in exile, they shall yet come to their thrones. There are family names that stand for wealth or patriotism or intelligence. The name of Washington among us will always represent patriotism. The family of the Medici stood as the representative of letters. The family of the Rothschilds is significant of wealth, the loss of $40,000,000 in 1848 putting them to no inconvenience, and within a few years they have loaned Russia $12,000,000, Naples $25,000,000, Austria $40,000,000 and England $200,000,000, and the stroke of their pen on the counting-room desk shakes everything from the Irish sea to the Danube. They open their hand and there is war; they shut it and there is peace. The Romanoffs of Russia, the Hohenzollerns of Germany, the Bourbons of France, the Stuarts and Guelphs of Great Britain, are houses whose names are intertwined with the history of their respective nations symbolic of imperial authority.

But I preach of a family more potential, more rich and more extensive—the royal house of Jesus, of whom the whole family in Heaven and on earth is named. We are blood relations by the relationship of the cross; all of us are children of the King.

First, I speak of our family name. When we see a descendant of some one greatly celebrated in the last century, we look at him with profound interest. To have had conquerors, kings or princes in the ancestral line gives luster to the family name. In one line was a King and a Conqueror. The Star of the East with baton of light woke up the eternal orchestra that made music at His birth. From thence He started forth to conquer all nations, not by trampling them down, but by lifting them up. St. John saw Him on a white horse. When He returns, He will not bring the nations chained to His wheel or in iron cages, but I hear the strike of the hoofs of the snow white cavalcade that brings them to the gates in triumph.

Our family name takes luster from the star that heralded Him and the spear that pierced Him and the crown that was given Him. It gathers fragrance from the frankincense brought to His cradle and the lilies that flung their sweetness into His sermons and the box of alabaster that broke at His feet. The Comforter at Bethany. The Resurrector at Nain. The supernatural Oculist at Bethsaida. The Saviour of one world and the chief joy of another. The storm His frown. The sunlight His smile. The spring morning His breath. The earthquake the stamp of His foot. The thunder the whisper of His voice. The ocean a drop on the tip of his finger. Heaven a sparkle on the bosom of His love. Eternity the twinkling of His eye. The universe the flying dust of His chariot wheels. Able to heal a heartbreak or hush a tempest or drown a world or flood immensity with His glory. What other family name could ever boast of such an illustrious parentage?

Henceforth swing out the coat of arms! Great families wear their coat of arms on the dress, or on the door of the coach, or on the helmet when they go out to battle, or on flags and ensigns. The heraldic sign is sometimes a lion or a dragon or an eagle. Our coat of arms, worn right over the heart, hereafter shall be a cross, a lamb standing against it and a dove flying over it. Grandest of all escutcheons! In every battle I must have it blazing on my flag—the dove, the cross, the lamb, and when I fall wrap me in that good old Christian flag, so that the family coat of arms shall be right over my breast, that all the world may see that I looked to the Dove of the Spirit and clung to the Cross and depended upon the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world.

Ashamed of Jesus, that dear friend,
On whom my hopes of life depend:
No! When I blush, be this my shame—
That I no more revere His name.

Next, I speak of the family sorrows. If trouble come to one member of the family, all feel it. It is the custom, after the body is lowered into the grave, for all the relatives to come to the verge of the grave and look down into it. First those nearest the departed come, then those next of kin, until they have all looked into the grave. So, when trouble and grief go down through the heart of one member of the family, they go down through them all. The sadness of one is the sadness of all. A company of persons join hands around an electric battery; the two persons at the ends of the line touch the battery, and all the circle feels the shock. Thus, by reason of the filial, maternal and paternal relations of life, we stand so close together that when trouble sets its battery all feel the thrill of distress. In the great Christian family the sorrow of one ought to be the sorrow of all. Is one persecuted? All are persecuted. Does one suffer loss? We all suffer loss. Is one bereaved? We are all bereaved.

Their streaming eyes together flow
For human guilt and mortal woe.

If you rejoice at another's misfortune you are not one of the sheep, but one of the goats, and the vulture of sin hath alighted on your soul and not the Dove of the Spirit.

Next, I notice the family property. After a man of large estate dies, the relatives assemble to hear the will read. So much of the property is willed to his sons and so much to his daughters, and so much to benevolent societies. Our Lord Jesus hath died, and we are assembled to-day to hear the will read. He says: "My peace I give unto you." Through His apostles He says: "All things are yours." What, everything? Yes, everything! This world and the next. In distinguished families there are old pictures hanging on the wall. They are called the "heirlooms" of the estate. They are very old, and have come down from generation to generation. So I look upon all the beauties of the natural world as the heirlooms of our royal family. The morning breaks from the east. The mists travel up, hill above hill, mountain above mountain, until sky lost. The forests are full of chirp and buzz and song. Tree's leaf and bird's wing flutter with gladness. Honey makers in the log and beak against the bark, and squirrels chattering on the rail, and the call of the hawk out of a clear sky make you feel glad. The sun, which kindles conflagrations among the castles of cloud and sets minaret and dome aflame, stoops to paint the lily white and the buttercup yellow and the forget-me-not blue. What can resist the sun? Light for the voyager over the deep! Light for the shepherd guarding the flocks afield! Light for the poor who have no lamps to burn! Light for the downcast and lowly! Light for aching eyes and burning brain and wasted captive! Light for the smooth brow of childhood and for the dim vision of the octogenarian! Light for queen's coronet and for sewing girl's needle! Let there be light! Whose morning is this? My morning. Your morning. Our Father gave us the picture and hung it on the sky in loops of fire. It is the heirloom of our family. And so is the night. It is the full moon. The mists from shore to shore gleam like shattered mirrors, and the ocean, under her glance, comes up with great tides, panting upon the beach, mingling, as it were, foam and fire. The poor man blesses God for throwing such a cheap light through the broken window pane into his cabin, and to the sick it seems a light from the other shore which bounds this great deep of human pain and woe. If the sun seem like a song full and poured from brazen instruments that fill Heaven and earth with great harmonies, the moon is plaintive and mild, standing beneath the throne of God, sending up her soft, sweet voice of praise, while the stars listen and the sea. No mother ever more sweetly guarded the sick cradle than all night long this pale watcher of the sky bends over the weary, heart sick, slumbering earth. Whose is this black framed, black tasseled picture of the night? It is the heirloom of our family. Ours the grandeur of the spring, the crystals of the snow, the coral of the beach, the odors of the garden, the harmonies of the air.

You cannot see a large estate in one morning. You must take several walks around it. The family property of this royal house of Jesus is so great that we must take several walks to get any idea of its extent. Let the first walk be around this earth. All these valleys, the harvests that wave in them and the cattle that pasture them—all these mountains and the precious things hidden beneath them and the crown of glacier they cast at the feet of the Alpine hurricane—all these lakes, these islands, these continents, are ours. In the second walk go among the street lamps of Heaven and see stretching off on every side a wilderness of worlds. For us they shine. For us they sang at a Saviour's nativity. For us they will wheel into line and with their flaming torches add to the splendor of our triumph on the day for which all other days were made. In the third walk go around the eternal city. As we come near it, hark to the rush of its chariots and the wedding peal of its great towers. The bell of Heaven has struck 12. It is high noon. We look off upon the chaplets which never fade, the eyes that never weep, the temples that never close, the loved ones that never part, the procession that never halts, the trees that never wither, the walls that never can be captured, the sun that never sets, until we can no longer gaze, and we hide our eyes and exclaim: "Eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him!" As these tides of glory rise we have to retreat and hold fast lest we be swept off and drowned in the emotions of gladness and thanksgiving and triumph.

What think you of the family property? It is considered an honor to marry into a family where there is great wealth. The Lord, the Bridegroom of earth and Heaven, offers you His heart and His hand, saying in the words of the Canticles: "Rise up, my love, my fair one, and come away." And once having put on thy hand the signet ring of His love, you will be endowed with all the wealth of earth and all the honors of Heaven.

Almost every family looks back to a homestead—some country place where you grew up. You sat on the doorsill. You heard the footsteps of the rain on the garret roof. You swung on the gate. You ransacked the barn. You waded into the brook. You thrashed the orchard for apples and the neighboring woods for nuts, and everything around the old homestead is of interest to you. I tell you of the old homestead of eternity. "In my Father's house are many mansions." When we talk of mansions we think of Chatsworth and its park nine miles in circumference and its conservatory that astonishes the world, its galleries of art that contain the triumphs of Chantrey, Canova and Thorwaldsen, of the kings and queens who have walked its stately halls, or, flying over the heather, have hunted the grouse. But all the dwelling places of dukes and princes and queens are as nothing to the family mansion that is already awaiting our arrival. The hand of the Lord Jesus lifted the pillars and swung the doors and planted the parks. Angels walk there and the good of all ages. The poorest man in that house is a millionaire, and the lowest a king, and the tamest word he speaks is an anthem and the shortest life an eternity.

It took a Paxton to build for Chatsworth a covering for the wonderful flower, Victoria Regia, five feet in diameter. But our lily of the valley shall need no shelter from the blast, and in the open gardens of God shall put forth its full bloom, and all Heaven shall come to look at it, and its aroma shall be as though the cherubim had swung before the throne a thousand censers. I have not seen it yet. I am in a foreign land. But my Father is waiting for me to come home. I have brothers and sisters there. In the Bible I have letters from there, telling me what a fine place it is. It matters not much to me whether I am rich or poor, or whether the world hates me or loves me, or whether I go by land or by sea, if only I may lift my eyes at last on the family mansion. It is not a frail house, built in a month, soon to crumble, but an old mansion, which is as firm as the day it was built. Its walls are covered with the ivy of many ages, and the urns at the gateway are alhoom with the century plants of eternity. The queen of Sheba hath walked its halls, and Esther and Marie Antoinette and Lady Huntingdon and Cecil and Jeremy Taylor and Samuel Rutherford and John Milton and the widow who gave two mites and the poor men from the hospital—these last two perhaps outshining all the kings and queens of eternity.

A family mansion means reunion. Some of your families are very much scattered. The children married and went off to St. Louis or Chicago or Charleston. But perhaps once a year you come together at the old place. How you walk up the old piazza that has been silent for years. Father and mother do not play on it. How you bring out the old relic and rummage the garret and open old scrapbooks and shout and laugh and cry and talk over old times, and though you may be 45 years of age, act as though you were 16. Yet soon it is good-by at the car window and good-by at the steamboat wharf. But how will we act at the reunion in the old family mansion of Heaven? It is a good while since you parted at the door of the grave. There will be Grace and Mary and Martha and Charlie and Lizzie and all the darlings of your household, not pale and sick and gasping for breath, as when you saw them last, but their eyes bright with the luster of Heaven and their cheeks roseate with the flush of celestial summer.

What clasping of hands! What embracings! What coming together of lip to lip! What tears of joy! You say: "I thought there were no tears in Heaven." There must be, for the Bible says that "God shall wipe them away," and if there were no tears there how could He wipe them away? They cannot be tears of grief or tears of disappointment, they must be tears of gladness. Christ will come and say: "What, child of Heaven, is it too much for thee? Dost thou break down under the gladness of this reunion? Then I will help thee." And with His one arm around us and the other arm around our loved ones He shall hold us up in the eternal jubilee.

While I speak some of you with broken hearts can hardly hold your peace. You feel as if you would speak out and say: "Oh, blessed day, speed on! Toward thee I press with blistered feet over the desert way. My eyes fail for their weeping. I faint from listening for feet that will not come and the sound of voices that will not speak. Speed on, oh day of reunion! And then, Lord Jesus, be not angry with me if after I have kissed thy blessed feet I turn around to gather up the long lost treasures of my heart. Oh, be not angry with me. One look at thee were Heaven. But all these reunions are Heaven encircling Heaven. Heaven overtopping Heaven, Heaven commingling with Heaven."

I was at Mount Vernon and went into the dining-room in which our first president entertained the prominent men of this and other lands. It was a very interesting spot. But, oh, the banquet hall of the family mansion of which I speak! Spread the table, spread it wide, for a great multitude are to sit at it. From the tree by the river gather the 12 manner of fruits for that table. Take the clusters from the heavenly vineyards and press them into the golden tankards for that table. On baskets carry in the bread of which if man eat he shall never hunger. Take all the shot-torn flags of earthly conquest and intwine them among the arches. Let David come with his harp and Gabriel with his trumpet and Miriam with the timbrel, for the prodigals are at home, and the captives are free, and the Father hath invited the mighty of Heaven and the redeemed of earth to come and dine!

THE OUTLOOK IS BRIGHT.

With Such a Leader as Bryan, Democratic Victory Is Almost Assured.

Mr. Bryan's speech of acceptance at Indianapolis is without doubt the political event of paramount importance in the present campaign. Mr. Bryan received at the hands of the democratic party the nomination for the presidency. A partisan utterance upon this occasion would have been pardoned—nay, more, was even expected by the country at large. Tradition and precedent exist to justify a candidate in such a course. He of Canton—Mark Hanna's man—who was recently notified of a nomination, took occasion to plead for the principles of a party and in the cause of an administration. In multifarious terms he told what "we" had done, and fairly reveled in the deeds of "us." The republican party was defended—even apologized for. And William McKinley accepted at the hands of those who bore the stamp of the republican party the nomination for the presidency of the United States. Mr. McKinley's speech of acceptance will go down in history as the statement of a party chief to his party followers. But how different is the tone and tenor of Mr. Bryan's Indianapolis address. McKinley spoke to a party—Bryan to a nation; McKinley plead the cause of an administration—Bryan the cause of a people. McKinley defended the principles of a party; Bryan spoke in defense of the principles that are at the foundation of free government; McKinley spoke as a candidate, but Mr. Bryan spoke as an American citizen.

In the face of existing circumstances

THE THREE REPUBLICAN GRACES—PUTTY, BOODLE AND TEETH.

it is a fact of peculiar significance that Mr. Bryan could reply to the notification committee in a speech bearing as little trace of partisan politics as the constitution of the United States or the declaration of independence. This does not indicate that Mr. Bryan is not a good democrat, but rather that the democratic party is contending not so much for certain theories of administration in a free government as for free government itself. Hence it is that, fighting for the very existence of the republics, the position of the patriotic citizen who stands for free government and the position of the democratic party becomes identical. Mr. Bryan was great enough to recognize this. Mr. Bryan's speech was remarkable on account of the things he said. Mr. McKinley's Canton speech was chiefly remarkable on account of the things he did not say. The Canton speech abounds in vague intimations and promises. It does not hold out to the Filipinos the faintest hope either of independence on the one hand or of the freedom and rights of American citizenship on the other.

The voter has only to read so much of Mr. McKinley's speech as relates to this subject in order to find this statement to be correct. He will find something about giving to the Filipinos as much self-government as they are fit for—as though the right of people 10,000 miles away to self-government was not a God-given right, but a right to be granted by some authority in Washington. But he will find not the faintest whisper of such a thing as independence for a people over whom we have no authority except such as Spain somehow is supposed to have had a right to give us.

In Mr. Bryan's speech, however, the voter may find a pledge that if he is elected he will convene congress at the earliest moment to declare the nation's purpose:

"First. To establish a stable form of government in the Philippine islands, just as we are now establishing a stable form of government in Cuba.

"Second. To give independence to the Filipinos, just as we have promised to give Independence to the Cubans.

"Third. To protect the Filipinos from outside interference while they work out their own destiny, just as we have protected the republics of Central and South America and are by the Monroe doctrine pledged to protect Cuba."

This is a sufficiently clear and succinct statement of the democratic position. Of its correctness, of course, there can be no doubt.

This, with what McKinley says, and with what he significantly omits to say, sufficiently defines the issue as to the Philippines.

The broader issue of imperialism, which includes that of the Philippines, may be stated thus:

Mr. Bryan stands upon the doctrine of the declaration of independence, that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.

Mr. McKinley stands for the utter repudintion of that doctrine and for "the doctrine of the thrones, that man is too ignorant to govern himself," and must be subject to those who rule by superior might and divine right.

Mr. Bryan upon leaving Indianapolis went to Chicago, where he has been in conference with the leaders of the party at headquarters. To say that the outlook for the democratic party at the present time is hopeful would be putting it mildly. Mr. Bryan's speech seems to have put a new aspect upon the campaign. Telegrams of congratulation from republicans and gold democrats have been liberally pouring in upon Mr. Bryan and the executive committee. Influential papers that have been hesitating as to their policy, upon receiving Mr. Bryan's speech openly indorse the candidacy. The converts of a week would fill a column. When such conservative papers as the Springfield Republican become enthusiastic for the success of the party; when such papers as the Boston Post, the New York World and the Baltimore Sun, all of which supported McKinley in '96, openly indorse Bryan, the outlook must be considered bright.

But these papers have not been the only additions to the force of the militant democracy. Wherever large bodies of men have gathered during the past month the events have been productive of much encouragement to the democracy.

The dissolution of the gold democracy at a regular meeting, and the quick assimilation of all its influential members by the regular party marked the end of the truancy of 1896. When the Ohio Bar association met in yearly convention a few weeks later and the president, Judge A. P. Laubie, a lifelong republican, denounced McKinley's policy of imperialism, he found no dissenters, though fully half the members were republicans.

Quickly following this, Dr. Silas C. Swallow, candidate for president of the United Christian party, addressing his followers in a convention said: "If we must choose between the two candidates of the old parties, I must say that I should support a man who clings to principles and adheres to what he believes to be right rather than the man whom the people never knew where to find on any vital issue." According to the press reports, this statement was received with remarkable expressions of approval. During the same week Father Heidman, a prominent Catholic clergyman of Chicago, in an address before the German Veteran league brought the entire audience to its feet in a spontaneous expression of approval when he scored the administration's policy in the Philippines and Porto Rico.

In Ohio the defection from republican ranks has been especially marked. The Germans who gave McKinley such strong support in 1896 are coming over in droves to Bryan. Besides this Frank S. Monnett and Cleveland's former mayor, Robert McKisson, men with enormous personal followings, are fighting Mark Hanna tooth and nail. Then, too, that vast independent element headed by Jones, of Toledo, are practically a unit for Bryan this year. It will be remembered that Jones polled 120,000 votes when he ran for governor last year.

—The great argument the democrats have to withstand in this campaign is the hard cash argument—the money contributed by the trusts as the price of republican protection and the levies on officeholders. Even the whisky and beer venders in far-away Manila are expected to contribute to Hanna's campaign chest.—Pittsburgh Post.

—Between the democratic belief that imperialism is the issue and the republican assertion that money is paramount the trusts are quite happy. But there is time enough to make them miserable yet, you bet!—N. Y. World.

SNAKES AS COMPANIONS.

Prof. Percy Selous Sacrificed His Wife and Children for the Deadly Reptiles.

For the companionship of snakes, Prof. Percy Selous sacrificed wife, children and the society of his species. Death was the penalty of his infatuation. His favorite serpent avenged mankind for the savant's indifference by fastening its fangs in his hand and destroying his life with the venom that he had braved for years.

Not even in the throes of death did the infatuation weaken. The viper that had poisoned him was still nearer to his heart than any other living thing, and his last words were:

"Poor Joe! He doesn't know what he has done."

His weird fad gradually estranged him from humanity. The time came when even his wife fled from her home.

"I am tired of making beds for snakes," she said just before her departure.

Cut off from the income his father allowed him, Prof. Selous became schoolmaster at Greenville, Mich., a post for which his attainments more than fitted him.

Even in the schoolroom, says the New York World, the professor could not control his strange obsession. One day in the course of a lesson in zoology he produced a box and lifted from it a squirming object, long and very slender ringed in red and black.

It was a coral snake, one of the deadliest inhabitants of Florida's swamps. Many days elapsed before the pupils recovered from their horror.

From Florida Selous came the moccasin that encompassed its master's death. Selous in the winter often allowed it to share his bed with him.

The other day, while lifting it from its cage, he inadvertently squeezed its tail. The snake struck him between the knuckles of his left hand, injecting a full dose of venom.

Selous, when he had disengaged its fangs, dropped it and ran for a doctor. Then, remembering that the snake while at large was a danger to others, he returned to confine it.

By this time the poison had taken possession of him. Believing that the bite of a cobra would counteract that of a moccasin, he seized one of the former species held it near his throat, and tried to provoke it into fastening its fangs in him. But it refused to take the hint.

For three days he lingered in agony, swollen and discolored beyond recognition. Every known antedote was tried, but the moccasin's poison prevailed.

He was buried from the Methodist church, of the choir of which he was a member. After the ceremony the mourners visited his house with hoes, spades, axes and the like and made short work of his prized collection, including the murderous mocesin, for which its master with his dying breath had entreated forgiveness.

Danilewsky's Flying Machine.

A Russian inventor, K. Danilewsky, has recently experimented, under government auspices, with a flying-machine which combines the lifting power of a balloon with something resembling wing action. The balloon, says the Youth's Companion, is shaped like a projectile, and is small, being filled with pure hydrogen. Its ascensional forceis sufficient to neutralize the weight of the aeronaut and the appuratus. The latter consists of a system of movable aeroplanes and a steering tackle, by means of which the aeronaut guides the course of the balloon. In descending, the latter assumes an upright position. The immediate object of the experiments is to provide a dirigible balloon for the signal corps of the Russian army.

Looking for News.

England is looking up new names for its Boer conquests. "Chamberlainia" and "Roberts'and" are suggested by the St. James' Gazette, which, however, would prefer something made up from the name of the future ruler of England, Edward VII.

EFFECTS OF IMPERIALISM CROPPING OUT

Signs of a Subsidized Merchant Marine—The Navy Department Favors Trust Armor Plate—Imperialistic Control of the War Department—Hanna's Fat-Frying.

[Special Correspondence.]

It is not so many months ago that congress was considering a ship subsidy bill. It was alleged that the paying of subsidies would not only give us a larger and better merchant marine, but that it meant encouragement to American seamen. The seamen themselves very promptly punctured this argument and predicted that owners of vessels would do in the future as they are doing now, that is, employ the cheapest seamen that could be found.

The ship subsidy bill didn't pass, but the war department has just received a protest from the American seamen of the Pacific coast against manning the transport Hancock with Chinese sailors. This transport sailed a few days ago from San Francisco for Shanghai.

The citizens of the coast object to having sailors employed who might think it an act of patriotism to scuttle a ship when we are practically at war with China. The Chinese sailors were employed because they were cheaper than Americans.

It can easily be imagined that if the United States army authorities make cheapness the first consideration in selecting crews for war vessels or those carrying troops the masters of a subsidized merchant marine wouldn't waste any of their profits paying good wages to American seamen unless they were obliged to by law.

Trust Armor Plate.

The unsettled condition of matters in the orient encourages those who believe in a big navy to urge that the vessels now ordered be hurried to completion.

The secretary of the navy recently received bids for armor plate upon the new vessels authorized by congress. The Carnegie and Bethlehem companies bid $490 per ton for Krupp armor and a little less for other kinds.

The bidders stipulated that the making of the Krupp armor should not be subject to scrutiny by government officials, claiming that the process is a secret one and could only be procured by an agreement that it should be kept so.

What a lot of nonsense. There is no special secrecy about the Krupp method and the record of the Carnegie and Bethlehem companies is not such that they can be trusted to produce standard armor without watching. It will be remembered that at the time of the great Homestead strike this labor disturbance helped to divert attention from about the most defective lot of armor plate ever made for a credulous government.

Some confiding people wonder whether the secretary of the navy will accept these bids or build a government armor plant. Of course he will accept them and see that perquisites enough are allowed to bring the price up to the original $545, for which the armor plate trust fought so hard in congress. The democrats knew what the republicans meant when they talked about leaving the whole matter to the discretion of the secretary of the navy. That meant leaving it at the mercy of the trust. There will be no government armor plate factory under a republican administration.

War Department Imperialism.

The activity of the war department shows that practical imperialism is doing its level best to involve the country so deeply in unauthorized wars that Bryan would have difficulty in straightening out the entanglements.

We are supposed to be on a peace footing. The war department ignores the Philippines completely. Yet millions of dollars' worth of war supplies are being shipped to Manila. There are all sorts of things that our army cannot possibly want during the wet season.

Secretary Root hints that the supplies are being sent in anticipation of further Chinese trouble. The administration has no moral scruples about helping to partition China as soon as it has the campaign off its hands and can get all the troops it wants.

The Russian government, it is said, has set the example by advising its minister to accept an escort from Peking. It is said that the Russians intend in this manner to short circuit the whole incident. This does not sound like Russia, for she is in a better position than any other country to force China to give up territory.

The Chinese government maintains a scornful silence in relation to McKinley's demands for free communication with our minister and his safe delivery to our forces.

The administration is hoping that Chinese affairs will drag along until after election. If defeated McKinley can leave the consequences of his bad management to Bryan to repair and if reelected there will still be an opportunity to combine with Great Britain in grabbing a port or two. The British have landed troops at Shanghai without protest from this government. This means that McKinley and his friends of the Anglo-American alliance are looking to the future and that imperialism will have even wider scope than before.

Mark Hanna's Skillet.

Hanna is busy "frying fat" and scaring the eastern business interests into the belief that if Bryan is elected the financial policy of the country will be reversed.

Bryan's flatfooted declaration that imperialism and not the financial question is the chief issue rather upsets these calculations. After Bryan's speech Hanna changed his tune and declared that the republicans were not going to have any walkover and that it would take plenty of money to defeat Bryan.

This administration has been a kind guardian to all sorts of special interests. There have been no restraining laws to hamper trusts and even the resources of the treasury have been at their disposal. On one plea and another Hanna is rolling up a fine campaign fund.

It worries the republicans though that there is so much apathy in their own ranks. Their people don't seem to take any interest in the Philadelphia platform. In fact one never hears of it at all.

The business interests of the country are beginning to realize that imperialism by unsettling the very foundations of government threatens all stable business. They are beginning to realize that imperialism must be defeated and that no other issue matters much until that is settled.

The official record of strikes and shutting down of factories reported at the Federation headquarters in Washington shows that the alleged midsummer stagnation is really a reaction from the republican prosperity which has been so widely heralded.

ADOLPH PATTERSON.

DISTRIBUTION OF MONEY.

Increase of Wealth Among Privileged Ones Favored by Class Legislation.

The accumulation of money in the financial institutions of this country, in a great measure due to the extortions practiced upon the people, is so great that one of them announced its willingness to take the whole of the British war bond issue of $30,000,000. Others are equally anxious, though having less money, while the general subscription amounts to more than the whole issue. The time has evidently passed when this country must look to England for money. There is more idle capital in America waiting for investment than there was ever before, notwithstanding the fact that the government is expending untold millions abroad in a criminal war of conquest with no results to show for it. The producing masses are toiling harder than ever before and receive a less return for their labor than they did a decade ago, though their expenses have been increased through arbitrary advances in trust-prices by fully 50 per cent.

A rapid increase in wealth is noticeable among the privileged ones favored by class legislation, while the producing masses are to-day in a far less satisfactory condition than before the last panic. The much-vaunted prosperity is all one-sided. It does not extend to the common people, but remains confined to the classes to such an extent that the immense accumulation of idle money must needs loof for profitable investment abroad. No one will pretend to say that this is a healthy condition of affairs. When the wealth of a nation becomes concentrated in the hands of the few to the exclusion of the many, when the nonproducing classes absorb all and leave nothing to the real wealth producers, the time to make a radical change in national affairs is at hand. The legislation which has created privileges for the few whereby they are enabled to amass enormous wealth at the expense of the many must be repealed and equal rights once more established.—Denver Post.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

——Democracy's course grows steadily stronger with the people.—Albany Argus.

——Republican efforts to befog the issues and deceive the voters have failed. They must face the verdict on McKinley's record.—Albany Argus.

——If his interviews with Hanna continue, Roosevelt promises to change into a fairly good imperialist before the end of the campaign.—St. Louis Republic.

——The rise in the prices of trust articles is a long way out of proportion to the rise in the prices of the farmers' products. This is what enables the trusts to contribute so liberally to the administration campaign fund. The thoughtful agriculturists will be able to see that they are the men who are making Mr. Hanna so recklessly affluent in politics.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

——Chairman Hanna has gone to Boston to scare the New England beneficiaries of the protective tariff into giving up a percentage of their plunder for the use of the republican national committee. It is said that just before leaving New York Mr. Hanna received a big check from Collis P. Huntington. It will be recalled that nothing practically has been done by the republican congress to forward the Nicaragua canal project. — Philadelphia Record.

——Attorney General Monnett, of Ohio, boldly declares that the republican leaders are in league with the trusts to enable them to rob the people and destroy the very foundations of free government. He states the unquestionable truth that many of the necessaries of life are from 50 to 400 per cent. higher than they would be if trust control were removed and that this condition is brought about by governmental favors conferred by the republican party. The republican party has prevented the passing of any effective law for the suppression of trusts and is now trying in every way to divert attention from them.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

IT GOT HIM A LICKING.

An Ohioan's Hard Luck When Starting Out as a Newspaper Reporter.

Col. N. S. Jones, who presides over the matrimonial bureau of the probate court, had his newspaper aspirations chilled in a moment when he was starting out in life. He was living in the little town of Genoa, O., and the proprietor of the country weekly asked him if he would not write a "squib" occasionally, says the Toledo Bee. The colonel promised, as he saw an opening in the newspaper field, and had long yearned for a chance to secure a place in the profession which seemed to him to offer many inducements. Consequently he wrote up several items. Hard luck came at the start. Among the first of his items was the following:

"Our esteemed friend and fellow townsman, Seth Hewett, is the greatest man in the world. He licked his wife the other night and came out without a scratch."

Hardly had the paper appeared on the street before Seth was on the lookout for the colonel, and found him. Now all that the colonel remembers of the fray was that he gave Seth a harder fight than Seth's wife had done. But he severed his connection with the paper immediately. He carried scars for weeks to remind him of his first and only experience as a molder of the public mind.

Dangers of the Socratic Method.

This happened at a well-known San Francisco Sunday school: Teacher—"When you look around and see all the fine houses and stores and lots, do you ever think who owns them now? Your fathers, or the people, not?" Boys (in chorus)—"Yes, ma'am." Teacher—"Where will your fathers be 30 years from now?" Boys (in one shout)—"Dead." Teacher—"That's right. And who will own all this property then?" Boys (in ungrammatical concert)—"Us boys!" Teacher—"Right. Now, tell me, did you ever in going along the street notice the drunkards lounging around the saloon doors waiting for some one to treat them?" Boys (heartily)—"Yes, ma'am, lots of them." Teacher—"Well, where will they be 30 years from now?" Boys—"Dead." Teacher—"And who will be the drunkards then?" Boys (in enthusiastic chorus)—"Us boys."—San Francisco Wave.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

THE DELICATE FLAVOR.

Unique Method of a French Chef Who Made a Most Palatable Salad.

At one of his famous little dinners a prominent professional man of Washington was greatly pleased with the salad, as were also his guests. Evidently it was partly meat and partly vegetable, but the flavor was new, distinct and undeterminable. This was so faint that one guest declared: "It's not a taste at all; only a smell."

At length some one suggested, says What to Eat, that the chef be asked for the recipe, upon which the host remarked:

"My man greatly dislikes being asked for recipes. On this occasion, however, his vanity may overcome him if we tell how greatly we have enjoyed the dinner, and the salad in particular. At any rate, we'll see."

The Frenchman soon appeared, and was visibly affected, not to say elated, by the compliments.

"Eet gif me great plaisir," he said, "to tell how I mak ze sal-lad. Eet ver' seemple. I haf ze laitue 'range ready, an' I haf ze meat chop ver' fine an' dryz de celeri I haf chop ver' fine, and I haf ze pomme de terre, ze patate, an' stan' a leetle an' dry; zen I mix zem up. THE DEWEY HOMESTEAD.

The above picture shows the house where George Dewey was born December 26th, 1837. It was occupied by the Dewey family until after the death of the Admiral's father. It then came into the possession of Captain Edward Dewey, who sold it to its present owner and occupant, T. R. Gordon, Esq., in the summer of 1889. Mr. Gordon moved it to its present site in the following February 1890, and has occupied it until the present time. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon are unfailing in their courtesy to the thousands who visit this shrine, the birthplace of Admiral Dewey.

"It is with great satisfaction that I find myself able, after an extended trial to write you in this emphatic manner of the good your Peruna has done my wife. "She has been troubled with catarrh from childhood, and whenever she has a cold, or any unusual condition of the weather it was worse than usual, and seemed more than she could bear. The dropping in her throat at night prevented refreshing sleep, in fact, we had come to look upon it as incurable, and from the many remedies used in vain, we had reason to.

"We are thankful and happy to say that your "Peruna" has been of great benefit to her, and I confidently look for a complete and entire cure. High praise is not too much to bestow upon your remedy." T. R. Gordon.

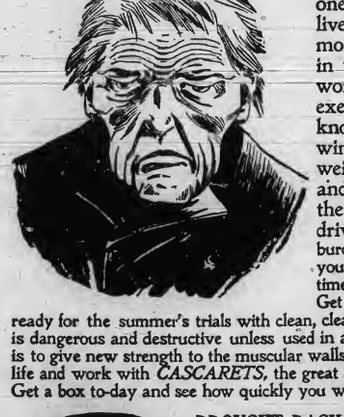
NEBRASKA THE LAND OF PLENTY



I wonder why it is that so many men spend their days working hard on rented farms, barely making enough to get along, with no great prospect ahead of owning their own homes, when within a few hours' journey is a land of plenty—Nebraska—where all kinds of grain and fruit can be raised with the least amount of labor; where cattle and hogs fed on corn bring a handsome profit; where the climate is healthful and churches and schools abound; where land is cheap and can be bought on very easy terms.

Think of this, and if you want information about the country send to me for "The Corn Belt," a beautifully illustrated monthly paper that tells all about Nebraska, and also for "The West Nebraska Grazing Country," an interesting illustrated booklet containing a large sectional map of Nebraska.

On the first and third Tuesdays of each month during the balance of this year cheap excursion tickets will be sold over our road to Nebraska, so that people may go and see for themselves. Ask your ticket agent about this.

He thinks he lives, but he's a dead one. No person is really alive whose liver is dead. During the winter most people spend nearly all their time in warm, stuffy houses or offices or workshops. Many don't get as much exercise as they ought, and everybody knows that people gain weight in winter. As a rule it is not sound weight, but means a lot of flabby fat and useless, rotting matter staying in the body when it ought to have been driven out. But the liver was overburdened, deadened—stopped work. There you are, with a dead liver, and spring is the time for resurrection. Wake up the dead! Get all the filth out of your system, and get ready for the summer's trials with clean, clear blood, body, brain free from bile. Force is dangerous and destructive unless used in a gentle persuasive way, and the right plan is to give new strength to the muscular walls of the bowels, and stir up the liver to new life and work with CASCARETS, the great spring cleaner, disinfectant and bowel tonic. Miss Lutie Baker on last Monday, returned to her home in Union greatly to the discomfort of her sister, Mrs. John Thomas, of the Phoenix, to whom she has been of great assistance in the trying ordeal of hostess. The Phoenix Hotel is and has been doing a flourishing business since Mrs. Thomas has been the landlady and Miss Lutie contributed her share to its popularity.

Misses E. J. Lermoud and Mary Rouse, of the Walton Graded Free School, visited the institute at Independence, last week, and were greatly pleased with the manner in which it was conducted. They had also attended the meeting of the Boone County Institute with Mrs. S. W. Myers and Mrs. Alice Coffman and they all spoke of it in the highest terms. They also regretted that a correspondent of the Recorder endeavored to cast a slur upon the gentleman who conducted the meeting by insertiug the item with "A Mr. Withers, etc" It was, to say the least, a contemptible way of slinging venom at a stranger and was effectually ignored by the complimentary resolutions passed by the institute at the close of the meeting.

Mr. Robert Herndon left the following which [illegible] from the Texarkana Times, of Aug. 23, 1900: "This morning at 1 o'clock, death relieved the suffering from a five weeks spell of sickness, Mr. A. K. Gaines, brother of Mr. J. D. Gaines and Mrs. Ben Collins. The deceased came here from Kentucky some 16 years ago, and settled at New Boston, and was engaged in the hay business for a number of years. When he closed out at New Boston he came here and settled on Wood and 14th Sts., where he lived for the past three years. While at New Boston he married Miss Alstein, and she and one child survive him. He belonged to the Home Forum Association and the members will attend the funeral."

The valuable horse that was stolen from Elisha Hudson, Aug. 17th, was recovered at Mt. Olivet, Robertson co., by Sheriff Hume and Deputy Colvin, of Falmouth, and Elisha and A. S. Hudson. The horse had been sold to Jim Ware, of Augusta, who in turn sold it to a second party. The two thieves were captured near Falmouth after several hours hard chase by a posse of 75 men, and put in jail at Falmouth. They proved to be Wm. Stephenson, of near Falmouth, and William Moore, of Morning View. These same thieves sold a horse about two weeks ago in Bracken county for $100, which was stolen from Mr. Alexander, of Grant county. Another horse was found in their possession stolen from an old negro living near Crittenden, got away from them and went home. Wm. Stephenson was out under a $500 bond for shooting a man.

Three of our worthy citizens had an unwelcome familiarity with lightning last week. Thos. Tarpey, James Holder and Chas. H. Lermond had sought refuge from the storm in a small telegraph station at bridge 27 between here and Verona. An electrical discharge somewhere on the line established close connection with the little station and Tarpey was hurled from it, passing over Lermond and Holder, the first of whom was leaning against the door, while the other was on the outside. All were severely shocked. Holder was the first to regain consciousness, being helped on his feet by Clarence Dixon, who had come up on to the bridge and saw the men when they got the knock-out blow. Tarpey after being brought to remarked that Charley was gone. On raising him up he was found to be alive, but unconscious of what had occurred. He said he had it pretty bad in the neck and has been complaining about it ever since. Had the whole gang been in the station there might not have been any left to tell how it happened.

A very pretty wedding was celebrated in Walton at 4 p. m., Aug. 23d, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Vallandingham. The contracting parties being their daughter, Miss Ivy Myrle, aged 20, and Mr. W. L. Vest, aged 23. Miss Fannie Young, of Covington, was bridesmaid, and Mr. Berry Noel, of this place, groomsman. The bride wore white mull and carried a bouquet of white roses and fern. The bridesmaid wore blue and carried a bouquet of pink roses and ferns. Rev. Hill, of Williamstown, performed the ceremony in a beautiful and impressive manner in the presence of about seventy-five invited guests. The bridal party immediately retired to another room where they received the congratulations of their many friends. They received many useful and pretty presents. Mr. and Mrs. Vest left on the 27th for Shelby, Nebraska, their future home. May their future life be happy and prosperous. [Warsaw Independent please copy.]

Last Saturday night as Hayes Miller and wife, Ed Slayback and wife, and Ab Slater and wife were returning from the Lawrenceburg fair, they came to the ford of Hamilton creek which was terribly swolen from the heavy rains of the afternoon, but, Mr. Slayback did not think the crossing dangerous until he had driven in the raging water, which upset the buggy, precipitating Mr. Slayback and wife into the murky stream, and as Mrs. Slayback was coming up the second time her husband grasped her and with herculean strength, born of desperation, succeeded in getting out. Mrs. Slayback's life was despaired of for sometime, but she is improving. The horse in his mad effort to release himself from the buggy, was drowned and found on the bank next morning. The buggy washed away and has not been seen since. The horse which was drowned belonged to James Carroll and was a very valuable animal, and it was a great loss to Mr. Carroll.

Gov. Beckham's Message.

FRANKFORT, KY., Aug. 28, 1900.

"Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives:

"You have been assembled here in extraordinary session for the single purpose of amending the election laws of the State and I shall undertake to state briefly the reasons why I believe the occasion to be extraordinary and why I have called you here in session at this time.

"Section 8 of the Constitution of Kentucky reads as follows (concerning the Governor's power):

"He may on extraordinary occasions convene the General Assembly at the seat of government or at a different place, if that should have become dangerous from contagious diseases. In case of disagreement between the two houses with respect to the time of adjournment he may adjourn them to such time as he may think proper, not exceeding four months. When he shall convene the General Assembly it shall be by proclamation, stating the subjects to be considered, and no other shall be considered."

"I consider that some changes in our election laws at the present time would be productive of much good, and would remove some of the unfortunate business and dissatisfaction that now exists among our people. The present laws on the subject are undoubtedly distastful to a large number of people in the State, and this amendment is earnestly desired by all those who want to relieve, as much as possible, the friction and ill-feeling engendered by hostile political factions.

"An exciting and important political contest in the State is about to begin and all good citizens desire to see that contest conducted in as orderly and peaceable manner as possible, and it is not only essential that the laws controlling the election should be fair, but also that every honest citizen, whatever may be his political faith, should believe them to be fair."

"A law, to be satisfactory, must not only be good, but must be generally considered so by a large majority of the people. I do not believe the present law in its operation to have been unfair or unjust, and I know it to have been passed with the earnest and honest intention to remedy the evils which existed under the system, which it supplanted. It was a great improvement upon the system, but by reason of a strong prejudice against it, many people have been led to believe that the change was a mistake and the law a bad one. This prejudice against it, whether reasonable or not is sufficient to justify your consideration and warrant you to take some action in securing a more satisfactory law.

"I knew it is your wish, as well as mine, that the election in this State this fall shall be so fair, so just, so honorable, that no citizen in the Commonwealth shall have cause to complain as to the law and its administration, and that whatever the result, every fair-minded citizen, whether he sides with the victor or the vanquished, can say that the verdict of the people has been properly recorded and the victory awarded to him who deserves.

"Let us have such a law, if possible. I will gladly co-operate with you in the the effort to secure it. I have not called you here to legislate on this subject with the idea that a fair election would not be held under the present law, for I am firmly convinced that if the law, in its operation, has been unfair or unjust to anyone, it has been so to those who are charged with being its beneficiaries, who gained nothing by any unjust manipulation of the law, but who lost many thousand votes by reason of the violent prejudice against it. However this opposition exists, and you should deal with it frankly and considerately, as I feel confident that you will.

"Imaginary ills, whether political or physical, should be treated as well as real ones. Your task in this matter is a difficult one. You can not satisfy everybody. I do not desire to suggest in detail any law for your consideration. I have confidence in your judgment and wisdom, and I believe that you will earnestly and patriotically set to work to frame a law in appearance as well as in fact so fair and so just to all parties that no honest citizen can find fault with it.

"J. C. W. BECKHAM,
"Governor of Kentucky."

Squire James M. Lillard gives out this as a "sure cure" for flux, says the Harrodsburg Democrat: "Fill a tumbler half full of apple vinegar, put a teaspoonful each of Crab Orchard and Epsom salts and 1 tablespoonful of table salt. Take a dose every hour until six doses have been taken and then every two hours and you will be well before you know it." Mr. Lillard is 84 years of age, and he has seen this remedy tried where the life of the patient was despaired of, but has never known it to fail to effect a cure.

Next Monday is Labor Day, and the managers of the ball team expect to have two games for that day.

If to-days weather is a sample of that which will prevail the remaindar of the week, the fair board will have nothing of which to complain of on that score.

IN MEMORIAM,

Workum Lodge No. 66 Knights of Pythias.

Whereas, it has pleased God Almighty in his infinite wisdom and mercy to take from our midst the loving wife of our esteemed brother, John Geisler, and thereby cast upon his home the dark gloom of sorrow and despair; and whereas it is the fond pledge of our order to exemplify to a brother in distress the true principles that actuated the hearts whose friendship gave birth to our fraternity, we hereby resolve to express to him our heartfelt sympathy.

Eleven years ago Miss Annie Stagewald became the happy bride of brother Geisler. Full of life and promise they lived happily together, and the biting frosts of care that come to all of us only served to ripen their new joy into an everlasting contentment.

Three children came to bless this happy union—Lee, Henrietta and Oliver, all surviving her except Lee, the elder boy, who passed away into the arms of his Maker ere he had scarcely breathed the new life into which he had been ushered. And now the husband's soul must cry out in despair as Death has seen fit to again place his cold and merciless hands upon the sacred threshold of his home, and break the fond ties that bound these two hearts together in the bonds of love and affection that sealed the sacred compact of husband and wife.

Whatever promise there may be in our lives, it is the Divine will that none shall be such as to escape the many trials that must come before us, and while all who knew her, and especially those who were under the benign influence of her love, have sustained a great loss, it is sweet to know that she is free from all earthly care, and from the struggles that all have been placed here to encounter, the Supreme Deity has now tenderly exempted her.

She has but responded to that summons which will some day come to us all. So let this comfort us, and serve to remind us that the bonds of fraternal affection can not be drawn too closely, as the time will come when we too shall each lay down his work and join the "innumerable caravan" that is incessantly marching on and on to the eternal destiny that awaits us.

The price of tobacco depends altogether on its quality and the manner with which it is handled in its preparation for the market. The crop last year was one of the sweetest and best ever raised in this county and equal to any raised in any quarter in any year. It was nicely handled, and, the weather being very seasonable, none of it is house burned. This year we have the largest and finest crop of tobacco ever raised in this county—it is out of sight in quantity and quality for this time of the year. From now on care must be taken in its cultivation, cutting, scaffolding and housing, particularly the two latter. This is the year to watch the heat; burning on the scaffold and in the house. Give the crop plenty of room after it is cut, and watch it closely or your season's work will be wasted. Remember, this is a year when a heavy crop will house-burn easily, if crowded, as the leaf is very heavy and full of substance. Watch for house-burn and it will be dollars in your pocket by preventing it.—Warsaw Independent.

The new gladstone statue in Athens bears the inscription: "To a part of Epirus and to Thessaly thou gavest the sacred light of freedom, averting slavery." Hellas, mindful of this boon, raised this statue to thee, Gladstone, whose glory is immortal."

Miss Jane Ward a young Denver girl of sixteen, is probably the youngest person in the employ of the United States at the Paris exposition, where she is official interpreter to her father William Ward assistant director of mining and metallury to the United States commission at the exposition.

A pair of huge tusks were recently secured from an African elephant. Measuring along the outer curve, each tusk was ten feet and four inches long, but they differed a little in weight, one weighing 225 and the other 235 pounds, or a total of 460 pounds, which the elephant had carried about without the least inconvenience.

The Berlin Museum of Natural History contains 1,800,000 animal specimens, representing 200,000 species. It is estimated that a total of more than 400,000 living species has now been described, of which the insects number 280,000; birds, 13,000; fishes, 12,000; reptiles, 8,300; amphibians, 1,300; spider family, 20,000; shellfish, 50,000; worms, 6,000.

In 1904 Kansas will celebrate her fiftieth anniversary as a state by holding an interstate exposition at Topeka the capital. Those who are well beyond the fiftieth milestone will recall the storms that centered about the territory a half century ago, when it was to be slavery or not within a land flowing with milk and honey. And out of it grew the great war between the states, which forever settled the question.

The population of the United States in 1890 was 62,622,250 and the estimate of the treasury department on July 1. last, was 77,816,000. The vote cast for president in 1888 was 11,388,038; in 1892, 12,110 636, and in 1896 13,923,643. The vote this year should approach 15,000,000, though it must be remembered that there was an extraordinary outpour of voters four years ago.

Gen. Y. Fukushima who is in command of the forces which Japan has already landed at Taku, is a distinguished soldier, traveler and scholar. During his junior year in the army he traveled from Berlin to Vladivostok all the way across Siberia. He later visited Persia, touring that country thoroughly. The general is an excellent linguist. He speaks French, German and Russian fluently.

The sum of $10,000 was raised recently in London for the erection of a statue to Gen. Gordon at Khartum. It has now been arranged that the empty pedestal in Khartum shall be occupied by a replica in bronze of the statue representing Gordon mounted on a camel which was executed in 1890, by Mr E. Onslow Ford, R. A. The original model of the statue, after it had left Burlington house, was presented by Mr. Ford to the Crystal palace at Sydenham.

That somewhat prevalent slang term, "lobster," is alleged to be at least respectable in age. John Adams, in his argument in defense of the British soldiers on trial for murder because of complicity in the "Boston massacre," mentions the old word "lobster" as one of the epithets by the citizens to the soldiers. The use of the word "lobster" as applied to a soldier, has been shown by a Bostonian interested in the subject to have been found as far back as 1642.

According to a Belgian officer who has just returned from Congo Free State, the river Uelle there is full of a species of octopus, called by the natives "miga." The creature is in the habit, it is said, of attacking native canoes, capsizing them, dragging its victims to its cave and making a meal of them. The Belgian tells some strange stories of the performances of those creatures he professes to have witnessed. These stories strain one's credulity and read like a page from one of Rider Haggard's novels.

A recent visitor to Constantinopal reports one custom of the Turks which causes a vast deal of trouble and confusion. This is the Turkish system of reckoning time. A Turk holds that the day begins exactly at sunset, at that time he sets his clocks and watches at the hour of 12 As the sun has the same habit of presiding over Turkey as he exercises with regard to other localities, it may easily be seen that this system of reckoning time necessitates setting the clocks every day in the year.

The new bird law, which covers mammals also, has gone into force, and importers of live animals are likely to find themselves "up against" regulations that will cause them not a little surprise as well as much annoyance. Recently the department of agriculture at Washington issued its first permit under the act, granting permission to a batch of foreign bred pheasants at the port of New York. Lacking this passport, the birds would have had to be shipped back to the place they came from.

THEY MAY BE FIGHTING

Chinese Have Rallied Their Forces and Are Preparing to Attack the Allies.

COMMUNICATION HAS BEEN CUT OFF

It Is Generally Regarded That the Allies, If Besieged, Can Take Care of Themselves.

No Confirmation of the Report That Russia, Germany and Japan Have Declared War on China—The Latest Chinese Situation.

Washington, Aug. 27.—A dispatch was received at the Japanese legation from the foreign office from Japan conveying the latest and most authentic information of the situation in and around Peking. In a measure the advices were of a disquieting nature, as they indicated that the Chinese had rallied their forces and were preparing for an attack upon the allies in Peking. If it should prove that the allied forces were besieged in Peking, it would account for the lack of advices from Gen Chaffee. As made public by Minister Takahira, the dispatch from the Japan foreign office at Tokio is as follows:

"An official telegram, dated Peking, August 18, was received at Tokio from Gen. Yamaguchi, commander of the Japanese forces, to the following effect: 'The capital is now entirely cleared of the enemy. A cavalry regiment, which had been sent to Wan Shau Shan, where the empress dowager's palace is located, reports that the imperial family, who had left Peking August 14, started, after a short rest at Wan Shau Shan, for the west and were under the escort of Gen. Ma and his troops, consisting of only about 500 horsemen and 20 carts. The Japanese forces occupied the treasury department, in which over 2,000,000 taels in silver and a large quantity of rice were found.'

"Another telegraphic dispatch, dated Taku, August 23, states that, as the Chinese troops and Boxers who had gathered at Nan Yuen, were about to attack the foreign forces at Peking, Japanese and Russian cavalry were expected to encounter them on the 20th. The dispatch further states that Chinese infantry, some 9,000 strong, with 15 guns, are advancing forward from Shantung to make a rear attack on the allies."

A brief dispatch from Che-Foo, conveying a rumor current there that Russia, Germany and Japan had joined in a declaration of war against China aroused some interested comment among Washington officials and among diplomatic representatives of foreign governments resident here. In neither official nor diplomatic circles, however, was the rumor taken seriously. No information of such action has reached either the department of state or the legations of the governments principally interested.

Whether, in the event of a declaration of war by one or more powers against China, an invitation would be extended to the United States to retire from China, as intimated in the dispatch from Che-Foo, is open to doubt, and it is decidedly problematical, it is said, whether the invitation would be accepted, even if it were tendered.

London, Aug. 27.—The latest news from Peking indicates that the situation there is unchanged. The imperial city is still invested, but has not yet been occupied. The allies, when the last message left, were still refraining from aggressive action pending instructions from their governments. An attack from 30,000 Boxers was anticipated, and to meet this the whole American force and the British artillery, according to a dispatch to the Morning Post from Peking, dated August 18, were moved to the outer city wall. The Boxers were reported coming from the south.

The Peking correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, wiring August 19, reasserts that the empress dowager fled westward, and adds: "She has a body guard of 1,500, and as the mountainous character of the country would prevent artillery following."

Washington, Aug. 26.—A cablegram has been received from Adm. Remey in which he states that it is reported that the Russian commander at Peking has forbidden any communication between his forces and the Chinese.

Paris, Aug. 26.—Gen. Frey, commanding the French forces at Peking, telegraphs from there under date of August 20:

"The allies have driven the Boxers from all the points they occupied. The allies are camped outside of the imperial palace, which was occupied by some soldiers of the regular Chinese army. The generals decided to march international forces through the palace doors, which were afterwards closed."

Slugged and Robbed.

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 24.—E. E. Balch, assistant cashier of the Omaha national bank was slugged and robbed in his berth early Thursday morning on the Chicago and Nothwestern train coming from Chicago to Omaha. He offered resistance and was badly pounded on the head. Eugene Amoretti, jr., of Wyoming, also a passenger on the same train, was robbed. Other passengers and the conductor heard no outcry, and before the alarm was given the robbers escaped. It is not known how much they secured.

RACE RIOT RENEWED.

New York Police Busy in Making Arrests and Dispersing Disturbers of the Peace.

New York, Aug. 27.—A number of incipient race riots broke out here Sunday, the direct cause being the shooting Saturday night of John Brennan, a white messenger boy, aged 20, by John Davis, alias "Lamplighter," a Negro. Brennan was one of a crowd of whites who taunted Davis, and bullets from the black's revolver lodged in his stomach and chest. He is in a hospital and likely to die. The shooting was done on 62d street, and, becoming noised about, the rough white element began to search out Negroes.

Before daybreak Sunday morning James Arnold, colored, while passing 64th street and Amsterdam avenue, was attacked by a crowd of whites and badly beaten. He was treated at a hospital. Shortly afterward about two blocks away the gang doled out a similar experience to Alexander Ballentine, a colored man, who was passing quietly along. In neither case were arrests made.

At 9:30 o'clock in the morning a crowd of whites led by Frank McPike, 24 years old, went to a five-story tenement on 60th street, occupied by Negroes, with the avowed purpose of cleaning it out. They had about demolished all the windows and incidentally cracked a head or two when the police arrived. McPike and another man were arrested.

At 1:30 p. m. Joseph Doyle, 18 years old, filled his hat with stones and took his stand at 59th street and 11th avenue. He succeeded in inflicting scalp wounds on two colored men before a policeman clubbed and arrested him.

Officer John J. Cleary placed under arrest for "being sassy" William Hopson, a colored man. He rashly undertook to take his prisoner to the station through West 60th street. That street between West End and Amsterdam avennes is called "Cuckoo Row," and here colored people live by the hundred. The fact that one of their race was in the hands of a policeman was all that several of them wanted, and half a dozen of them thought they would relense Hopson. Cleary used his club and then drew his revolver. By threatening to shoot the first man to move he held the mob at bay until other policemen came to his aid. They arrested George Meyer, also colored. Cleary said he started the attempted rescue. Meyer resisted all the way to the station, and when he got there he had several wounds. One in particular was very large, and it is thought the Negro's skull was fractured.

William and Henry Rapp, brothers and white, were arrested and locked up on complaint of Adam Johnson, colored, who claimed they had stoned him.

The above are only a few assaults which came to light by arrests. The fact is that all day long the police in the neighborhood mentioned were kept busy dispersing small mobs bent on mischief.

WARSHIP AT TANGIER.

It Is There to Support the Claim Arising Out of the Murder of an American Citizen.

Tangier, Morocco, Aug. 27.—A United States warship has arrived here to support the claim arising out of the murder last June of Marcos Essagin. A naturalized American citizen who was the manager of the Fez branch of the French firm of Brunnaswig & Co. Essagin, while riding on horseback through a narrow street in Tangier, jotted against the mule of a Moroccan religious fanatic and a dispute ensued, the crowd siding with the priest. In self-defense Essagin drew his revolver and fired, wounding a native. This was the signal for a general attack upon the American, who received dozens of knife wounds and whose body was burned, according to some accounts, before life was extinct.

WANTS TO KILL BRYAN.

Wm. Williams, Alleged Anarchist, Employed in an Omaha Hotel, Placed Under Arrest.

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 26.—William M. Williams, an alleged anarchist, who is employed in the Saelter Hotel, in this city, announced to one of his fellow workmen Saturday morning that he was going to kill William J. Bryan when he came to attend the Jacksonian picnic Saturday afternoon. The police were notified and arrested him an hour later. Every precaution is being taken to prevent anything happening to Mr. Bryan while in the city.

Washington, Aug. 26.—The population of Kansas City, Mo., as announced by the census bureau is 163,752. The population for 1890 was 132,716. This is an increase of 31,036 or 23.06 per cent. The population of Kansas City, Kas., also just announced, is 51,418, against 38,316 in 1890. This is an increase of 13,102, or 34.19 per cent.

SACRED SONG SERVICE

The G. A. R. Encampment Opens at Chicago in a Rain Storm.

Veterans and Visitors to the Encampment Came By Thousands on Every Incoming Train—Record-Breaking Attendance.

Chicago, Aug. 27.—Despite a rain which fell at times with the energy of a stream from a garden hose and degenerated periodically into a cold, soaking drizzle, the grand patriotic and sacred song service at the Coliseum Sunday night was attended by a throng which taxed the capacity of the immense building to the utmost. The exercises began at 8 o'clock, and between that hour and 7 o'clock the sidewalk on Wabash avenue was impassable for a block in both directions. A large detachment of police was on hand, and the officers had their hands more than full in handling the crowd. The jam in the doorways was terrific, and although none was injured, many gowns and coats were badly wrecked. It is estimated that fully 13,000 people were packed into the hall, and thousands more were unable to gain admission.

Bishop Samuel Fallows, of Chicago, who gained renown as a fighting man on the battlefield before he won distinction in the pulpit, and who is the chairman of the encampment committee on religious exercises, presided. On the platform with him was Mayor Harrison, Commander-in-Chief Shaw, Rev. Thomas C. Iliff, of Salt Lake City, Utah; Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, Rev. E. G. Hirsch, of Chicago, and a host of department commanders of the G. A. R., as well as the local officials in Chicago of the Chicago's encampment.

After a musical selection had been rendered by the band the vast audience joined in the Lord's Prayer, being led by Rev. Frank Gunsaulus, of Chicago, and then Bishop Fallows extended a warm and eloquent welcome to the visiting veterans. A responsive reading was led by Rev. J. D. Severinghaus, of Chicago, and Bishop Fallows then introduced Commander-in-Chief Shaw, who spoke at some length on "True Patriotism." He dwelt upon the services which had been rendered to this nation in particular and to the world at large by the members of the Grand Army, and pointed out the need of training the coming generation in the duties which patriotism demands of the nation's citizens.

Rev. E. G. Hirsch delivered a patriotic address and Rev. T. D. Wallace pronounced the benediction.

Veterans and visitors to the encampment came in by the thousands, every incoming passenger train being packed to the doors. Railroad officials estimated that fully 75,000 people arrived during the day. Of this number 18,000 were members of the G. A. R. Forty-five thousand strangers had arrived previously, over 11,000 of whom were veterans—a total of 29,000 already in the city, and reports from the railroads and from G. A. R. headquarters indicate further arrivals will swell the number to a record-breaking total.

NUN COMMITS SUICIDE.

She Jumped Off an Ocean Steamer in Midocean Because She Felt She Was Disgraced.

New York, Aug. 27.—On the French line steamer L'Aquitaine, which arrived from Havre, Margaret Minnehan, a former nun, committed suicide by jumping overboard at 5 a. m. on August 22. The alarm was quickly given, a boat was lowered and the woman was picked up, but too late. A Roman Catholic priest among the passengers performed a burial service over the remains, assisted by a number of other priests and nuns who were on board the steamer, and the body was committed to the sea.

During the voyage Miss Minnehan had confided to some of her fellow passengers that she had been a nun, but her love for a young man caused her to leave the convent, and she felt she had disgraced her family. She said she was on the way to her brother, a priest who is located in Pennsylvania.

Riot at a Ball Game.

St. Joseph, Mo., Aug. 27.—At Sunday afternoon's ball games, a gang of hoodlums, angered at a decision by Umpire Ebright against the home team, started a small-sized riot. Ebright and the Denver players were pelted with missiles and compelled to flee to places of safety. Pitcher Schmidt, of Denver, felled several members of the mob with a club.

Want Better Race Relations.

Macon, Ga., Aug. 26.—An antebellum Negro association, to comprise all the southern states, will be organized in Macon, Ga., September 25. The object is to discountenance the crimes of young Negroes which lead to lynchings, and to establish better race relations.

Rebels Still Holding Out.

Kingston, Jamaica, Aug. 27.—Mail advices received from Colon, Colombia, report fighting near Carthugena, where the rebels have been holding out in the hope of gaining some voice in the government from the new conservative party.

American Boat Club Won.

Paris, Aug. 27.—The Vesper Boat club, of Philadelphia, won the senior eight championship, the only event in the international regatta held under the auspices of the Paris exposition in which America competed.

A Female Enigma.

Even the census enumerator, armed as he is with sweeping authority, doesn't find his work always as calm as sailing on a summer sea. An enumerator in a New York district encountered a female enigma whom he had to report to the government from data obtained from the following conversation:

"In what year were you born?" asked the enumerator.

"In 1840," answered the lady.

"Then you are 54?" said the enumerator.

"Indeed, I am not. I am 52," she retorted.

"And yet you were born in 1840?"

"That is what I said, sir."

"Then you must be 54."

"No; 52."

"Well, how do you account for the additional two years?"

"I don't account for them. I don't have to. It's none of your business. I was born in 1840 and am 52 years old, and that is all there is about it. I know my own age, I suppose."—N. Y. Sun.

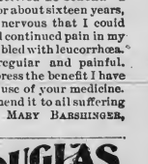
KIDNEY TROUBLES OF WOMEN

Miss Frederick's Letters Show How She Relied on Mrs. Pinkham and Was Cured.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have a yellow, muddy complexion, feel tired and have bearing down pains. Menses have not appeared for three months; sometimes am troubled with a white discharge. Also have kidney and bladder trouble.



I have been this way for a long time, and feel so miserable I thought I would write to you and see if you could do me any good."—MISS EDNA FREDERICK, Troy, Ohio, Aug. 6, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound according to directions, and can say I have not felt so well for years as I do at present. Before taking your medicine a more miserable person you never saw. I could not eat or sleep, [illegible] talk with any one. Now I feel so well I cannot be grateful enough to you for what you have done for me."—MISS EDNA FREDERICK, Troy, Ohio, Sept. 10, 1899.

Backache Cured

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I write to thank you for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me. It is the only medicine I have found that helped me. I doctored with one of the best physicians in the city of New York, but received no benefit. I had been ailing for about sixteen years, was so weak and nervous that I could hardly walk; had continued pain in my back and was troubled with leucorrhœa." Menses were irregular and painful. Words cannot express the benefit I have derived from the use of your medicine. I heartily recommend it to all suffering women."—MRS. MARY BARSHINGER, Windsor, Pa.

WINCHESTER REPEATING ARMS CO. New Haven, Conn.

TEETHINA was first used by Dr. Charles J. Moffett, a graduate of Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, Pa., in his extensive and successful treatment of children in Georgia in overcoming the troubles incident to teething and the hot summers.

TEETHINA (Teething Powders) counteracts the effect of hot weather and keeps the digestive organs in a healthy condition, and has saved the lives of thousands of children in the doctor's native state, where physicians prescribe and all mothers give it, and it is criminal in mothers of our section to allow their babies and little children to suffer and for and perhaps die when relief can be so easily obtained by giving TEETHINA. Costs only 25 cents at Druggists, or mail 25c to C. J. MOFFETT, M. D., St. Louis, Mo.

TRIALS CONTINUED.

Cases of Youtsey, Combs, Davis and Whittaker to Be Tried in October.

The Prisoner is Still in the Throes of a Raging Fever—Story That He Will Make a Confession Denied.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 23.—When court convened Wednesday morning to hear the motion for a new trial by Caleb Powers' attorneys, Commonwealth's Attorney Franklin stated that he had an affidavit by Henry Youtsey's physician that the accused man would not be well enough to go into a trial now and therefore he asked the court that the case go over to the October term of court. Franklin also stated that on account of illness in the family of [illegible] attorneys for Combs, Whittaker and Davis, his case would also go over and the accused men be admitted to $3,000 bail.

The condition of Henry Youtsey, charged with complicity in the assassination of Senator Goebel, remains unchanged. He is still in the throes of a raging fever and the recent publications of a Louisville newspaper to the effect that he was to make a confession and receive immunity for his crime as well as a money reward, has not had a beneficial effect. Youtsey's attorneys deny the story in its entirety, as well as the other report that there is friction between his counsel. Youtsey's attorneys claim to have information that proves beyond the preadventure of a doubt that he could not receive a fair and impartial trial. They say that of the sixty names selected for a special venire fifty-nine are democrats and one a republican. They profess to see in this the tactics of the prosecution to secure a conviction no matter what the evidence may be. It is also claimed that the selection of talesmen was from one precinct, where the men selected were known to be in favor of a conviction of the accused Col. Nelson will make a hard fight to have the jury drawn from the wheel in the usual order, and may seek to have the case postponed until October at the regular term of court.

OHIO ELECTION LAW.

It May Be Used as a Model for a Substitute for the Goebel Act in Kentucky.

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 23.—The Ohio election law is being investigated by a number of leading democrats with a view to proposing an exact copy of it for adoption by the legislature at its coming special session. The Ohio law, instead of placing the power in the hands of three commissioners, puts it all in charge of the secretary of state, who has the appointment of all election officers. If the Goebel law is repealed it seems likely that the Ohio law will take its place. Under the Ohio law the secretary of state appoints bipartizan election officers in each county, except in large cities, where the mayor has the appointing power. Although the law does not require it, the custom has been for the secretary of state to appoint officers recommended by the county committees of the respective parties.

Negroes in New York City Will Make an Appeal to Great Britain for Protection.

New York, Aug. 25.—Dr. M. S. N. Pierre, of 318 West 41st street, a Negro from British Guiana, and 200 of his fellow British subjects have prepared a petition to Hon. Percy Sanderson, British consul, asking him to take the necessary steps for their protection. The petition alleges that the signers were brutally attacked by the mob in the recent riots in this city and that the police, instead of giving them protection, actually urged the mob to greater fury.

The consul is reminded that the signers, as subjects of her Britannic majesty, have been educated to respect law and order and the legally constituted authorities, and if permitted will do so. They believe, however, that there is not adequate protection afforded to them under the present circumstances, and Consul Sanderson is respectfully petitioned to take such steps as he deems wise in the premises.

It reached here on the steamer Majestic, after transportation of 17,000 miles. It is good and solid despite its long journey of 70 days. In view of the fine quality and the cheapness and abundance of lambs in Australia, the experiment is regarded with much interest by local butchers.

SENTENCED FOR LIFE.

Quick Justice Meted to the Negro Who Caused the Akron Riots.

Akron, O., Aug. 25.—Lewis Peck, the Negro who raped the little Maas girl and caused the Akron riots, had justice meted out to him at quite a rapid rate. Prison Keeper Washer, of this city, went to Cleveland and had a conference with Peck. The prisoner was willing to plead guilty to attempted assault, the penalty for which is 20 years. Washer said no; that if he would not plead guilty to criminal [illegible] which is life imprisonment, he would be taken to Akron for trial. Lewis shuddered at the very thought, but finally agreed to plead guilty to criminal assault and accept a life sentence.

After Peck's agreement to plead guilty to criminal assault he was taken to the depot, where a train was taken for this place.

Just after leaving Cuyahoga Falls, while the train was en route from Cleveland to Akron, Peck begged Prison Keeper Washer to shoot him instantly in the event a mob was awaiting at Akron.

The train arrived here at 3:30. A carriage was waiting at the railway station and the streets to the courthouse were patroled by the state militia. Peck was hustled into a carriage and in three minutes the courthouse was reached.

Few who glanced at the rapidly driven carriage suspected that it contained the man the furious mob of Wednesday night wanted to lynch. Peck was taken in at the rear door of the courthouse. There was a stir among the soldiers crowding to the rear of the court room. Judge D. J. Nye, of Elyria, presided. He had arrived in Akron at noon. Two minutes after Peck reached the court Deputy Sheriff Ed Hershey read the indictment. Peck stood up with manacled hands. He pleaded guilty in a firm voice. His worn eyes shifted nervously about the room. Then he sat down, and Prosecutor Wunamaker whispered with him briefly.

Then Judge Nye said: "Mr. Peck, you have heard the indictment read charging you with rape. You have pleaded guilty. Have you anything to say?"

"I have nothing to say except that I throw myself on the mercy of the court," replied Peck.

Judge Nye then said: "In crimes such as that to which you have pleaded guilty there is but one penalty provided. That is imprisonment for life. It is the judgment of the court that you be confined in the penitentiary for life. You must pay the costs of this proceeding, and that for the first 30 days of your imprisonment you shall be placed in solitary confinement."

After Peck had been sentenced he was at once taken in a closed carriage to the Center street crossing of the Cleveland, Akron & Columbus railway and placed on board the train in charge of Sheriff Kelly and taken on to the state penitentiary at Columbus. So quickly and quietly was Peck brought into the city, sentenced and sent to Columbus that but very few people knew what had transpired. There was no crowd at the railway either when the train arrived or departed.

Columbus, O., Aug. 25.—Peck arrived at the penitentiary in the custody of the sheriff of Summit county at 8:45 o'clock. He felt greatly relieved when the heavy iron gate closed behind him and he realized that he was safe from mob violence. He had little to say and was quickly conducted to a cell.

Philadelphia, Aug. 25.—Information has just been received here of the stranding during a hurricane of the new British tramp steamer Indra, Capt. F. L. Burkell, which sailed with a cargo of sugar from Sourabaya, Java, June 16, for Philadelphia, and nine lives are believed to have been lost. The vessel is ashore and a total loss at Gardafui, on the coast of Africa, at the entrance to the gulf of Aden. Of the crew of 38 men, 29 were saved, and it is believed the others perished in the gale or were carried into captivity by the natives.

On August 18 the Indra ran into a hurricane and was swept ashore. Capt. Burkell and 28 of the crew succeeded in reaching Aden in a lifeboat, from which place the captain sent [illegible] to the agents here. A second lifeboat, containing First Officer Walker and eight men, has not been heard from.

ANOTHER RACE WAR.

Serious Trouble Threatened Between Whites and Black in Sabine County, Texas.

Center, Tex., Aug. 25.—Serious trouble is threatened between the whites and blacks in Sabine county. A messenger arrived here from Sexton with a report that trouble was expected, and requested assistance from Center. Six men left at once for Sexton and others went there later.

The trouble grew out of a letter written by a Negro making known a plot to kill Sheriff Wm. Polley, Daniel Davis, James Ingram and several other citizens. A Negro who received the letter took it to Sheriff Polley to read for him. He was arrested on the spot, and the sheriff took a posse with him and arrested 13 other Negroes. An examination is being held at Sexton. Many of the Negroes are openly making threats, and the number of white men is being constantly augmented by arrivals from nearby towns. Sexton is 15 miles from a telegraph or telephone station.

Already delegations of the Women's Relief Corps are arriving and the electioneering for candidates has begun. Among the first to reach the city were the Kansans, who have come early to work for their candidate for national president, Mrs. Ida Wilson Moore, wife of Judge O. L. FROM ALL OVER THE STATE.

WEAVER BEING TRIED.

Several Witnesses Testify That the Defendant Was Not in Frankfort When Goebel Was Shot.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 23.—The case of George W. Weaver, accused of perjury, was called before County Judge Yates. Several witnesses testified that they saw Weaver at Graysons Springs the day on which Senator Goebel was shot. The commonwealth concluded their side of the case. The cases of Henry E. Youtsey, "Tallow Dick" Combs and Harland Whittaker, charged with the murder of William [illegible] charged with being accessory, were continued until the October term of court. Whittaker, Combs and Davis were allowed bond, the sum being $3,000. Davis gave bail, also.

Quite a number of affidavits were filed charging that Jurors Munson, Mulberry, Murphy, Craig, Crosswait and Musselman had formed and expressed opinions that Powers was guilty and ought to hang. The affidavit against Craig, who is a prominent shoe merchant, charged that after being summoned, and if selected, he would not be controlled by evidence, but only by instructions from the court.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 25.—The trial of George Weaver was continued in county court, and, after recalling several who testified with the defense, Weaver was put on the stand, and he said he installed the officers of the lodge of Woodmen of the World at Grayson Springs on January 23, not January 30, as stated by several witnesses, and a copy of two reports of membership of the Grayson lodge, sent by Weaver to the grand lodge, were introduced, and the witness stated that he had received the copies from Louisville and that he had them in a trunk there.

The papers showed that the officers, with one exception, were installed on January 23. He said he went to Frankfort on January 29. Stopped at Mrs. Marshal's boarding house on Main street and remained until after breakfast the next morning. He said he went to Frankfort recently at the instance of Commonwealth's Attorney Franklin to see if he could not identify the places where he had been on January 30. He then repeated the story that he told of being on the capitol grounds January 30 and seeing the hands of a man withdrawing a rifle from a window of Powers' office.

Capt. John Davis testified that Weaver had received a package at the jail and about 15 minutes later called him in to identify the papers. He said the copies of reports introduced in evidence were the papers Weaver had received.

George Smith, of Barbourville, testified that Weaver had told him what he knew, had drawn a plot of the grounds and indicated from which building the shot came. On the stand in the Powers case Weaver said he did not know how many buildings there were on the grounds.

Frank Baker, special bailiff, who brought Weaver from Knox county, said Weaver was unwilling to come and testify in the Powers case.

An examination of a letter introduced in evidence, which Weaver says he wrote in Louisville on the afternoon of January 30, shows that Weaver made use of this expression: "I am going from here to Caneyville and Milward, this county." Both points are in Grayson county.

Under the agreement, when all the witnesses for the defense had been examined attachments were issued for absent witnesses and the case was adjourned until September 3.

Powers Taken to Louisville.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 25.—Caleb Powers, who was refused a new trial by Judge Cantrill, was taken to Louisville, where he will be kept in jail for two weeks, the time given his attorneys to file a bill of exceptions. It is alleged the judge discovered a plot to rescue Powers from the Georgetown jail. The court originally ordered him sent to Frankfort jail, but at the prisoner's attorneys' request he was taken to Louisville.

Powers' counsel left here Friday morning for Louisville, much dissatisfied with the ruling of the court.

There was some indignation over Powers being in irons when taken away Thursday night. He made no resistance nor complaint when the officers chained his wrists together.

KENTUCKY PROHIBITIONISTS.

State Ticket Placed in Nomination Headed by J. D. White of Manchester, For Governor.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 23.—The prohibitionist state convention nominated for governor John D. White, of Manchester, Clay county, formerly a republican congressman from the Eleventh district. Candidates for presidential electors were also nominated. There were 50 delegates in the convention including several women.

The platform adopted indoses the national [illegible] candidates for president and vice president and declares for women suffrage.

The convention had state politics thrust upon it by H. M. Winslow, declaring that the right of the people of Kentucky to vote and have their votes counted is an issue in Kentucky this year more important than prohibition. He said the prohibitionists should not nominate a candidate for governor, but should endorse the republican candidate, Mr. Yerkes, and made a motion to this effect. Mr. Winslow's motion caused commotion and an animated debate followed. On being asked the question he said he intended to vote for Mr. Yerkes and his name was left out of the list of those entitled to sit in the convention, was reported by the credentials committee.

Mr. White, the nominee for governor, said he could not support McKinley or Yerkes. He declared that "The log cabin" of the republican party is "the bulwark of assassination" and that the "canteen is a greater curse to the country than the Goebel law is to Kentucky."

Dr. J. D. Smith, of Henderson county, was elected state chairman.

CHINN OFFERS TO SETTLE.

He Refuses, However, to Pay the 20 Per Cent. Penalty on About Six Thousand Dollars.

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 25.—County Clerk Claude Chinn, of Lexington, was here, in company with Agent Sprinkle, of the Maryland Realty Deposit Co., Chinn's surety, and had a long conference with Attorney Breckinridge. Chinn and his bondsmen offered to pay all of the shortage with the exception of $800 due on back taxes for the year 1898. He offered to pay about $10,000, but would not agree to pay the 20 per cent. penalty on $6,000 of that amount.

The penalty amounts to $1,200, and a suit for it was filed in the Franklin circuit court just before Sprinkle and Chinn arrived here.

Attorney General Breckinridge refused to accept such a settlement and insists on the payment of the penalty.

There is some very cheap land in Kentucky. At a recent sale in Lincoln county 400 acres brought 75 cents per acre and 200 acres sold at 25 cents per acre.

Senator J. C. Gillespie bought and brought from Pendleton county last Saturday 112 Southdown ewes. He has contracted to sell the lambs for next year at 5 cents.—Carlisle Mercury.

It has been found that five single acre plots will feed one-third more sheep than a single-five-acre field will; the benefit has fully repaid the cost of fencing, in one year. The figures apply to larger fields as well as small ones.

An intensely hot wind has been blowing over central Kansas and vegetation has withered rapidly. The late corn that survived the last dry spell has been shriveling and the crop percentage has been greatly decreased. The thermometer was above 100 degrees in the shade.

One of the most common mistakes in the management of pigs is to allow some periods of slow development between the seasons, when different foods are appropriate. The grower cannot afford these periods of partial stagnation, if the pigs are to be put upon the early market in good form.

One of the best uses for wheat chaff is to place it on the floor of the poultry house. It may be three or four inches deep, and serves several purposes, the first being to keep the floor always dry and clean, and the next, if a few millet seeds are scattered in the chaff, the hens will work and search industriously for the seeds.

With continued favorable conditions the farmers of Pendleton county will in the next few weeks house the largest and finest crop of Burley ever raised in this part of the moral vineyard. The quantity and quality, generally speaking, is at the top notch, barring only a few crops which are reported "trenching."—Pendletonian.

One great advantage which draft horses have over those of lighter weight, is that they need little training to fit them for use. While to find ready sale the driving horse must be of some beauty, style and speed, and taught not to fear steam or electric cars, the larger horse grows up to his work without special preparation.—Cor. Epitomist.

The best prices for grain and hay are obtained by feeding those articles on the farm. Meat, milk and butter sell for cash at all seasons, and the farmer can save a large portion of his crop in the manure. Much of the expense of labor is incurred during the winter season, when field work cannot be done. To save loss of time in winter the farm should be well equipped with livestock.

One way to ice or chill a watermelon is to split a ripe one into halves, scoop out the center, rejecting the seeds. Put in a bowl, and with a silver fork pick or chop lightly into small pieces. Add the juice of one lemon and half a pound of powdered sugar. Turn the mixture into a freezer, pack in ice and salt and turn very slowly for fifteen minutes, when the mixture should be like soft snow. Serve in glasses, adding a teaspoonful of sherry to each glass.—New York Evening Post.

The Kansas City Democrats are in the midst of a novel hot weather campaign. They rent a hall and give out word that ice cream and oratory will be on tap at some designated place and period. When the occasion arrives the house is filled and between music and speeches those present are served with generous wooden platters of congealed lactcal refreshment. The announcement never fails to fill the hall. The Westerner is an up-to-date individual and his think-tank is full of novel ideas and expedients.

Few people living in cities will question the correctness of the statement that "the treatment of cows kept in large towns, or their immediate vicinity, is conducted more with a view to the quantity of the milk produced than its quality; hence," it is explained, "the succulency of the food is more looked to in such cases than its nutritive properties. On this account the grains and liquid refuse obtained from breweries and distilleries are much sought after by dairymen who supply townspeople with milk."

Prevented a Tragedy.

Timely information given Mrs. George Long, of New Straitsville, O., saved two lives. A frightful cough had long kept her awake every night. She had tried many remedies and doctors but steadily grew worse until urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle wholly cured her; and she writes, this marvelous medicine also cured Mr. Long of a severe attack of pneumonia. Young Women

The entry into womanhood is a critical time for a girl. Little menstrual disorders started at that time soon grow into fatal complications. That female troubles are filling graveyards proves this. Wine of Cardui establishes a painless and natural menstrual flow. When once this important function is started right, a healthy life will usually follow. Many women, young and old, owe their lives to Wine of Cardui. There is nothing like it to give women freedom from pain and to fit young women for every duty of life. $1.00 bottles at druggists.

Miss Della M. Strayer, Tully, Kan. "I have suffered untold pain at menstrual periods for a long time, was nervous, had no appetite, and lost interest in everything, in fact was miserable. I have taken four bottles of Wine of Cardui, with Thedford's Black-Draught, when needed, and to-day I am entirely cured. I cannot express the thanks I feel for what you have done for me."

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1900. NO. 46

THE campaign liar will be in it again now for a season.

JEFF DAVIS was elected Governor of Arkansas, Monday, by the Democrats. His majority will be over 50,000.

WITH the close of the Alexander fair, next Saturday, the fair season in this part of the State will be concluded.

THE nail trust permanently closed the American rod and nail mills at Anderson, Indiana, one day last week, throwing about one thousand men out of employment.

ARTHUR SEWALL, Democratic nominee for Vice President in 1896, was stricken with apoplexy at his summer home in Maine, and there are slight chances for his recovery.

JUDGE FRENCH TIPTON, who was shot by Clarence E. Woods at Richmond Saturday night, died Monday. Woods was given an examining trial and was released on $5,000 bond.

THE Democratic campaign was opened in this State, Monday, by speaking in more than one hundred counties. The principal meeting was at Henderson, where Gov. Beckham and ex-Gov. McCreary spoke.

JUDGE CRAM, of Williamstown, was not favored with a large audience here Monday to hear him speak. She people of this county had been from home a good part of last week, and did not feel that they could break into another week so soon.

ELECTION bills will begin to show up thick and fast at Frankfort this week. Representative Stephens said to the RECORDER, Monday, that he is one of the few members who have not conceived the idea that they can draw an election law that will be a beauty and a joy forever.

THE attitude of the German voters toward the Republicans is annoying the party leaders considerably. The Germans have always been opposed to imperialism, and it is feared that President McKinley's record on that subject will drive them into the Democratic party this fall.

THE Republican headquarters at Chicago has issued a bulletin stating that Brig. Gen. Wheeler will take the stump for McKinley directly after his retirement from the army, September 13th. This Gen. Wheeler denies, and says his political record is a sufficient index of where he stands now.

MR. YERKES, Republican candidate for Governor of Kentucky, opened his campaign, Monday at Bowling Green, in the presence of a very large crowd. It is plain from his speech that he does not want the Legislature to make any change in the election law, which he pretends to take pleasure in denouncing.

THE contest for the Democratic nomination for Congress in this district is becoming quite interesting, in as much as there is a very large vote that has not made a choice as between the candidates, and for that vote hard work is being done by the candidates, and should either be so fortunate as to land it, he will have made a considerable advance toward victory. Each candidate is making extravagant claimes to stimulate his friends, and there is, evidently, a big disappointment in store for somebody.

THERE are two candidates announced for Justice of the Peace in the district composed of the Petersburg and Bellevue voting precincts, Messrs. Chas. H. Acra and Solon Early. That the race will be a hot one and a fight to the finish there can be no doubt. Not the emoluments but the honor that attaches to the office is what induces these two true and tried Democrats to enter the contest for Justice of the Peace, a very important office to the property owners who put up the wherewith to keep the county bills liquidated. The friends of the two candidates are disposed to have them conduct a series of joint debates in the district, but they are not likely to accede to their wishes.

"What reason can Democrats who refused to support the ticket last year give for not supporting it now? Goebel, who was obnoxious to scores of good citizens, has passed away, and the manner of his death was so shocking and cruel that many regret their opposition. A fair election law will take the place of the law that induced thousands to leave the party last year. Undoubtedly, in this campaign the Democratic party stands for good government, for orderly methods, for obedience to the law. The causes that created dissension last year have been removed.

"Let us drop all disturbing and confusing prefixes to the word Democratic, and, instead of having "Bryan" Democrats, "Gold" Democrats, "Silver" Democrats, "Brown" Democrats and "Goebel" Democrats, have only good old-fashioned Democrats and, under this historic name, let us unite and win.

"The reputation of Kentucky is at stake. Differences of opinion about national affairs should not be allowed to interfere with the high duty we owe to our State. Its peace and happiness at home and good name abroad."

HON. JOHN D. CARROLL, who supported John Young Brown for Governor last year, took part in the opening of the Democratic campaign, last Monday, at New Castle, Henry county, and his speech was a hot number. He said in part:

"The personality of the candidates is not in issue; the contest is between the people and the measures represented by them. Yerkes, the candidate, can not be any better than his party; he represents all it stands for and has done.

"The lawful contest of the Democrats was met by the Republicans with murder; for the first time in our history an election is made necessary by the assassination of a candidate. Assassination is not an American or a Democratic crime; it belongs to the anarchists of Italy and the Republican mountaineers of Kentucky.

"Political parties are properly held responsible for the acts of their leaders. Taylor is a typical Republican and a fair representative of his party.

"Powers had a fair trial before a jury of his own selection, and was defended by able counsel; his trial was the trial of the Republican party, and, by a fair and impartial jury, it, too, was found guilty of the murder of Goebel; of preventing by force the arrest of his murderers; of granting them pardons before arrest or trial; of conspiring to kill members of the Legislature; of attempting to terrorize the Contest Boards; of bringing armed and desperate men to the State capital to murder Democratic office-holders; of creating a state of lawlessness and disorder never before witnessed in the State; of placing the civil authority in subordination to the military; of driving the law-making department from its hall, and chasing its members like outlaws through the streets of the capital; of converting the State buildings into an armed camp; of denying the highest court in the State the right to sit in quiet in its accustomed place. Of those and other high crimes and misdemeanors it has been convicted, and the verdict will be approved at the polls in November.

AT the primary election held in Owen county, last Saturday, the following Democrats were nominated for county offices: County Judge, C. W. Threlkeld; Attorney, J. G. Vallindingham; Clerk, I. J. Walker; Sheriff, W. P. Swope; School Superintendent, M. H. Bourne; Jailer, Sam Mason; Assessor, Reed Caldwell; Surveyor, P. D. Foster; Coronor, H. S. Swope; Representative, C. S. Thornton.

THE person who contributed to Sunday's Enquirer the article in regard to the antics of spreading adders in this county, had a bountiful store of misinformation. No spreading adder has ever been seen in this county cavoiting around, standing upright on its tail, while it carried on the back of its neck a large pouch of venom which it squirted at all whom it met, carrying sure death for any person it chance to settle on.

STANDING ARMIES.

[Bourk Cockran, in N. Y. Journal.]

Standing armies always have been and always must be fatal to free institutions. To realize the utter incompatibility of militarism and Republicanism we have but to look at France. When we recall the first French Republic scattering the combined forces of Europe through the valor of its volunteer armies, how pitiful is the spectacle of the third republic cowering in abject fear of its own standing army, incapable of wielding any influence abroad, impotent even to do justice at home.

The experience of this country proves that a citizen soldiery is invincible against foreign aggression or domestic insurrection, while all history shows that a mercenary soldiery has never been so formidable to any country as the one which supports it.

A standing army in the long run has always become helpless against foreign foes, but it has always remained of deadly efficiency against domestic liberties.

The soldier in war may be a hero, the soldier in peace is either useless or dangerous. The camp may be a school of virtue and patriotism, the barracks are always asylums of laziness and often hotbeds of vice. The moral law is binding on nations as well as on individuals. A violation of it by either is always followed by retribution, slow, perhaps, but inexorably stern.

He who draws the sword will perish by the sword, and the republic that establishes a standing army to smite freedom in other lands will live to find her own liberties trampled in the dust under the feet of a mercenary soldier,

Aside from its inherent hostility to free institutions, a standing army is a crushing burden on the neck of the laborer, because it operates to reduce his earning capacity, while at the same time he is forced to bear the whole expense of its maintenance.

Every dollar of surplus product or capital invested in implements, in machinery, in buildings, is a fruitful dollar. Commodities used in production multiply themselves even while they perish.

Every dollar expended for munitions of war is a sterile dollar.

It is not used for the purpose of production, but for the purpose of destruction. It is wasted as completely as if it were thrown into the sea.

A standing army imposes upon each laborer the burden of supporting two men—himself and a soldier—while at the same time it diminishes his earning capacity by dissipating the capital on which his productive efficiency depends.

But far worse than the spoliation of the laborer is the degradation which he suffers from a standing army.

Militarism has always despised industry.

The world Power which the imperialist invites us to become would be a Power based on conquest and violence, a survival of barbarism, a world Power consistent with the darkness and ignorance of the tenth century. This world Power which we are is a light of civilization and progress gilding with splendor the dawn of the twentieth century. What patriot would prefer for his country an eminence of force, of violence, of barbarism, to an eminence of peace, of progress and of civilization?

I oppose this novel un-American policy of imperialism, because the grounds on which its advocates support it are puerile, inconsistent and dishonest; because it involves the existence of a standing army to menace liberty and to oppose labor by diminishing wages; because it is cowardly to invade the rights of the weak while respecting those of the strong, because it would divorce the American flag and the American Constitution by sending the one where the other cannot go; because it is a policy of inconceivable folly from a material point of view, and a policy of unspeakable infamy from a moral point of view.

In this impression will be found the card of John L. Vest, attorney-at-law, Independence, Ky. Mr. Vest, will be glad to receive the business of all who desire legal advice.

Crop and Stock.

S. C. Carpenter, of Millersburg sold to T. C. Houtchens, of Nelson county, a combined show mare for $1,500.

At North Middletown H. S. Caywood bought 200 ewes of Mr. Alleh; he sold 75 ewes to Mr. Sullivan at $4 per head.

Miss Lucy Bush, of Anderson county, had a field of wheat threshed which yielded 45 bushels per acre—a good yield for Anderson county soil.

After Wm. Yeager, of Boyle county, had harvested his wheat this season, he but the same field in corn, and says he will get a crop that will average 8 barrels to the acre.

The Hustonville fair made money and Treasurer J. H. Hockea is making the stockholders happy by sending them checks for $13, when they put in only $10 less than a month ago.

J. W. Forsythe has soldto Jno. Madden his valuable thoroughbred mare, Ballyhoo, in foal to Kingston and with a weanling by Kingston, for $11,000. The mare is the dam of Ballyhoo Bey, that won the $33,000 Futurity Saturday at Sheepshead Bay, ridden by Tod Sloan. Mr. Forsythe sold Ballyhoo Bey at a yearling for $12,000.

In the broom corn belt of Illinois there is a well-authenticated rumor that the broom-corn trust is about to collapse. The trust was organized a year ago at Evansville, Ind., with a capital of $2,000,000, and each share placed at $20,000, 100 shares being issued and sold. Most of the shares were purchased by Eastern capitalists, although a few shares were sold to parties in the broom corn district. Among the shareholders in the broom-corn district is Thos. Lyons, the banker, at Arcola, an acknowledged broom-corn king; Duncan & Tarbox, of Arcalo, and Merkle, Wiley & Co., of Paris, and a man named Marshall, of Charleston. Last year in the aggregate the broom-corn district produced 30.000 tons of brush, and of this the trust secured 21,000 tons, part of which it sold at $140 a ton. This corn cost the trust $80 a ton. At that time corn could be had in plenty of manufacturers at four cents a pound, but after the trust secured the major part it proceeded to raise the price to seven cents a pound, and then to ten cents a pound, or $200 a ton.

The present total tonnage of broom corn in the district, when it is all harvested, will not exceed 25,000 tons. It is of inferior quality. This corn will all be on the market inside of the next thirty days, and the broom-corn trust is confronted with two propositions, one of which it will have to meet. The trust must sell its holdings at $150 a ton at once, or it must buy up the present crop at $100 to $125 a ton to protect itself. The question which now confronts the trust is said to be to get an additional million or so of dollars to buy with.—Chicago Record.

The Bravery of Woman.

Was gradually shown by Mrs. John Dowling, of Butler, Pa., in a three years' struggle with a malignant stomach trouble that caused distressing attacks of nausea indigestion. All remedies failed to relieve her until she tried Electric Bitters. After taking it two months she wrote: "I am now wholly cured and can eat anything. It is truly a grand tonic for the whole system as I gained in weight and feel much stronger since using it." It aids digestion, cures dyspepsia, improves appetite, gives new life. Only 50c. Guaranteed, at McKim's, Burlington, Oelsner's, Florence, Crouch's, Union.

Noah Bryant, a young man, was seriously injured while digging a well in Hardin county. He had ignited the fuse to a blast in the well, and after waiting, as he thought, ample time for the blast to explode he entered the well, and was blown out.

Ex-Governor Llewellyn, of Kansas, died of heart failure at Topeka.

Rhinock the Strong Man.

[Cincinnati Enquirer of Sept 21, 1900.]

"The congressional fight is now a two-man affair," said a Sixth District Democrat yesterday. "It is Rhinock or Berry, and the chances strongly favor Rhinock. Since Berry's treachery to Goebel he has lost his standing with the party. From the very first of this canvass the sentiment of the average Democratic voter has been "Any one to beat Berry." Rhinock has shown beyond question that he is the strongest man of the three who oppose Berry. He has made a clean, active and wholly Democratic fight; he has been ever willing and is thoroughly able to meet any of his opponents upon the stump; he has been the most active supporter of Goebel in the Sixth District, and he goes into the contest with nearly the solid strength of his county behind him. With the heavy vote he will get in Campbell county he will have nearly enough to nominate him. The Democrats of the outside counties who hope to see Berry punished for his treachery appreciate these things. They will not throw their votes away. They only waited to see who was the strongest man. Their votes will nominate Rhinock."

The congressional contest vote arranged by the management of Lagoon for Covington Day, August 31, resulted in Hon. Joseph L. Rhinock being awarded the palm of victory, his popularity being attested by the magnificent vote of 4,873, while Hon. D. Linn Gooch received but 1,113.

The friends of Mr. Rhinock were jubilant at the result, and he was showered with congratulations from ardent admirers, who intimate that this straw vote is prophetic of what is to follow when the people rally around the primary polls September 22.

MR. BRYAN remarked to his Lincoln audience that "those who to-day say that the dollar of trade is superior to the rights of the Filipinos will be saying in a few years that money is more important than man, and that those only who have great wealth have sufficient at stake to have a voice in the Government here." But are we not face to face with that condition now? It is true the rich men have only one vote each at the polls—except when they buy floaters—but no one pretends to deny that organized wealth, after the people have voted, goes deliberately to work to buy legislators, thus by the power of money completely upsetting the theory of proportional representation. One man like Carnegie or Rockefeller by buying a Congressman, for instance, is able to defeat the will of the thousands who elected the representative. In Belgium a man's voting capacity depends on how much money he has. A laborer can cast only one ballot, but a capitalist can cast five, ten or twenty. Over there the man is frankly considered inferior to money and the right of suffrage is regulated accordingly. Over here, in theory, it is different, but as a matter of fact, there is no difference at all.—Louisville Times.

"I suffered for thirty years with diarrhoea and thought I was past being cured," says John S. Halloway, of French Camp, Miss. "I had spent so much time and money and suffered so much that I had given up all hopes of recovery. I was so feeble from the effects of the diarrhoea that I could do no kind of labor could not even travel, but by accident I was permitted to find a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and after taking several bottles I am entirely cured of that trouble. I am so pleased with the result that I am anxious that it be in reach of all who suffer as I have." For sale by McKim, Burlington, C. S. Balsly, Bullittsville, O. N. There will be preaching at the Methodist church on Sunday the 16th, at 11 o'clock a. m., and 7:30 p. m. The pastor being on his last round desires to close up his work as well as possible. He would be glad of a full attendance of the membership.

May I call attention to a short notice in your columns, saying that, "an effort will be made to induce the annual M. E. Conference to appoint Rev. T. W. Barker Presiding Elder for this district." Allow me to say that I am a personal friend to Rev. T. W. Barker and that I would rejoice at his welfare, still this "effort" does not come through me, nor by my knowledge or consent. If by Bro. Barker's knowledge or consent the "effort" will defeat its own end. No such custom prevails among the Methodists. Believing there is a God Who rules in His church, the Methodist pray to Him, asking that He will send them such a man as they need, and as will be most helpful to them spiritually. They pray: "Send us Bro. B. if Thou see it best for us, but Thy will be done." God can rule in the hearts and acts of men as well as elsewhere to answer prayer.

The method the Methodist insist upon lest those who do the least, spiritually, may insist upon managing most, officiously and get angriest when they do not get their own way. This does not look well in christians, nor work well for christianity.

Yours for Christ's Kingdom.
J. W. HARRIS.

The farmers of Ness county, Kansas, have clubbed together and bought 1,000 pounds of bisulphide of carbon, to be used in driving the prairie dogs out. There is no doubt about its driving the prairie dogs out. The trouble is that the population may have to go with them.

The average annual rainfall of the Indian continent, calculated upon data extending over the last thirty years, is forty-one inches. In 1896 the deficiency was five inches. In 1899 (when the monsoon broke that regulated the harvests of 1900) the deficiency was over eleven inches, or 27 per cent. Such a deficit is unparalleled in Indian records.

Mollie Big Buffalo is one of the prettiest and cleverest Ponca Indian girls who was ever graduated from Carlisle. Consul General Mason, at Berlin, reports that liquid air has been tested at Vienna and found less effective than dynamite, guncotton, explosive gelatin or giant powder. It was mixed with silicious marl and solar oil and put in paper cartridge shells. When fresh the cartridges were powerful and well adapted to coal mining, but they lose gas by evaporation rapidly and become after a little time ineffective.

Japan has embarked in a new enterprise, that of artificial pearl growing. A special kind of oyster is selected, and by a course of treatment it is made to produce a pearl. This business is carried on in Miye prefecture, and recently the crown prince and princess visited the site of the oyster beds at Ise. Through the prefectural governor twenty-seven pearls of various sizes were submitted by the owner of the beds to the royal personages.

According to Prof. O. L. Howard, chief of the bureau of entomology at Washington, the honey industry has shown marked development in recent years, and there are to-day more than 300,000 persons engaged in it, the value of the product being $20,000,000. There are 110 aparian societies and eighty journals devoted to the industry. Much of the honey is exported, England being the chief purchaser. Nor has the limit by any means been reached.

A farmer in Clay county, Iowa, had a bin containing about 800 bushels of wheat. When he got ready to market the grain, he discovered that a hen had established her nest on the wheat, and that to remove the grain would "break her up." He decided not to disturb her, but to wait until she came off with her chicks. In the meantime the price of wheat advanced until the farmer discovered that he had gained over $100 by allowing her to sit it out.

"The worn-out farms of Virginia, principally in Allegmanie and adjacent counties, of late have been turned to good account by their owners, who have directed their attention to violet growing. The violet industry is spreading rapidly in that section, and the growers, the most successful of whom are women, employ small Negro boys to carry on the work, which, while not laborious, is tedious, for the violets require constant attention. The greater part of the yield is taken to Philadelphia dealers.

The new Croton dam at the Cornell site is built in an approximately north and south line across the bed of the Croton river, about three and a quarter miles above its junction with the Hudson. It will cost about $5,000,000, and be the largest and most extensive yet built on this continent, and in extreme dimensions and volume of masonry probably second to none in the world. Its height is certainly the greatest of any in the world, and the total amount of masonry of all kinds is about 670,000 cubic yards.

ROCKHILL HEARD FROM

The Special Commissioner Tells of the Conditions in China as He Found Them.

Chinese Government Is Able to Break the Concert and to Bring About a Disagreement.

This Is the Greatest Crisis in the History of the Chinese Empire—All Other Questions Sink Into Insignificance.

Shanghai, Sept. 3.—Mr. William Woodville Rockhill, special commissioner of the United States government to investigate [illegible] on conditions in China in an interview with a press representative emphasizing the importance of the harmonious action of the powers as a measure of self-defense, said:

"If the Chinese government is able to break the concert of nations and to bring about a disagreement on the part of any government, in such a way as to secure the relaxation of the joint demands, all the foreigners in China may as well pack up and leave.

"This is the best opportunity to settle for all time the status of foreigners in China. If that matter is not settled now the Chinese will be encouraged to persist in their present policy and the powers will have the whole trouble to thrash over again every two or three years. I believe that all the governments are impressed with this truth; and I believe that most of them realize that a definite and permanent settlement of the status of foreigners and the establishment of freedom of trade are more important to them now than the acquisition of territory.

"This has been a deliberately planned movement on the part of the Chinese government to expel all foreigners. The decrees printed in the Imperial Gazette prove this. The movement has been practically successful, since every foreigner in the interior has been obliged to seek refuge in the treaty ports. The imperial government merely utilized the Boxers as convenient accessories to its schemes.

"The relief of Peking is merely an incident of the crisis. The really important work remains to be done. Marquis Ito, probably the best informed man alive on eastern politics, said to me that the present was the greatest crisis in the history of China and that all preceding eastern questions sunk into insignificance beside it. Are civilized nations to yield to the Chinese conceit of their own superiority?"

Mr. Rockhill and other officials in Shanghai, like the public, are utterly ignorant of the course of diplomatic and military events in Peking. The consuls of the various governments have sent frequent telegrams to their respective ministers but have been unable to get replies. It is suspected that official messages are tampered with between Shanghai and Chee-Foo.

The attitude of the southern viceroys in protecting foreigners commands confidence in their good faith; and negotiations will probably be conducted through them.

Li Hung Chang still remains in Shanghai. He is thoroughly discredited but is intriguing to get the foreigners to quarrel among themselves.

Washington, Sept. 3.—So far as can be ascertained, there were no important developments in the Chinese situation here Sunday. The officials maintain unusual reticence. They say they have no information to make public regarding the replies to the American-Russian propositions regarding the withdrawal of the military forces of the powers from Peking. Mr. Adee, the acting secretary of state, has decided for the present not to make any statements as to the names of the powers which have answered, or to indicate whether the replies are of an affirmative character, on the ground that publication of the attitude of the powers might embarrass the present negotiations.

It is impossible, therefore, to learn definitely to what extent answers have been received. The opinion prevails, however, that none of a conclusive character have as yet come to hand, such communications as have been received being merely of a preliminary character. In diplomatic circles the opinion prevails that none of the great powers have as yet reached a final determination as to the course they will pursue.

Tien-Tsin, Aug. 25.—The Germans have formally demanded for themselves all the buildings and grounds of the camp of the United States troops, explaining that these will be needed by the large German forces soon to arrive. FIFTEEN WERE KILLED

An Excursion Train Wrecked Near Hatfield, Pa., Sunday.

It Was Running at the Rate of Thirty-Five Miles an Hour and Crashed Into the Rear End of a Milk Train.

Philadelphia, Sept. 3.—Fifteen persons killed and 14 others injured is the appalling record of a rear end collision between an excursion train and a milk train on the Bethlehem branch of the Philadelphia & Reading railway Sunday morning at Hatfield, Pa., 27 miles north of this city.

Of the killed 11 were passengers on the excursion train and four were on the milk train, which as stated was standing at a water station when wrecked by the excursion train.

The wrecked train consisted of ten day coaches, and was the first section of a large excursion made up of people from Bethlehem, Allentown and surrounding towns to Atlantic City. This section carried only those persons who lived in Bethlehem and Allentown, and left the union depot in Bethlehem at 6:05 a. m., exactly 35 minutes behind the milk train. The latter train consisted of two milk cars and two passenger coaches and had stopped at every station on the road from Bethlehem en route to Philadelphia. At 6:54 the milk train drew up at the milk platform at Hatfield, and in less than two minutes the special excursion train, running at the rate of 35 miles an hour crashed into the milk train. The locomotive ploughed through the two passenger coaches and crushed them as if they were egg shells. The milk car immediately in front was also badly wrecked.

The excursion train was a picture of indescribable horror. The locomotive was a mass of bent and broken iron and firmly held the bodies of its engineer and fireman beneath its great weight. Behind the engine six of the ten cars are also a mass of wreckage. The first car was broken in twain and the other five cars were thrown on their sides, completely demolished. Nine persons were killed in the first two cars and the others in those coaches were badly maimed.

As soon as the crash came a terrible cry rose from the smashed cars and those who had not been injured quickly crawled or jumped from the cars and went to the assistance of the injured. Many were pinned down by wreckage and had to be freed by the liberal use of axes. With three or four exceptions the dead were killed instantly, the others dying on their way to the hospitals. All the injured were first taken to a shed at the Hatfield station and the dead were removed to a barn. Messengers were sent to the nearby villages for physicians and a relief train was telegraphed for from Bethlehem. With 15 doctors and half a dozen nurses a special train was sent from Bethlehem but before it reached the scene of the wreck, it was signalled to return to Bethlehem, as a special, carrying nearly all the injured, had started for that place. On the run from Hatfield to the hospital three of the injured died.

The special train arrived at Bethlehem at 11:30 and was met by fully 5,000 persons, all clamoring to get a bit of news of the wreck or trying to learn whether loved ones were among the victims. The news of the wreck had reached Bethlehem at 8 o'clock and spread like wildfire. All the policemen of the town were gathered at the station and it was with great difficulty that the injured were moved to the waiting ambulances and other vehicles which conveyed them to the hospitals.

There are conflicting stories as to responsibility for the accident. One version is that the engineer of the excursion train had been warned at Souderton, the station above Hatfield, that a milk train was a few minutes ahead of him. Another story is that the train dispatcher's office in Philadelphia was at fault. The trainmen refused to talk of the accident.

Fifteen hundred tickets had been sold for the excursion to the seashore and it was to have been the last of the season.

Drowned in a Bear Trap.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 3.—Edward Harrington, 13 years old, son of Jas. Harrington, a tobacco worker, was bathing Sunday afternoon in the bear trap at the foot of the new coral. Several youngsters had gone in swimming there, and young Harrington, not noticing that the trap was open, went too close and was swept out into the river.

HE DEFENDS PECK.

Did Not Act Discourteously to State Representatives at the Paris Exposition, as Charged.

New York, Sept. 3.—The French line steamer La Touraine arrived from Havre Sunday. In the cabin was Arthur Valois, United States commissioner to the Paris exposition. He defended Commissioner General Peck from the cabled charge that he has acted discourteously to state representatives at the exposition.

In speaking of the story that Mr. Peck had secretly worked to prevent Mrs. Manning and Mrs. Potter Palmer from being decorated by the French government, he said: "That is impossible, for I know how such things are done. The names for the Legion of Honor are handed in and passed on their merits. I know that Mr. Peck presented the [illegible] of Mrs. Manning, Mrs. Potter Palmer and Michael H. De Young for the order. As to there being criticism over there being so many representatives from the United States, and the difficulty of supplying all with invitations to entertainments, all I can say is that there is always trouble when a big enterprise like the exposition is under way. There certainly are many officials from this country to the exposition."

Lieuts. F. H. Brnenby, T. P. Howard, F. Moale, jr., and J. W. Chan, U. S. N., returned on La Touraine. They are on their way from the Asiatic station to report to the navy department.

Miss Reilly, a daughter of Capt. Reilly, who was recently killed in China, and her aunt, Mrs. Rice Smith, also arrived.

BANKED WITH FLOWERS.

The Funeral Services Over the Remains of the Late Rev. Dr. Royal H. Pullman.

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 3.—In the beautiful First Universalist church which he saw as a result of his labor and his faith Rev. Dr. Royal H. Pullman, brother of the late George M. Pullman, the palace car magnate, received the last tribute from his friends and parishioners Sunday. The service took the place of the regular Sunday morning service at the church. At 11 o'clock the casket containing the remains of Dr. Pullman was carried into the sanctuary and placed before the altar. Great banks of flowers almost hid it from sight.

In the pews below the altar sat the members of the dead pastor's family, Rev. Dr. James M. Pullman, of Massachusetts, his brother; Mrs. Smith, of Chicago, his daughter; Mrs. George H. Pullman, his son, and others. The simple service of the Universalist church was read by Rev. D. Charles H. Eaton, of New York, one of Dr. Pullman's friends and fellow workers. The interment was at London Park cemetery and was private.

RUN DOWN BY A TRAIN.

Three Killed and One Person Injured at a Railway Crossing Near Syracuse, N. Y.

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 3.—The fast mail train due in this city at 8:40 p. m. struck a carriage containing four people at Oswego Junction, four miles west of here Sunday night. Patrick J. Foley, of Syracuse, Ellen Foley, of Split Rock, his sister and Josephine F. Blanchard, of Syracuse, were killed and Michael Maroney was injured. The party were on a pleasure drive. There is no night flagman at Oswego Junction and another train standing on the track prevented the party from seeing the fast mail approach on the inside track at a speed of 40 miles an hour.

Washington, Sept. 3.—An accident on the Chesapeake Beach railway at Chesapeake Junction, Md., Sunday night caused the death of one man and injury to two others, all train hands, and a woman passenger. G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT.

The Officers Elected and the Next Meeting Place Selected.

Congress Will Be Asked to Pass a Bill Providing for a Court of Appeals to Act on Pension Applications.

Chicago, Aug. 28.—The 34th annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, which was formally opened Sunday night by the monster meeting in the Coliseum, is in full blast, and in all respects it promises to be the greatest and most successful encampment the army has ever held.

The first day of the encampment was devoted to the [illegible] and sea of the civil war. They are a small band now. Of the 132,000 men enlisted in the navy in the early days of the war, less than 1,000 marched here, and it is agreed by the old sailors that their number was greater in the march than it will ever be in any parade to come.

Chicago, Aug. 29.—For four and a half hours the thinning ranks of the Grand Army of the Republic passed in review before their leaders and before probably a million spectators packed in almost a solid mass along the four miles of the lines of parade. It marked the climax of the 34th annual encampment of the association of veterans who filled the pages of history with deeds of heroism during the weary years of the civil war, and was, according to Commander-in-Chief Shaw, the greatest parade since that day in Washington when the hundreds of thousands of veterans, the most powerful army on earth, marched in review to their final dismandment.

One especially sad incident occurred to mar in a degree the glory of the parade. Charles Beckwith, of Algonsea, Mich., dropped dead as the line was filing past the corner of Michigan avenue and Madison street.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—In Studebaker hall, Wednesday morning, the veterans of the G. A. R. turned their attention to matters of business. The annual meeting was formally called to order at 10:30 o'clock by Commander-in-Chief Shaw.

The total membership of the Grand Army of the Republic in good standing June 30, 1899, was 6,905 posts, with a membership of 287,981; on December 31, 1899, 7,072 posts, with a membership of 287,368; on June 30, 1900, 6,778 posts, with a membership of 276,662.

Members in good standing June 30, 1900, 276,662; members remaining suspended June 30, 1900, 29,474. Total borne on rolls, 306,136.

Reports received from departments show 9,669 members were dropped from rolls, having been previously suspended.

Chicago, Aug. 31.—The G. A. R. convention was called to order promptly at 9 o'clock by Commander-in-Chief Shaw. The committee appointed to consider the report of the commander-in-chief approved of it, with the exception of his recommendation of an effort to secure the change of the date of memorial day from May 30 to the last Sunday in May. The report was adopted.

The report of the committee on pension was adopted. The main feature of the report was a petition to congress to pass a bill providing for a court of appeals to act immediately on the thousands of pension applications now pending and which court of appeals shall have final jurisdiction.

Pension matters being disposed of, the election of officers was taken up and resulted in the election of the following:

Commander-in-Chief—Leo Rassieur St. Louis.

Junior Vice Commander—Frank Seamon, Knoxville, Tenn.

Surgeon General—John A. Wilkins, Delta, O.

Chaplain-in-Chief—Rev. A. Drahms, San Quentin, Cal.

The officers were all elected by acclamation.

The place for the next annual encampment was then taken up. There was no contest for the honor of entertaining the veterans in 1901, Denver apparently being the unanimous choice of the delegates, and the bid of the western city for the distinction met with no opposition.

The installation of the new officers then took place, and shortly before 6 o'clock an adjournment sine die was taken.

Russia's New Calendar.

It is said that Russia is about to adopt a new calendar. Each year contains 13 months of twenty-eight days each, and begins on Monday and ends on Saturday. NEBRASKA THE LAND OF PLENTY

I wonder why it is that so many men spend their days working hard on rented farms, barely making enough to get along, with no great prospect ahead of owning their own homes, when within a few hours' journey is a land of plenty—Nebraska—where all kinds of grain and fruit can be raised with the least amount of labor; where cattle and hogs fed on corn bring a handsome profit; where the climate is healthful and churches and schools abound; where land is cheap and can be bought on very easy terms.

Think of this, and if you want information about the country send to me for "The Corn Belt," a beautifully illustrated monthly paper that tells all about Nebraska, and also for "The West Nebraska Grazing Country," an interesting illustrated booklet containing a large sectional map of Nebraska.

On the first and third Tuesdays of each month during the balance of this year cheap excursion tickets will be sold over our road to Nebraska, so that people may go and see for themselves. Ask your ticket agent about this.

BECKHAM'S MESSAGE.

The Governor Claims That the Present System Aided the Republicans Through Its Being Misunderstood.

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 29.—Governor Beckham, in his message, read Tuesday afternoon, said:

Gentlemen of the senate and house of representatives:

You have been assembled here in extraordinary session for the single purpose of amending the election laws of the state, and I shall confine to state briefly the reasons why I believe the occasion to be extraordinary and why I have called you here in session at this time.

Section 8 of the constitution of Kentucky reads as follows (concerning the governor's power):

"He may on extraordinary occasions convene the general assembly at the seat of government or at a different place, if that should have become dangerous from [illegible] and may in case of disagreement between the two houses with respect to the time of adjournment, he may adjourn them to such time as he may think proper, not exceeding four months. When he shall convene the general assembly it shall be by proclamation, stating the subjects to be considered, and no others shall be considered."

I consider that some changes in our election laws at the present time would be productive of much good, and would remove some of the unfortunate bitterness and dissatisfaction that now exist among our people. The present laws on the subject are undoubtedly distasteful to a large number of people in the state, and their amendment is earnestly desired by all those who want to relieve, as much as possible, the friction and ill feeling engendered by hostile political factions.

An exciting and important political contest in the state is about to begin, and all good citizens desire to see that contest conducted in an orderly and peaceable a manner as possible, and it is not only essential that the laws controlling the election should be fair, but also that every honest citizen, whatever may be his political faith, should believe them to be fair.

A law to be satisfactory must not only be good, but must be generally considered so by a large majority of the people. I do not believe the present law in its operation to have been fair, and I am just, and I know it to have been passed with the earnest and honest intention to remedy the evils which existed under the system which it supplanted. It was a great improvement upon that system, but, by reason of a strong prejudice against it, many people have been led to believe that the change was a mistake, and the law a bad one. This prejudice against it, whether reasonable or not, is sufficient to justify your consideration and warrant you to take some action in securing a more satisfactory law.

I know it is your wish, as well as mine, that the election in this state shall be so fair, so just, so honorable, that no citizen in the commonwealth shall have cause to complain as to the law and its administration, and that, whatever the result, every fair-minded citizen, whether he sides with the victor or the vanquished, can say that the verdict of the people has been properly recorded and the victory awarded to him who deserved it.

Let us have such a law, if possible. I will gladly co-operate with you in the effort to secure it. I have not called you here to legislate on this subject with the idea that a fair election would not be held under the present law, for I am firmly convinced that if the law in its operation has been unfair or unjust to any one, it has been so to those who were charged with being its beneficiaries, who gained nothing by any unjust manipulation of the law, but who lost many thousands of votes by reason of the violent prejudice against it. However, this opposition exists, and you should deal with it frankly and considerately, as I feel confident that you will.

Imaginary ills, whether political or physical, should be treated as well as real ones. Your task in this matter is a difficult one. You can not satisfy everybody. I do not desire to suggest in detail any law for your consideration. I have confidence in your judgment and wisdom, and I believe that you will earnestly and patriotically set to work to frame a law in appearance as well as in fact so fair and so just to all parties that no honest citizen can find fault with it.

J. C. W. BECKHAM,
Governor of Kentucky.

Pursued a Hundred Miles.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 29.—After a chase of over 100 miles through some of Kentucky's roughest country Detective J. N. Ashby landed J. B. Menson in jail here, with a charge of horse stealing against him. Menson is accused of taking a horse from B. F. Bridge's stable at Owensboro and a buggy from Mrs. Lily Brown's stable. When the theft was discovered Detective Ashby gave chase, following his man through Breckinridge and Meade counties. He finally landed him near Owenton.

The doctor who took the photographs denies that Kittman was burned seriously.

MINERS MAY STRIKE.

The Men in Anthracite Regions Almost Sure to Walk Out.

The Bituminous Miners Will Also Go Out If the Operators Ship Coal Into the Anthracite Region of Supply.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 1.—"In my opinion there will be a strike in the anthracite region of Pennsylvania and it will be the biggest the United States has ever known," said President John Mitchell, of the United Mine Workers' of America. Mr. Mitchell had just returned from a trip east during which he was present at the convention of the miners at Hazelton, Pa.

"Of course a strike must be ordered by the executive council of the organization," he continued, "but all indications point to a big tie up. The situation in a nutshell is simply this: We have formulated our demands for an advance of about 20 per cent. in wages and the removal of certain conditions that exist in the anthracite region. Principal among these is that the operators in dealing with the miners allow 3,300 pounds to a ton and in selling coal sell 2,000 pounds for a ton.

"If the strike is ordered I believe that 140,000 men will come out. Of course I do not mean that these men will lay down their tools at once, but strike spirit is like war spirit, it grows continually and when once part of the men are out in an effort to better their condition, the others will quickly follow.

"I do not know just what percentage of the anthracite miners are in the mine workers' organization, but I firmly believe that 75,000 men will quit the first day our men are ordered out. If the bituminous miners attempt to supply the market for the anthracite dealers we will be compelled to call out all of the men in such mines as supply this coal."

SCALE NOT SIGNED.

Three Thousand Miners Are Out of Work, But Expect to Return Soon.

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 1.—On account of the failure of miners and coal operators at Coal Creek to agree on a wage scale, the annual contract with the miners was not signed, as had been the custom. The miners decided to adjourn the convention till September 10. On account of this failure to agree, all coal mines in Coal Creek, Jellico, Middlesboro and intervening points, with the exception of two or three mines, are closed down. It is not a strike, as both miners and operators are hopeful of reaching an agreement by September 10. About 3,000 miners are affected.

It is not a trouble between the miners' union and the operators, though the union is very active in the matter, only about 50 per cent. of the miners belonging to the union. All week there has been a conference of miners and operators at Coal Creek, at which the miners have demanded an increase of 17 per cent. in wages, eight hours daily labor and pay days twice a month. The operators have refused to concede these demands thus far.

KRUGER AND STEYN.

It Is Believed the Two Presidents Are Preparing for Flight—Are Now at Barberton.

Pretoria, Sept. 3.—Mr. Kruger and Mr. Steyn have gone to Barberton. It is believed that they are preparing for flight. The general opinion is that the war is now very near the end; but should the Boers construct strongholds in the bush, on the veldt or elsewhere, and begin a system of raids, the British would require further large supplies of horses.

Gen. Buller moved 14 miles northwestward along the Lydenburg road and crossed Crocodile river to Badfontein. He found the Boers concentrating in the Crocodile mountains. A force of Boers under Commandant Theron broke through the British lines and captured and burned a supply train at Klip River Station, taking 35 prisoners. Brabant's horse proceeded thither, recaptured all the prisoners and drove the Boers into the hills. Evans refused to believe the statement until the friend insisted that he was present at the ceremony. Then Evans hurried to a nearby drug store, purchased ten grains of morphine, and, going to a saloon, swallowed the drug. When found he was almost dead, and two physicians labored with him for hours before they was able to bring him around. He is still very low.

The young lady in question has heard of the joke, and is deeply incensed. She will wed Evans as soon as he recovers.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.

The Meeting of the Supreme Lodge and the Supreme Lodge of the Pythian Sisterhood.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 29.—Masonic temple Tuesday appeared transformed into a temple of Pythianism. Several largely attended gatherings of Pythians and branch orders were in progress simultaneously within the big structure. Chief of these were the opening meetings of the supreme lodge, K. of P., and of the supreme lodge of the Pythian Sisterhood. The initial meeting of the order of Bathbone Sister was postponed until Wednesday.

The report of the supreme keeper of records and seal, [illegible] shows that the total number of subordinate lodges December 31, 1899, was 6,740. Total membership, 492,506; net gain during 1898 and 1899, 58 lodges and 21,237 members. Practically 90 per cent. of the gain was in 1899. Illinois led in the gains, with Indiana and Ohio close seconds. Louisiana suffered a net loss of 782. The appropriations at the Indianapolis biennial in 1898 were $98,550, of which $83,892 had been expended at the close of the fiscal year. Subordinate lodges had been organized in Hawaii, Alaska, Cuba and Quebec.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 30.—The military division of the order of Knights of Pythias did itself proud in its biennial parade, and the vast crowds who witnessed the inspiring pageant gave enthusiastic approval all along the line of march. Nine thousand uniformed and helmeted knights and musicians marched in rapid and orderly manner over the route of five miles and were officially reviewed first by Supreme Chancellor Sample and before dismissal by Maj. Gen. Carnahan, commander of the uniformed rank.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 30.—The grand electrical and fireworks parade of the Knights of Khorassan, announced as the spectacular feature of Pythian week, resulted in a vast deal of crowding and confusion. The police had made no arrangements for clearing the streets along the line of march. The picturesquely clad Khorassans were obliged to make their way through narrow lanes opened through the crowd, and much of the elaborately prepared humorous features was lost to a great majority of the spectators.

Mayor Maybury said that neither the local committee nor the marshal of the parade had made any request for policing the crowd, and added that the streets were never policed on such occasions except by special request.

Some 2,500 knights of the rollicking branch of the order took part in the spectacle. A great many of the marchers carried vari-colored torches, others swords and scimitars of antique Oriental pattern. All wore turbans or other quaint headgear and clothes of Arab, Persian or Turkish cut. The high potentates rode in a canopied float, preceded by a representation of the mythical temple of the order. There were several elaborate electrically illuminated floats and many of the funny features.

Following the parade most of the Khorassan knights boarded trolley cars for the barbecue and midway, which opened at Jefferson park under the auspices of the local committee.

An Extra Session Convened at Noon Tuesday to Reconsider the Present Election Law.

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 29.—The legislature, called in extra session by Gov. Beckham, convened at noon Tuesday. The governor's message is brief and in general terms recommends the passage of an election law which will be satisfactory to the people of the state, a large portion of whom, he concedes, are displeased with the present law.

After the governor's message had been read in both houses the legislature adjourned.

At a caucus of the democratic members of the house Tuesday night the following nominations were made: Clerk, Ed O. Leigh, of Paducah; sergeant-at-arms, William P. Thorne, jr., of Eminence; doorkeeper, John E. Miles, of Frankfort. Mr. Leigh was clerk at the last session, but resigned so as to be re-elected and make his title to the office clear. It was thought that he probably forfeited the office by becoming private secretary to the governor.

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 30.—The senate held only a short session and only two bills were introduced. The first one was by Mr. Alexander, of Louisville, amending the Goebel election law. In offering it he said he had not consulted either democrats or republicans, but had endeavored to draw up a law that would be satisfactory to all. It places the appointment of election officers in the hands of the county judge; provides that the county judges, in appointing, shall divide them equally between the political parties, and does away with the state election commission.

Senator Kirk (rep.), of Johnson, introduced a bill to repeal the Goebel law. He proposes to substitute the old election law, with various amendments. This is the first measure offered proposing a straightout repeal.

The house elected the caucus nominees to fill the vacancies in the house employes. Those elected are: Chief clerk, Ed O. Leigh; sergeant-at-arms, W. P. Thorne, jr.; doorkeeper, John E. Miles. The republicans made no nominations and did not vote.

Representative Stith, of Meade, offered a resolution that, "on account of the hot weather and hot politics in Kentucky," the members of the legislature be permitted to appear in the legislative halls in shirt waists, provided they contain no more than six colors of the rainbow.

On motion of Representative Nuckols, Tuesday, September 4, was set apart as memorial day to honor the memory of the late Representative Stout, of Woodford.

Representative Orr, of Owen county, introduced the only bill offered in the house. It proposes to repeal the Goebel law and provides for a bipartisan state board.

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 31.—Senator R. M. Jolly, republican, of Breckinridge county, offered a bill in the senate. It provides for a return to the law in operation before the enactment of the Goebel law.

In the house a ten minutes' session was held. The only business transacted was the adoption of a resolution providing for the appointment by Speaker Trimble of a committee of 12 members of the house, to whom all election bills must be referred.

Some of the democratic leaders of the general assembly are having drafted a measure that provides for the outright repeal of the Goebel election law. One of the special features of the bill will be universal registration of the voters of the state instead of in the cities only, as under the present law. The measure will also provide for the printing of the official ballots at state expense and the saving of the ballots voted for six months after election. It will provide for non-partisan state and county election boards.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 1.—About two-thirds of the general assembly attended the Shelbyville fair, and there was no business session in either house. The senate held a formal session at 8 o'clock and adjourned till Tuesday, as there is no business ready to take up and Monday is Labor day.

Jackson, Ky., Aug. 31.—Shots fired into the dining room at the home of James Barnett, on Howard's creek, killed Mrs. Nancy Barnett, an aged woman; her 12-year-old granddaughter and Mrs. James Bennett. The latter's husband, James Bennett, is being pursued by officers and others, it being charged that he did the shooting. It is said that Bennett was jealous of Barnett and objected to Mrs. Bennett taking dinner at Barnett's house. Barnett, who [illegible] declares that all the shots fired were meant for him, but simply went wild, killing the two women and the girl. The persons killed were seated at the dinner table with Barnett.

This part of the country is greatly excited by the killing, and it is thought Bennett will be arrested within a few hours. It is presumed in Jackson that Mrs. Nancy Barnett is the mother of James Barnett and that the 12-year-old girl who was killed was Barnett's daughter.

Owsley sprang from his seat, called Johnston a liar and struck him with a chair. Sheriff Ward interfered.

Judge Saufley ordered the clerk to place a $30 fine against Owsley for contempt of court. Johnston, who is a republican, was defeated by Owsley, democrat, for county attorney. Both men are prominent attorneys of the Lancaster bar.

During the last month people have wedded. They have given parties and have been participating in many evening pleasures that can be indulged in with safety during a hot old time like we have been having lately, and we knew it not, but from now on we will try to keep the boys guessing.

The editor of the Union Blade, a paper that has neither presses, patronage nor politics, made a spin through Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky, lately, and we might have received some telegrams from him reading like unto this, but did not: Tel. No. 1—Threatened with arrest at Panhandle depot in Cincinnati, for creating sensation as an anarchist—had a quart of blackberry preserves to explode in grip. The preserves were made by the cleverest little woman in Boone county. Tel. No. 2—Say? What's the difference between a man found dead in Ohio with 7 "hands-me-out" concealed upon his person, and a man found dead in Kentucky with a pair of pistols in each boot? The people of Ohio never tire of wheeling into view the Kentuckian and his pistol. Tel. No. 3—Tell us, please, why Ohio, with its network of railroads, telephones, and telegraphs, its Hannahs, its flocking Valleyrderers, its negro rapists, and its rural politicians, should speak with disrespect of Kentucky with her lovely hills and fertile valleys, where Republicanism with its attendant evils, high protection and high-handed assassination have received a doubling "according to law," that they wont forget for a century? Tel. No. 4.—The Democrats of Indiana are lined up to a man, almost, and claim that they will carry the State for Bryan, Stevenson, Dunbar & Co., with a rush, this fall. Tel. No. 5.—The Democrats of Ohio and Indiana are going from house to house, advocating the good, old Virginia doctrine of "vote as you visit," and they do tell us that it's making people think hard and fast. Tel. No. 6.—If a man has his property confiscated under the Barrett law in Indiana, and has his head smashed in Kentucky for sticking his nose into other people's affairs, who is to blame? Is confiscating property no less a crime than assault and battery? Tel. No. 7.—Aug. 26, Louisville—Please ask Mateon Rachal the difference between a man who bores a hole 1,500 feet through the bowels of the earth, below the (gas) belt in Indiana, and the man who bores a 38 caliber hole through the very heart of a large city in Ohio. Tel. No. 7.—Will some defender of trusts tell us how dumping 150 car loads of bananas near Nashville, Tennessee to keep prices up, can ever help a working man get trusted for a dinner bucket (not full) made out of McKinley tin?

THE FAIR.

A Fine Show of Stock, Garden and Field Produce.

Large Crowds Attended Friday and Saturday.

The fifth annual exhibition of the North Kentucky Agricultural Association, last week, was a success from start to finish. The attendance during the four days was not so large as that of some of the past years, but the exhibition in every department was excellent, the cattle show never having been surpassed in this part of the State. Warfield, of Lexington, this State, and Douglas, of Shelby county, Indiana, being the leading contestants in the beef breeds, Douglas getting the best of the contests.

The show in the hog and sheep pens was unusually good and attracted the attention of all the farmers. Floral Hall was well filled with exhibits each day, and the display of fancy needle work was never better.

The attendance on the first and second days was small, but on Friday and Saturday the large amphitheater could not accommodate the people. These large crowds were exceedingly orderly, and the policemen had very little to do.

On Saturday, Miss Mary Riddell, of Hebron, had a splendid run of luck, taking two first and one second premiums for riding and the first premium for driving, amounting in the aggregate to $55.

The new dining hall filled a long felt want. The tables were well supplied and the waiters attentive and proficient, although some chronic grumblers complained of the service, but the kicker is always with us.

Friday evening as the crowd was leaving the grounds one of the wagons that hauled passengers from Erlanger, was turned over near the gate at the fair grounds and several of the passengers were badly hurt. This was the only accident of any consequence, during the four days.

If the directors can conceive of some plan by which every exhibitor will be given a first premium, the "kicker" will lose his profession, and the plan will be universally approved.

BRYAN TO POPULISTS

Democratic Candidate Receives Notification at Topeka.

Addresses Immense Gathering on the Various Issues Old and New—Strong Arraignment of Republican Policies.

From 20,000 to 30,000 people listened to William J. Bryan at Topeka, Kan., Thursday, August 23, on the occasion of his notification by the populists of Kansas of their nomination of him for the presidency, in responding to which he said:

"Mr. Chairman and Members of the Notification Committee: In accepting the presidential nomination which you tender on behalf of the populist party, I desire to give emphatic recognition to the educational work done by your party. The populist party as an organization, and the farmer alliances and the labor organizations from which they sprung, have done much to arouse the people to a study of economic and industrial questions. Before [illegible] the discussion was confined to a few in seclusion but in the open field, and that it thrives best in the sunlight of full and free debate, I have confidence that the discussion which your party has compelled will aid in reaching that true solution of pending problems toward which all honest citizens aim.

"I desire also to express my deep appreciation of the liberality of opinion and devotion to principle which have lead the members of your party to extend the ranks of another party in the selection of a candidate.

"While I am grateful for the confidence which the populists have expressed in me, I am not vain enough to regard as personal their extraordinary manifestations of good will. The ties which bind together those who believe in the same great governmental principles are stronger than ties of affection—stronger even than the ties of blood; and cooperation between the reform forces is due to the fact that democratic and populists and silver republicans take the side of the people in their contest against greed, and agree in the application of Jeffersonian principles to the question immediately before us.

The Currency Question.

"In 1896 the money question was of paramount importance and the aim in that campaign united in the demand for the immediate restoration of silver by the independent action of this country at sixteen to one, the ratio which had existed since 1834. They were defeated, but that did not end the discussion. The democrats were defeated in 1838, but that did not put an end to tariff reform. The republicans were defeated in 1892, but that did not permanently overthrow the protective tariff. Defeat at the polls does not necessarily decide a great problem. Experience and experience alone settles questions. If an increase in the volume of the currency since 1896, although unpromised by the republicans and unexpected, has brought improvement in industrial conditions, this improvement, intsead of answering the arguments put forth in favor of bimetalism, only compels the consideration of those who insisted that more money would make better times.

"The republican party, however, while claiming credit for the increased circulation, makes no permanent provision for an adequate supply of standard money. It denies the necessity for more real money, while it permits national banks to expand the volume of paper promises to pay money.

"If the populists feel justified in opposing the republican party when it sought to conceal its gold standard tendencies under the mask of international bimetalism, the opposition should be more pronounced in proportion as the republican party more openly espouses gold monometallism.

Greenbacks.

"In 1896 the reform forces charged the republican party with intending to retire the greenbacks. This charge, denied at that time, has been confessed by the financial bill, which converts greenbacks, when once redeemed, into gold certificates, and extends new privileges to banks of issue. If a populist opposed the republican party when its hostilities to greenbacks was only suspected, that opposition should be greater now since no one can longer doubt the purpose of the republican party to substitute bank notes for greenbacks.

"It is true that the populists believe in an irredeemable greenback, while the democrats believe in a greenback redeemable in coin; but the vital question at this time, so far as paper money is concerned, is whether government or banks shall issue it. There will be time enough to discuss the redeemability of the greenback when the greenback itself is saved from the annihilation which now threatens it. The republican party is now committed to a currency system which necessitates a perpetual debt, while the populist finds himself in agreement with the democrats, who believe in paying off the national debt as rapidly as possible.

The Income Tax.

"If belief in an income tax justified a populist in acting with the democratic party in 1896, what excuse can we find for aiding the republican party now, when even the exigencies of war have not been sufficient to bring that party to the support of the income tax principle?

"Populists believe in arbitration now as much as they did in 1896, and are as much opposed to government by injunction and the blacklist as they were then, and upon these subjects they have as much reason for cooperation with the democratic party to-day as they had two years ago.

"Democrats and populists alike favor the principles of direct legislation. If any differences exist as to the extent to which the principle should be applied, such differences can be reconciled by experiment.

"Democrats and populists agree that Chinese and other oriental labor should be excluded from the United States.

"Democrats and populists desire to so enlarge the scope of the interstate commerce act as to enable the commission to protect both persons and corporations from discrimination, and the public at large from excessive railroad rates.

"The populists approve the demand set forth in the democratic platform for a labor bureau, with a cabinet officer at its head. Such an official would keep the administration in close touch with the wage-earning portion of the population, and go far toward securing such remedial legislation as the toilers need.

The Trusts.

"In 1896 the populists united with the democrats in opposing the trusts, although the question at that time appeared like a cloud scarcely larger than a man's hand. To-day that cloud well-nigh overspreads the industrial sky. The farmer does not participate in the profits of any trust, but he sorely feels the burden of them all. He is dependent upon the season for his income. When he plants his crop he knows not whether wind will blow it down, or hail destroy it, or insects devour it, and the price of his crop is as uncertain as the quantity. If a private monopoly can suspend production and fix the price of raw material as well as the price of the finished product the farmer is powerless to protect himself when he sells, as plundered when he purchases. Can any farmer hesitate to throw the influence of his ballot upon the side of those who desire to protect the public at large from monopolies?

"The fact that the trusts support the republican party ought to be sufficient proof that they expect protection from it. The republican party cannot be relied upon to extinguish the trusts so long as it draws its campaign contribution from their overflowing vaults.

The "Prosperity" Argument.

"The prosperity argument which the republicans bring forward to answer all complaints against the administration will not deceive the farmer. He knows that two factors enter into his income: First, the size of his crop, and, second, the price which he receives for the same. He does not return thanks to the party in power for favorable weather and a bountiful harvest, and he knows that the republican party has no policy which insured a permanent increase in agricultural prices. Since he sells his surplus in a foreign market, he is not a beneficiary of the tariff, and since he produces merchandise and not money, he does not profit by the appreciation of the dollar. He knows that the much vaunted prosperity, of which he has never had his share, is on the wane in spite of the unusual and unnatural stimulation which it has received during the last three years. He knows that each month of 1900 shows a larger number of failures than the corresponding month of 1899, and that there is already a marked tendency toward a decrease in the output of the factories. He knows, also, that discoveries of gold, famines abroad and war on three continents have not been able to raise the price of farm products as rapidly as trusts and combinations have raised the price of the things which the farmer buys.

Dangers of Delay.

"It is sometimes urged by partisan populists that four years of republican misrule would so aggravate economic conditions as to make reforms easier. No one can afford to aid in making matters worse [illegible] in the hope that they may better afterward, for in so doing he assumes responsibilities for evils which he may not be able to remedy. No populist, however sanguine, believes it possible to elect a populist president at this time, but the populist party may be able to determine whether a democrat or a republican shall be elected. Mr. Charman, the populist convention, which your committee represents, thought it better to share with the democrats in the honor of securing such reforms as could be secured by our party than to bear the odium of remaining neutral in this great crisis, or of giving open or secret aid to the republican party, which opposes all the reforms for which the populists contend.

"Those who labor to improve the conditions which surround their fellow-men are apt to become impatient; but they must remember that it takes time to work out great reforms.

New Issues.

"I have called attention to the issues which brought the democrats and populists together and which justified their cooperation during the last four years. Let me now invite your attention to new questions which would justify cooperation at this time, even though we differed upon all economic questions. It is not our fault that these new questions have forced their way into the arena of politics; it is not our fault that the people have been called upon to consider questions of ever-increasing magnitude. In 1896 the tariff question was the principal subject of discussion, and the democratic party contended that the masses were carrying a burden of unjust and unnecessary taxes. In 1896 the tariff question was still the principal issue between the democratic and republican parties, although in the west and south the money question was assuming greater and greater proportions, and the populists were contending that our monetary system was more responsible than the tariff laws for the depression in agriculture and the distress existing among the wage-earners. In 1896 the whole question of taxation became of secondary importance because of the increased boldness of those who opposed the gold and silver coinage of the constitution. When the republicans declared at Chicago that the tariff question was "fundamentalism in this country, although desirable, was impossible without the aid of the leading commercial nations of the old world, the populists and silver republicans joined with the democrats in asserting the right and duty of the American people to shape their financial system for themselves regardless of the action of other nations. The failure of the republican party to secure international bimetallism and its open espousal of the gold standard left the money question in politics, but no economic question can compare in importance with a question which concerns the principles and structure of government. Systems of taxation can be changed with less difficulty than financial systems, and financial systems can be altered with less danger and less disturbance to the country than the vital doctrines upon which free government rests.

"In the early 60's when we were engaged in a contest which was to determine whether we should have one republic or two, questions of finance were lost sight of. Silver was at a premium over gold, and gold and silver were at a premium over greenbacks and bank notes, but the people could not afford to divide over the money question in the presence of a greater issue, and so to-day we are engaged in a controversy which will determine whether we are to have a republic in which the government derives its just powers from the consent of the governed, or an empire in which brute force is the only recognized source of power.

"In a government where the people rule every wrong can be righted and every evil remedied, but when once the doctrine of self-government is impaired and might is substituted for right, there is no certainty that any question will be settled correctly.

Imperialism.

"A colonial policy would so occupy the people with the consideration of the nation's foreign policy that domestic questions would be neglected. 'Who will haul down the flag?' or 'Stand by the president,' would be the prompt response to every criticism of the administration, and corruption and special privilege would thrive under the cover of patriotism.

"It is not strange that the populists should oppose militarism and imperialism, for both are antagonistic to the principles which populists apply to other questions. Looking at questions from the standpoint of the producer of wealth and not from the standpoint of the speculator, the populist recognizes in militarism a constant and increasing burden. The army would, with occasional exceptions, be a field of wheat, is not nearly so dangerous an enemy to the farmer as a large standing army, which invades every field of industry and exacts toll from every crop.

"If 100,000 men are withdrawn from the ranks of the producers and placed as a burden upon the backs of those who remain, it must mean longer hours, harder work and greater sacrifice for those who toil, and the farmer, while he pays more than his share of the expense of an army, has no part in army contracts or in developing companies, and his sons are less likely to fill the life positions in the army than the sons of those who, by reason of wealth or political prominence exert influence at Washington.

"Soon after the republican leaders began to urge the propriety of a departure in policy, the papers published an interview given out from San Francisco by a foreign consul residing at Manila. He declared that the people of the United States owed it to themselves, to other nations and to the Filipinos to hold the Philippine islands permanently. As the conclusion of the interview there appeared the very significant statement that the gentleman was visiting the United States for the purpose of organizing a company for the development of the Philippine islands. A few days later on his way east he gave out another interview in which he explained that the company which he intended to organize would establish banks at Manila, and at other places throughout the islands, and build electric light plants, water plants, street car lines, railroads, factories, etc. It seemed that the plan of his syndicate was to do all the developing and leave the rest of the American people nothing to do in the matter except to furnish an army sufficient to hold the Filipinos in subjection while they were being developed.

Cost of War.

"At the presetn rate we will spend annually upon the army approximately half as much as we spend for education in the United States, and this immense sum is wrung from the taxpayers by systems of taxation which overburden the poor man and undertax the rich man.

"In the presence of such an issue as militarism it is impossible that any populist should hesitate as to his duty.

"But even the menace of militarism is but a part of the question of imperialism. The policy contemplated by the republican party involves every principle set forth in the Declaration of Independence, strikes a blow at popular government and robs the nation of of its moral prestige. Already the more advanced supporters of the colonial idea point to the economy of a system of government which intrusts all power to an executive and does away with the necessity for legislation. The Army and Navy Journal, in its issue of August 4, commends the English system and declares that as a result of this system of the world's area, containing a fifth of its population, is ruled with an administrative economy which is an administrative marvel, and adds:

"'One million two hundred thousand dollars spent in London is the price of administrative order over a colonial rule whose total budgets aggregate $1,724,354,886, or 50 per cent. more than our total of federal, state, county and village expenditure for every possible purpose, for which taxes are levied. In contrast to this we have the fact that of executive administration the fact is cited that the American congress has spent an entire winter wrestling with the tariff, the British executive, the administration and the personal [illegible] islands. The British executive is an imperial executive. The British parliament is an English legislature. TO THE SANE SYSTEM WE ARE COMING BY THE DECREE OF CIRCUMSTANCES AS INEVITABLE AS THAT OF GRAVITATION. IF THEY BE IMPERIALISM MAKE THE MOST OF IT. So far as citizenship is concerned the British empire is one, but beyond the limits of the United Kingdom the citizen lives under a rule essentially monarchial and restricted by the constitutional limitations of the parliamentary system.'

The American Policy.

"Thus does imperialism bear its supporters back toward the dark ages. There is no middle ground between the American policy and the European policy. If this nation remains true to its principles, its traditions and its history, it cannot hold colonies. If it enters upon a colonial career, it must repudiate the doctrine of principle which, otherwise, consciously, intentionally or unintentionally, thrown upon the one side or the other.

"Where the divine right of kings is recognized, the monarch can grant different degrees of liberty to different subjects. The people of England can be ruled in one way, the people of Canada in another, the people of Ireland in another, while the people of India may be governed according to still different forms. But there can be no such variety in a republic. The doctrine of a republic differs from the doctrine of a monarch as the day differs from the night, and between the two doctrines there is, and never must be, an irrepressible conflict.

"Our opponents say that the world would laugh at us if we should give independence to the Filipinos. If our opponents are right, aristocrats would laugh, and those would laugh who deny the inalienable rights of men and despise the humbler folk who 'along the cane-sequestered vale of life keep the noiseless tenor of their way;' but let this nation stand erect and, spurning the bribes of wealth and power, show that there is a principle which is higher than that we profess; let it show that there is a difference between a republic and a monarchy, and the oppressed in every land will see in our flag the hope of their deliverance and, whether they are bleeding upon the battlefield or groaning beneath a tyrant's lash, will raise their eyes toward Heaven and breathe a fervent prayer for the safety of our republic."

PROSPERITY IN WAGES.

Fictitious Capitalization of Trusts Makes Reduction of Wages Necessary.

The prosperity enjoyed by wage-workers is outlined in a report published in that stanch republican organ, the Chicago Tribune, from which the following extract is quoted: "The report in circulation several days ago to the effect that wages at the mills of the American Steel and Wire company had been reduced turn-sout to be true in spite of the emphatic denials of the company officials at the time. It is understood that the company intends to gradually reduce wages in the different departments, taking one department at a time, and thus get wages back to the level where they were at the time the trust was first formed. The horizontal reduction of the pay of all the men, if made at one time, it was feared, would bring on a general strike. Therefore the trust has decided to cut off the dog's tail by inches and trim it down to the panic scale gradually.

The report does not state why it should be necessary to reduce wages. That is left to inference, the Tribune merely stating the fact that wages have already been reduced and that the reduction will gradually be some a general one. The trust is capitalized for $75,000,000. More than one-half of that amount is fictitious, but in order to pay dividends on all of it the wages of the employes must be reduced. That is the way trust prosperity strikes the working masses. The amount filched from the scant earnings of the employes is used to pay dividends. That is prosperity with a vengeance. If trade conditions are such that the stockholders of this trust are compelled to live off their employes then it is time that radical reforms be introduced and a system changed that makes the wealthy wealthier and the poor poorer. —Denver Post.

The supreme issue in the democratic platform for 1900 is unquestionably anti-imperialism. A subordinate, and in many respects a sentimental, issue is the silver or money question. The latter was a vital issue four years ago, but hardly merits serious consideration in the present campaign. No one should allow himself to be deceived on this point. Republicans, however, by minimizing the dangers and perils of imperialism, the vital issue, and magnifying the dangers and perils of what is left of the money issue, are hoping to confuse democratic voters and, by their aid, elect Mr. McKinley to a second term. —Cor. THE KING'S GARDEN.

Dr. Talmage Discourses on Christ and the Church.

The Most Beautiful Flowers and the Best of Fruit—Why the Saviour Picks the Choicest First.

This sermon Dr. Talmage sends from a halting place in his journey through the valleys of Switzerland. It seems to have been prepared amid the bloom and aroma of a garden midsummer. The text is Song of Solomon 5:1: "I am come into my garden."

The Bible is a great poem. We have in it faultless rhythm and bold imagery and startling antithesis and rapturous lyric and sweet pastoral and instructive narrative and devotional psalm; thoughts expressed in style more solemn than that of Montgomery, more bold than that of Milton, more terrible than that of Dante, more natural than that of Wordsworth, more impassioned than that of Pollok, more tender than that of Cowper, more weird than that of Spenser. This great poem brings all the gems of the earth into its coronet, and it weaves the flames of judgment into its garlands and pours eternal harmonies in its rhythm. Everything this Book touches it makes beautiful, from the plain stones of the summer thrashing floor to the daughters of Nahor filling the troughs for the camels, from the fish pools of Heshbon up to the Psalmist praising God with diapason of storm and whirlwind and Job's imagery of Orion, Arcturus and the Pleiades.

My text leads us into a scene of summer redolence. The world has had a great many beautiful gardens. Charlemagne added to the glory of his reign by decreeing that they be established all through the realm, deciding even the names of the flowers to be planted there. Henry IV. at Montpellier established gardens of bewitching beauty and luxuriance, gathering into them Alpine, Pyrenean and French plants. One of the sweetest spots on earth was the garden of Shenstone, the poet. His writings have made but little impression on the world, but his garden, the "Leasowes," will be immortal. To the natural advantages of that place was brought the perfection of art. Arbor and terrace and slope and rustic temple and reservoir and urn and fountain here had their crowning. Oak and yew and hazel put forth their richest foliage. There was no life more diligent, no soul more ingenious than that of Shenstone, and all that diligence and genius he brought to the adornment of that one treasured spot. He gave £300 for it. He sold it for several thousand. And yet I am to tell you to-day of a richer garden than any I have mentioned. It is the garden spoken of in my text—the garden of the church, which belongs to Christ, for my text says so. He bought it, He planted it, He owns it, and He shall have it. Walter Scott, in his outlay at Abbotsford, ruined his fortune, and now, in the crimson flowers of those gardens, you can almost think or imagine that you see the blood of that man's broken heart. The payment of the last £100,000 sacrificed him. But I have to tell you that Christ's life and Christ's death were the outlay of this beautiful garden of the church, of which my text speaks. Oh, how many sighs and tears and pangs and agonies! Tell me, ye women who saw Him hang! Tell me, ye executioners who lifted Him and let Him down! Tell me, thou sun that didst hide, ye rocks that fell! "Christ loved the church and gave Himself for it." If the garden of the church belongs to Christ, certainly He has a right to walk in it. Come, then, O blessed Jesus, to-day. Walk up and down these aisles and pluck what Thou wilt of ornament or fruit. Thyself.

The church in my text is appropriately compared to a garden, because it is a place of choice flowers, of select fruits and of thorough irrigation.

But I have not told you of the most beautiful flower in all this garden spoken of in the text. If you see a century plant, your emotions are started. You say: "Why, this flower has been a hundred years gathering up for one bloom, and it will be a hundred years more before other petals will come out." But I have to tell you of a plant that was gathering up from all eternity and that 1,900 years ago put forth its bloom never to wither. It is the passion plant of the cross. Prophets foretold it, Bethlehem shepherds looked upon it in the bud, the rocks shook at its bursting and the dead got up in their winding sheets to see its full bloom. It is a crimson flower—blood at the roots, blood on the branches, blood on the leaves. Its perfume is to fill all the nations. Its breath is Heaven. Come, oh, winds from the north and winds from the south and winds from the east and winds from the west, and bear to all the earth the sweet smelling savor of Christ, my Lord!

His worth if all the nations knew,
Sure the whole earth would love Him too.

Again, the church may be appropriately compared to the garden, because it is a place of fruits. That would be a strange garden which had in it no berries, no plums or peaches or apricots. The coarser fruits are planted in the orchard or they are set out on the sunny hillside. But the choicest fruits are kept in the garden. So in the world outside the church Christ has planted a great many beautiful things—patience, charity, generosity, integrity. But He intends the choicest fruits to be in the garden, and if they are not there then shame on the church. Religion is not a mere flowering sentimentality. It is a practical, life giving, healthful fruit, not posies, but apples.

"Oh," says somebody, "I don't see what your garden of the church has yielded!" Where did your asylums come from? And your hospitals? And your institutions of mercy? Christ planted every one of them; He planted them in His garden. When Christ gave sight to Bartimeus, He laid the cornerstone of every blind asylum that has ever been built. When Christ soothed the demoniac of Galilee, He laid the cornerstone of every lunatic asylum that has ever been established. When Christ said to the sick man: "Take up thy bed and walk," He laid the cornerstone of every hospital the world has ever seen. When Christ said: "I was in prison and ye visited me," He laid the cornerstone of every prison reform association that has ever been organized. The church of Christ is a glorious garden, and it is full of fruit. I know there is some poor fruit in it. I know there are some crab apple trees that ought to be cut down. I know there are some wild grapes that ought to be uprooted, but are you going to destroy the whole garden because of a little gnarled fruit? You will find worm eaten leaves in Fontainchleau and insects that sting in the fairy groves of the Champs Elysees. You do not tear down and destroy the whole garden because there are a few specimens of gnarled fruit.

I admit there are men and women in the church who ought not to be there, but let us be just as frank and admit the fact that there are hundreds and thousands and tens of thousands of glorious Christian men and women—holy, blessed, useful, consecrated and triumphant. There is no grander collection in all the earth than the collection of Christians. There are Christian men in every church whose religion is not a matter of psalm singing and church going. To-morrow morning that religion will keep them just as consistent and consecrated in their worldly occupation as it ever kept them at the communion table. There are women with us to-day of a higher type of character than Mary of Bethany. They not only sit at the feet of Christ, but they go out into the kitchen to help Martha in her work, that she may sit there, too. There is a woman who has a drunken husband who has exhibited more faith and patience and courage than Ridley in the fire. He was consumed in 20 minutes. Hers has been a 20-years' martyrdom. Yonder is a man who has been 15 years on his back, unable to feed himself, yet calm and peaceful as though he lay on one of the green banks of Heaven, watching the oarsmen dip their paddles in the crystal river! Why, it seems to me this moment as if St. Paul threw to us a pomologist's catalogue of the fruits growing in this great garden of Christ—love, joy, peace, patience, character, brotherly kindness, gentleness, mercy; glorious fruit, enough to fill all the baskets of earth and Heaven.

I have not told you of the better tree in this garden and of the better fruit. It was planted just outside Jerusalem a good while ago. When that tree was planted, it was so split and bruised and barked men said nothing would ever grow upon it, but no sooner had that tree been planted than it budded and blossomed and fruited, and the soldiers' spears were only the clubs that struck down that fruit, and it fell into the lap of the nations, and men began to pick it up and eat it, and they found in it an antidote to all thirst, to all poison, to all sin, to all death; the smallest cluster larger than the famous one of Eshcol, which two men carried on a staff between them. If the one apple in Eden killed the race, this one cluster of mercy shall restore.

Again, the church in my text is appropriately called a garden because it is thoroughly irrigated. No garden could prosper long without plenty of water. I have seen a garden in the midst of a desert, yet blooming and luxuriant. All around was dearth and barrenness, but there were pipes, aqueducts, reaching from this garden up to the mountains, and through these aqueducts the water came streaming down and tossing up into beautiful fountains until every root and leaf and flower was saturated. That is like the church. The church is a garden in the midst of a great desert of sin and suffering, but it is well irrigated, for "our eyes are unto the hills from whence cometh our help." From the mountains of God's strength there flow down rivers of gladness. "There is a river the stream whereof shall make glad the city of our God." Preaching the Gospel is one of the aqueducts. The Bible is another. Baptism and the Lord's Supper are aqueducts. Water to slake the thirst, water to wash the unclean, water tossed high up in the light of the Sun of Righteousness, showing us the rainbow around the throne. Oh, was there ever a garden so thoroughly irrigated? You know that the beauty of Versailles and Chatsworth depends very much upon the great supply of water. I came to the latter place, Chatsworth, one day when strangers are not to be admitted, but by an inducement which always seemed as potent with an Englishman as an American I got in, and then the gardener went for up above the stairs of stone and turned on the water. I saw it gleaming on the dry pavement, coming down from step to step until it came so near I could hear the musical rush, and all over the high, broad stairs it came, foaming, flashing, roaring down until sunlight and wave in gleesome wrestle tumbled at my feet. So it is with the church of God. Everything comes from above—pardon from above, joy from above, adoption from above, sanctification from above.

Would that now God would turn on the waters of salvation that they might flow down through His heritage and that this day we might each find our places to be "Elims" with 12 wells of water and threescore and ten palm trees.

Hark! I hear the latch of the garden gate, and I look to see who is coming. I hear the voice of Christ. "I am come into My garden," I say: "Come in, O Jesus! We have been waiting for Thee. Walk all through the paths. Look at the flowers; look at the fruit; pluck that which Thou wilt for Thyself." Jesus comes into the garden and up to that old man and touches him and says: "Almost home, father; not many more aches for thee. I will never leave thee. Take courage a little longer, and I will steady my tottering steps. I will soothe thy troubles and give thee rest. Courage, old man." Then Christ goes up another garden path, and I see great excitement among the leaves, and I hasten up to that garden path to see what Jesus is doing there, and, lo! He is breaking off flowers sharp and clean, from the stem, and I say: "Stop, Jesus. Do not kill those beautiful flowers." He turns to me and says: "I have come into My garden to gather lilies, and I mean to take those up to a higher terrace for the garden around my palace, and there I will plant them, and in better soil and in better air they shall put forth brighter leaves and sweeter redolence, and no frost shall touch them forever." And I looked up into His face and said: "Well, it is Thy garden, and Thou hast a right to do what Thou wilt with it. Thy will be done!"—the hardest prayer a man ever made.

It has seemed as if Jesus Christ took the best. From many of your households the best one is gone. You know that she was too good for this world. She was the gentlest in her ways, the deepest in her affection, and when at last the sickness came you had no faith in medicines. You knew that the hour of parting had come, and when, through the rich grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, you surrendered that treasure you said: "Lord Jesus, take it. It is the best we have. Take it. Thou art worthy." The others in the household may have been of grosser mold. She was of the finest.

I notice that the fine gardens sometimes have high fences around them, and I cannot get in. It is so with a king's garden. The only glimpse you ever get of such a garden is when the king rides out in his splendid carriage. It is not so with this garden, this King's garden. I throw wide open the gate and tell you all to come in. No monopoly in religion. Whosoever will may. Choose now between a desert and a garden. Many of you have tried the garden of this world's delight. You have found it has been a chagrin. So it was with Theodore Hook. He made all the world laugh. He makes us laugh now when we read his poems. But he could not make his own heart laugh. While in the midst of his festivities he confronted a looking glass, and he saw himself and said: "There, that is true. I look just as I am—done up in body, mind and purse." So it was of Shenstone, of whose garden I told you at the beginning of my sermon. He sat down amid those bowers and said: "I have lost my road to happiness. I am angry and envious and frantic and despise everything around me just as it becomes a madman to do."

O ye weary souls, come into Christ's garden to-day and pluck a little heartsease. Christ is the only rest and the only pardon for a perturbed spirit. Do you not think your chance has almost come? You men and women who have been waiting year after year for some good opportunity in which to accept Christ, but have postponed it 5, 10, 20, 30 years, do you not feel as if now your hour of deliverance and pardon and salvation had come? O man, what grudge hast thou against thy poor soul that thou wilt not let it be saved?

Some years ago a vessel struck on the rocks. They had only one lifeboat. In that lifeboat the passengers and crew were getting ashore. The vessel had foundered and was sinking deeper and deeper, and that one boat could not take the passengers very swiftly. A little girl stood on the deck waiting for her turn to get into the boat. The boat came and went, came and went, but her turn did not seem to come. After awhile she could wait no longer, and she leaped on the taffrail and then sprang into the sea, crying to the boatman: "Save me next! Save me next!" Oh, how many have gone ashore into God's mercy, and yet you are clinging to the wreck of sin! Others have accepted the pardon of Christ, but you are in peril. Why not this moment make a rush for your immortal rescue, crying until Jesus shall hear you and Heaven and earth ring with the cry: "Save me next! Save me next!" Now is the day of salvation! Now! Now!

VASTLY DIFFERENT.

Imperialism the Spirit of Empire, and Democracy the Essence of Freedom.

What is the difference between the democratic and the republican attitude toward the Philippines?

The New York Times affirms that there is practically no difference. It attempts to justify this opinion by a pettifogging paraphrase of the two policies.

In a matter of such moment are not the people entitled to judge the parties and the candidates by their own words and acts? Mr. McKinley in his speech of acceptance says:

"The Philippines are ours, and American authority must be supreme throughout the archipelago. There must be no scuttle policy."

Mr. Bryan in his speech takes the position that the Philippines belong to the Filipinos, and that the Filipinos own themselves. He says:

"If governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed, it is im- [illegible] title to people [illegible] force or by purchase. . . . Force can defend a right, but force has never yet created a right. If it was true, as declared in the resolutions of intervention, that the Cubans "are and of right ought to be free and independent" (language taken from the Declaration of Independence), it is equally true that the Filipinos "are and of right ought to be free and independent."

Is there not a vast and vital difference between these two positions? It is the difference between independence and dependence, between political freedom and vassalage, between self-government and rule by a "sovereign" power. Is there "practically no difference" between the state of Switzerland and that of Egypt—between the status of Porto Rico and that of New Mexico?

So much for the attitude of the two parties and candidates toward the rights of the case. The difference is equally wide and vital in regard to our future policy. Treating the Philippines as "ours"—our authority as "supreme," our "sovereignty" as complete and final—Mr. McKinley proposes to "establish a just and generous government, in which the inhabitants shall have the largest participation of which they are capable"—we being the judges or their capability!

This is always and everywhere the promise of imperialism to subjugated peoples. It is what Mr. Chamberlain proposes for the Boers. As Mr. Bryan pertinently asks: "Did not the English government (in 1776) promise a good government to the colonists? What king ever promised a bad government to his people?"

The democratic policy is based upon a recognition of the freedom and independence of the Philippines. The republican policy contemplates the subjugation, retention and permanent government of the islands by force. Is not this difference vital? Does it not truly measure the difference between imperialism, "the spirit of empire," and democracy, the essence of freedom?—N. Y. World.

Defeat Predicted.

Robert Treat Paine, of Boston, lineal descendant of the signer of the Declaration of Independence of the same name, predicts that the republicans will be overwhelmingly defeated in the coming campaign. The campaign, he says, will eclipse that of 1896, and gives promise of a new era in politics. He says that the issue, as announced and expressed in Mr. Bryan's speech of acceptance, has cleft the republican party in twain. "The 'Cotton Whigs,'" he says, "who condone slavery beneath the American flag as their fathers condoned the attempt to extend slavery into the free territories of the west, may pull wires and manipulate men without backbone, but they cannot control men like ex-President Harrison, ex-Senator Henderson, of Missouri, ex-Speaker Thomas B. Reed, ex-Secretary Carl Schurz, and ex-Gov. Boutwell. The republican party, which began its career in the defense of liberty, prostituted to the service of money as against the rights of men, and New England will not be silent."

ANOTHER BRYAN CONVERT.

Dr. Henry Wade Rogers Tells Why Gold Democrats Will Desert McKinley.

Dr. Henry Wade Rogers, former president of Northwestern university and recently called by the faculty of Yale, says he will vote for Bryan and Stevenson.

In 1896 he voted for McKinley and Hobart. He declares also that he believes the gold democrats of the country as a body will support Bryan this year because they believe imperialism is the most dangerous policy the republic could adopt, and that the party that is responsible for such a policy should be defeated.

Dr. Rogers says that the silver plank in the democratic platform will no more drive them from supporting Bryan than the protective plank in the republican platform kept them from voting for McKinley four years ago, when silver was the paramount issue.

In a statement to the Chicago American approving the indorsement of Bryan by the anti-imperialist convention at Indianapolis, Dr. Rogers says:

"The gold democrats as a rule are anti-imperialists. They declined to support Mr. Bryan four years ago because they looked upon the currency question as the paramount issue of the campaign. The majority of them voted for McKinley as the surest way to defeat Bryan. These men are as strong in their conviction to-day as they were four years ago that is to 1 is an unwise and dangerous policy. The most of them, I believe, will be found supporting Bryan in this campaign. That which was the paramount issue in 1896 is not the paramount issue in 1900.

"They believe that imperialism is the most dangerous possible policy for the republic to adopt, and that it is of the utmost consequence that the American people should repudiate it absolutely by defeating the party that is responsible for it.

"For that reason they will vote for Bryan in 1900 notwithstanding the 16 to 1 plank, just as in 1896 they voted for McKinley notwithstanding the protection plank in the republican platform. They were not protectionists in 1896, but they did not regard protection as the chief issue of the campaign, and so they supported McKinley on a protection platform.

"They are not to-day free silver men, but they do not regard that as the predominant issue in the present campaign, and so they will support Bryan, although he stands on a 16 to 1 platform. Personally I believe 16 to 1 is a dead issue. The American people repudiated it four years ago, and they have not changed their mind respecting it.

"If the democrats should undertake to establish a silver standard in my opinion they would be driven from power. I do not believe they would seriously attempt it. But whether they would or not, they certainly could not accomplish it in the next four years. The election of Mr. Bryan cannot accomplish such a result, and his election will not be interpreted as an indorsement of his views on the money question."

ENGINEERING NOTES.

The tensile strength of a wet rope is only one-third the strength of the rope when dry, while a rope saturated with grease or soap is weaker still.

A cap nut lock for propellers has been invented by Capt. Lewis Davis, of Liverpool, and is intended to prevent the loss of blades at sea, says the Engineer.

A German method of constructing large balance wheels for high peripheral speeds consists in making the rim by winding a rectangular section steel wire on a cast iron spool.

A raft of remarkable size was started down the Mississippi river from Stillwater, Minn., for St. Louis, Mo. The raft is 256 feet wide, 768 feet long, contained 9,000,000 feet of lumber and has loaded on its deck 60 car loads of shingles.

The engineer in charge of the improvement of the Yellowstone park denies that the geysers are approaching extinction. An article to this [illegible] appeared in a French paper and was widely copied throughout the United States. It tends to create an impression that the Yellowstone wonderland, as far as regards the hot springs and geysers, is practically a thing of the past.

In a paper on "Fly Wheel Explosions" read before the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the author, Mr. C. H. Manning, gave some figures relating to wood-rimmed wheel for this purpose. He stated that for the same weight, pine wood has a much more tensile strength than cast iron, and is, therefore, much safer for a fly wheel. An experience of ten years with many such fly wheels has satisfied him that for engines running at a speed of 100 revolutions per minute or less, a properly constructed wood-rimmed wheel is much the safer.

Pessimist and Fatalist.

The indignant looking passenger was about to speak, but the conductor headed him off by exclaiming in a loud tone of irritation:

"This is the slowest train I was ever on. What's the use of having a schedule if we don't pay any attention to it? The drinking water tastes as if it hadn't been off the kitchen range ten minutes. The car doesn't look as if it had been swept for a month, and it is full of idiots who insist on opening the windows when we go through tunnels, so that the cinders can blow in."

The passenger caught his breath and then exclaimed: "I was just about to say that this whole affair is an outrage."

"I know it. But you're lucky. You can travel a few miles and then get off and be happy. But I've got to stay on this train for hours every day of my life."—Washington Star.

A Reflection.

"In your advertisement," said the man with the suave manner, as he entered the office of the ice company, "you say that there are no microbes on the ice that you furnish to your customers."

"Yes, sir," replied the treasurer, as he placed a blotter in front of his diamond stud so that the caller would not have to think, "and we stand by our assertion."

"I stand by it, too," said the man with the suave manner, "and I have called to say that, as I have no fear of microbes, believing they are harmless, I wish you would direct your delivery man to leave at my residence in the future ice of such dimensions that two or three microbes, if they felt so inclined, could occupy it without unduly crowding each other."—Harper's Bazar.

TEETHINA (Teething Powders) counteracts the effect of hot weather and keeps the digestive organs in a healthy condition, and has saved the lives of thousands of children in the doctor's native state, where physicians prescribe and all mothers give it, and it is criminal in mothers of our nation to allow their babes and little children to suffer and perhaps die when relief can be so easily [illegible] giving TEETHINA.

DECEPTIVE CHARLES.

Tearful Bride Pours Out Her Tale of Woe.

"Well, my dear, what is the trouble now?"

It was Mrs. Eastlake who spoke, and she addressed her query to Mrs. Perkasie.

Mrs. Perkasie was her daughter, and the mother, who lived near, had dropped in, as was her wont, to note how matters were going in the new household, for Mrs. Perkasie had been married but a short time.

"What about Charles?" demanded Mrs. Eastlake. "Has he been mistreating you, dear?"

"Yes—cruelly—boo-hoo!"

"What has he done?" asked Mrs. Eastlake, as she sat down on the sofa, where her daughter was sobbing in the [illegible]

"He has—de—de—deceived me!"

"In what way, child?"

"Why, he was out late last night—boo-hoo—and at the breakfast table I asked him what had kept him—boo-hoo—and he said he was detained at the office, because there was some trouble with the books."

"Well, my dear," said Mrs. Eastlake, soothingly, "that is something which is likely to happen to any business man, and you must not mind it. He didn't deceive you, dear."

"But, mamma, he did. It was just one of those excuses that married men always have ready to explain a night's spree or something. I've read of such things in the paper."

"But what makes you say that he deceived you, daughter?"

"O, I caught him smartly enough. He thought I didn't know anything, and that I was a little baby to be imposed upon just as he chose."

"But how, my dear? What did you discover? What did he confess?"

"Well, when he said he had been working with his books, I asked him what particular book he had been working with, and what do you suppose he replied?"

"O, I don't know; the ledger, probably."

"No, mamma, not the ledger. It was the day book, he said. Just as if it were possible for him to be working on the day book at night. That's how I caught him. O, I can never, never trust him again, and I wish I had never been born."

Whereupon the afflicted young woman burst into a fresh paroxysm of tears.—Detroit Free Press.

LED A QUIET LIFE.

How a Widowed Duchess of the Last Century Lived.

Here is a picture of a quiet country life in the eighteenth century; it is written by the duchess of Somerset of those times, when she was a widow: "I rise at seven, but do not go down till nine, when the bell rings and the whole family meet me at chapel. After prayers we go to breakfast; any friend who happens to be with us, myself, and my chaplain, have ours in the little library, the others in their respective eating-rooms.

"About 11, if the weather permits, we go to walk in the park, or take the air in the coach, but if it be too bad for either, we return to our various occupations. At three we dine; sit, perhaps, near an hour afterward, then separate till we meet at eight for prayers, after which we adjourn again to the library, where somebody reads aloud—unless some stranger comes who chooses cards—until 9:30, when we sup, and always part before 11."

This mention of cards shows the power of custom. It was an age of card-playing. Even this quiet and pious duchess finds it necessary to offer the diversion of cards to her guests. The division of the day by the four meals is perhaps less convenient than our own. We knock off work at 12 or 1 for luncheon; and we get home for dinner at seven; some of us dine at 8:30; it would make little difference if we chose to dine at three and to sup at 9:30.

In the late '50s fashionable folks abroad dined at four. It seems now an impossible and a preposterous time. Everybody accepted the hour; in the evening they had tea and all kinds of things with it, corresponding to this good duchess' supper. Dinner at four had this advantage, that it gave a long evening for reading men.—Chicago Daily News.

A HUNGRY SHARK.

Captain Tells of Awful Fate of One of His Sailors.

Will a shark bite a living human being? The question has been debated hundreds of times, and came up for a discussion the other night among a little party at a suburban resort. "In spite of the current legend," said one of the group, "I don't believe sharks will attack a living person. I have spent my life near the sea and have heard a hundred stories of swimmers being killed or bitten by the monsters, but all the tales were either at second hand or were so vague they would never have passed for evidence in court. The fact that a New York newspaper offered a reward of $100 for an authentic case and kept it standing for a year without a claimant, seems to me conclusive." "Well, sir," said another of the party, "I believe sharks do kill [illegible] and have the best of reasons for my belief. I witnessed such a tragedy with my own eyes." The speaker was Capt. McLaughlin, one of the oldest and best-known bar pilots in the Mississippi river service.

"It happened 21 years ago last April," said the captain, when pressed for the details, "but the circumstances are as distinct in my mind as if it had occurred only yesterday. I was out looking for ships, with my partner, Capt. Tom Wilson, and the usual crew, and about 12 miles off South Pass we sighted a large sailing vessel, which proved to be the Zephyr, from Bath, in charge of Capt. Switzer. There was a rival pilot boat near by, and we both made a rush for the ship to get the job of taking her in. Our party was nearest, and Capt. Wilson and two sailors put off in a small boat to go aboard, but in their hurry they made a miscalculation and were struck by the boat and capsized. It all happened in a flash, but Wilson and one of the sailors were lucky enough to get hold of the overturned boat and hang on. The other sailor was thrown some distance away in the water. He was a big-brawny, six-foot Swede, named Gus Ericsson, and when we saw him come up one of the crew tossed him a circular life buoy, which he seized almost immediately. The buoy was amply sufficient to sustain him, and he put his [illegible] it and held himself out of water fully breast high. We had another small boat and started at once to pick up the three men, making for Ericson first. When we were less than a hundred feet away I saw a gigantic tiger shark rise and dart toward him, and, at the next instant, the poor fellow shot down out of sight, life buoy and all, like a man going through a trap. We were so horrified that we simply sat still and stared, and what seemed to be two or three minutes elapsed. Then the life buoy suddenly appeared. It must have risen from a great depth, because it bounded at least four feet in the air and fell back with a splash. Of Ericsson we never saw a trace. He went into that shark's maw as surely as two and two make four. We rescued the other two men all right," said Capt. McLaughlin, in conclusion, "and Capt. Wilson is still alive to bear out what I say. That, gentlemen, is my reason for believing that sharks will attack human beings. However, if anyone can tell me what became of Ericsson, I am open to conviction."—N. O. Times-Democrat.

How to Avoid Drowning.

Anatomical experiments have shown that the weight of the body is about equal to the same bulk of sea water, so that persons falling overboard who cannot swim, if they do not attempt to keep more than their mouth out of water, can sustain themselves for a considerable length of time. Most persons who fall into the water lose their presence of mind, and either draw their hands up or wildly dash them through the water and air. Of course, the instant the weight of the arms is added to the weight of the head above the water the body sinks, and a few repetitions of this ends in "another accidental drowning." The same struggles with the hands and feet under the water would have preserved life. What all persons should impress upon their minds is this: That in case they should fall overboard they must retain control of their senses, the hands and arms must be kept under water, and the feet and hands kept in motion to sustain the head out of water. So long as the mouth and nostrils do not get submerged, there is no danger.—London Tit-Bits.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1900. NO. 47

Hon. Ollie James, of Marion, Crittenden county, will deliver four speeches in this county, beginning at Burlington, on the afternoon of October 1st, County Court day. His other dates and places for speaking will be published next week.

Congressman Reha spoke at Morgantown, Monday afternoon, and on his way from the town that night, he was waylaid and stoned by a mob of his political opponents.

Ex-President Cleveland has declined President McKinley's appointment as a member of the International Board of Arbitration. Ex-President Harrison has accepted.

The cold wave which the weather bureau advertised to arrive here last week, and which everybody had prepared to welcome, evidently thawed out somewhere enroute.

A New York hay fever patient has undertaken to cure himself by refrigeration. He has knocked the disease out, but has a badly frosted face as a testimonial of his experience.

Election Bills too numerous to mention have made their appearance at Frankfort, and the committee will have considerable work to cull therefrom the best measure. All kinds of suggestions are being made.

The State Board of Eelection Commissioners has sent letters to the Democratic and Republican State Campaign Committee requesting the transmission of lists of men whom they wish appointed to represent the respective parties on the various county boards. The appointments must be made this month. If a new election law is enacted the appointments can be revoked.

It seems that some of its readers think the Recorder has been booming one of the Congresssional aspirants more freely than it has the others. Editorially the Recorder has espoused the cause of neither of the candidates, but has run for each of them such reprint matter or cards over their snignatures as they have desired to pay for. The Recorder says this to remove the misapprehensions on the part of some of its supporters.

The faculty of the Chattanooga Medical College is now making experiments with the weed known as "Gall of the Earth," with which a mountaineer recently cured himself of a mad dog bite, and by which he cured others suffering from snake bites. It is sometmes known as the "rattlesnake's master." The weed is now being transplanted for cultivation and experiment. It is now in bloom and bears a small white flowe. The Horticultural Department of Clemson College, Charleston, S. C., is also experimenting with it.—Scientific American.

The Census Bureau has tabulated the returns from 54 cities. These show a population of 14,644,711. This is an average increase in population per city of 27.9 per cent. The same cities in 1890 had a population of 11,150,045, making a total gain of 3,494,666. The percentage of increase in 1890 was calculated on the aggregate gain and not on the average increase per city, as is the case this year. The result was that the percentage of gain, according to the Census Bureau of this year, while appearing to be larger, namely 31.33, was not so much in fact, owing to the different method offered for making the calculation.

Gen. W. H. Gentry, of Lexington, denies the published report that in an interview with President McKinley he said that he (McKinley) would carry Kentucky. In the course of their conversation he says that policies was touched upon, and he expressed the opinion that Beckham would carry the State. He says that Mr. McKinley then laughingly asked "What do you Kentuckians think of the Presidential campaign?" He replied evasively that Kentuckians felt kindly toward him for not interfering in the turbulence following the assassination of Mr. Goebel, but ventured no opinion as to the result of the Presidential race.—Lexington Herald.

Some Facts--Anent the September Primary.

[Williamstown Courier.]

In an Editorial, last week, the Courier presented "Some figures on the September Primary," in which the total probable vote in the district was put at 17,200, and was distributed to the eight counties as follows: Kenton, 5,700; Campbell, 3,450, Boone, 1,850; Pendleton, 1,550; Grant, 1,500; Carroll, 1,400; Trimble, 1,000; and Gallatin, 750, and that the nominee would probably receive 5,200 votes, and should be pretty certain of at least 5,000 votes, before he could safely count on the nomination.

Then the all important inquiry is—who is in the best position to win? and which of the four candidates is most likely, under all the circumstances, to reach the necessary 5,000 votes? Let us see.

There are four candidates, coming from three counties, leaving five counties without a home candidate. Campbell, with 3,450 votes, has a good candidate, but he is sorely handicapped by reason of his indiscreet and avowed opposition to the head of the ticket in the election last year. The 3,450 votes, accredited to his county and that ordinarily he ought to be able to get almost solidly against any sort of opposition from without, are the votes of "regular" Democrats, and hundreds and hundreds of them, will not vote for their home candidate because of his disloyalty, at a time when his defection was so damaging to the party. So decided is this aversion to the disloyal record so recently written, by the "Tall Sycamore of the Licking" that it is openly asserted and pretty generally believed, that he cannot carry his own county in the coming primary. This is a grievous and humiliating thing for his friends to confess, but it looks too likely to be true, for them to hazard any positive denial. It it is so in Campbell, it is a hundred fold more so, outside of his home county.

But give him his home county, and for his own credit and standing he ought to be able to carry it, by a good majority over all, and this would give, at the most 2,000 votes as a starter. The struggle in Kenton is so fierce between their home candidates as not to leave much for Berry or Westover to hope for there. Probably they may get 500, or even 750 votes each, one about as many as the other; but for local reasons, Berry ought to be stronger there than Westover, and may get 750 to Westovers 500.

This would send Berry to the country with 2,750 votes, and leave him 2,250 short of the necessary 5,000. Where is he to get them? There are but six counties left in all and but five where there is no home candidate. In order to win, he must get an average of 500 votes each, in one half of these six counties, and 250 each in the others, including Grant. When the truth is, and the bare statement is sufficient without elaboration, he cannot get 500 votes in any county outside of Kenton and Campbell, nor 400 as to that matter, and no more can he get anywhere in the neighborhood of 250 votes in Grant, or in any other of the smaller counties of the district. Altogether, he cannot reasonably hope for more than 1,500 votes in all the country counties, or 4,250 in all, and therefore his name is Dennis.

Well then, there is the shapely Linn, on the other side of the Licking. What of him? We will look into his case and see. His county has 5,700 votes. But we have given 1,250 of them to Berry and Westover, and made them both half mad, maybe, because we did not give them more. This leaves 4,450 votes in Kenton, with two home candidates to divide them. Each will claim more than half, and one of them will probably get more than half, but that one does not appear to be Gooch. Rhinock's friends are claiming it by two to one, but this is evidently too high. He will likely beat Gooch 500 votes in Kenton. This gives Gooch 1,965 to 2,475 for Rhinock. Nor is Gooch any stronger in Campbell than Westover, really not as strong, while Rhinock is stronger than Gooch, in Campbell, but we only have 1,450 votes left in Campbell for all of them. Rhinock's friends claim all of these against Gooch, but let us give him only 750 of them, the same we gave Berry in Kenton, and let Gooch and Westover divide the remainder, which would give Gooch 350 more, or 2,325 to go to the country with.

Berry is 250 votes stronger in the country counties than Gooch, and this would add but 1,250 to Gooch's city votes, give him but 3,575 votes in all, and "down goes McGinty to the bottom of the well."

Now, for Rhinock. We have given him 500 majority over Gooch in Kenton, or 2,475, and 750 in Campbell, which sends him to the country with 3,225 votes, but he is admittedly weaker in the country counties than either Berry or Gooch and it does not appear possible for him to get as many votes in these counties as Gooch by about the difference between Gooch and Berry—that is to say, 250 votes. This would add 1,000 to his 3,225 Kenton and Campbell votes, and give him 4,225 votes in all, and put himself and Berry within 25 votes of each other, but leaving them both far short of a nomination.

Total probable vote in primary		17,200
For Gooch	3,575
For Rhinock	4,225
For Berry	4,250
Total for city candidates	12,050	12,050
Leaving Westover, all the rest... and the nomination—and there you are.		5150

The Courier is a country paper and of course feels most kindly for the country's candidate, Judge Westover, but if it has erred in the foregoing forecast, it has been in allowing too much to the city candidates, and claiming too little for its own. When the count is finally made and certified it will be found that the vote of none of the candidates, will vary 500 from the vote given them above. Stick a pin there.

We have heard several of the defeated candidates say that they spent a thousand dollars each in their races, and it is thought that much more than that was spent in some cases. This condition of things needs to be changed, and it must be changed.—Owenton Herald.

Correct you are, neighbor. Politics has reached a point where qualifications are no longer considered, the only requirement of a candidate being a big bank account of which he is willing to contribute unto the last farthing for the debauchery of the voters. The man who has no money with which to flood his bailiwick during the last days of the canvass has up hill work to win. About the first inquiry made in regard to a man now days, when he announces himself a candidate for office is, "has he lots of money?" which, if answered in the negative, brings fourth the exclamation, "he may as well keep out of the fight, then!" This condition of things is becoming more serious ever year, and the people ought to repudiate all candidates who create enthusiasm by the free use of money with which to purchase the suffrage of the people. Popular government becomes a farce when those who administer it are placed in control of their official position by means of the corrupting influence of money. A halt should be called.

Great excitement has been caused at Hartwell Mo., by the grand jury returning indictments against twenty prominent citizens of Wright county for the alleged murder of John Mitchell and Jack Kauffman and the wounding of Dave Mitchell, in April, 1897, by "regulators." Four years ago a band of theives began wholesale operations in nearly every part of the county. Many arrests were made, but alibis were always forthcoming. Finally the citizens organized for their own protection. Suspicion pointed to the home of Mitchell as the rendezvous of the theives, and in an attempt of the "regulators" to apply the hickory switch a fight ensued, which resulted in the killing. A deathbed confession of one of the parties engaged in the fight came to the knowledge of the Prosecuting Attorney, who secured the indictments. Church members, ex-officials and present candidates are either directly or indirectly implicated.

In it's study of the looting and murder that is going on in China the world has lost sight of the drastic measures that have been adopted in South Africa, where the country is being laid waste and the brave farmers are giving the choice between surrender and the destruction of all their farming property and the pauperizing of their wives and children.

Ex-Mayor Rhinock for Congress.

Joseph L. Rhinock, ex-mayor of Covington, and now a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress, in this district, was born in Owenton, Owen County, Kentucky, January 4th, 1863. For thirty years he has lived in Covington, and has just finished his second term as mayor of that city. He has been an active and consistent Democrat from the time of his first vote. The confidence his people feel in him is attested by the fact, that they elected him twice to the office of mayor under the new constitution. He was the organizer and first president of the Jefferson Democratic Club of Covington. He is now president of the Covington Library Trustees, and through his personal efforts a donation of $40,000.00 to the Library Fund was recently secured. He came to Covington a penniless boy, and now, though he is but thirty-seven years of age, is a successful and respected business man of high standing among the substantial citizens of his town. He was one of the organizers of the Citizens' National Bank of Covington, of which he has been a director for years.

Joseph Rhinock's reputation is that of a man who pays his debts and keeps his word. An active, energetic man with a happy home life; a political record free from blemishes, and a long career of usefulness before him, he is of the best type of the American citizen of to-day, and a man to whom the honor and distinction of a nomination for Congress is justly due.

Rhinock's Great Fight.

[Enquirer.]

The hard struggle now progressing for the Democratic nomination for Congress grows more desperate and interesting as the day of election, September 22d, approaches. A good citizen said yesterday:

"The manly, dignified and possibly unparalleled contest made by Ex-Mayor Joseph L. Rhinock is winning the admiration of every true Democrat. He has demonstrated beyond a cavil of a doubt that he is the man the Democrats in the country districts must unite upon to insure the defeat of Mr. Berry.

"The despicable and vilifying articles against him, appearing in the nonunion scab paper now controlled by Mr. Rhinock's opponent from Covington, has made his friends cement themselves more closely to him, and all fair-minded Democrats are content to confess that he will by his big vote in Kenton and Campbell counties leave the cities with a majority of 5,000 votes, thereby guaranteeing him the sure winner for the nomination.

"The Democrats of the Sixth District love an active campaigner, admire a fearless and aggressive candidate and will never nominate a bolter, nor will they nominate a man incapable of voicing his sentiments or one who cannot make a speech. Mr. Rhinock's opposition from Covington has been one of many promises and campaign buttons."

Good-By, Jefferson Club.

Said a lifelong member of the Jefferson Club yesterday: "I believe that the action of a handful of the members of the club getting together and stultifying the principles of the club by indorsing a candidate before a Democratic primary will prove a veritable death blow to the club, as no Democratic club ever displayed such animosity and unfairness and enjoyed a long life thereafter.

"Mr. Rhinock was the first President and organizer of the Jefferson Club, and when he made the race for the nomination of Mayor of Covington the club attempted to indorse his candidacy, but Mr. Rhinock, with his motto: 'Fair play for all Democrats,' promptly refused to listen to such action, declaring he had the interests of the club at heart, and in a spirit of fairness insisted on the club awaiting until after the nomination before tendering any indorsement.

"I believe that Mayor Rhinock will get three-fourths of all the votes of the club members, and I regret to see the club fall asunder on account of the lack of good judgment of a half dozen prejudiced and overofficious members in indorsing a certain candidate from Kenton county before the nomination was made."

In Justice to Rhinock.

Ex-Mayor Rhinock and his friends were disposed to be grieved yesterday when they read the published resolutions alleged to have been adopted by the Jefferson Club Friday night. In his candidacy for the Congressional nomination Mr. Rhinock has treated his rivals with the utmost fairness. He has carefully refrained from personal reflection of any kind, recognizing that the best man should win. Mr. Rhinock organized the club, was its first President, doubtless could secure the enthusiastic indorsement of the membership if he were but to ask it. In his past races for office this honor has been repeatedly tendered him and declined, through his desire to be perfectly fair with his opponents.

Aside from any question as to the authenticity of the alleged resolutions, the standing and motives of those credited with having attached their signatures, Mr. Rhinock's friends were especially indignant over the statement that he was a "tool of the Standard Oil Company." It is a well known fact that he has never been employed by that corporation, nor owned a dollar's worth of its stock. This explanation is cheerfully made by the Enquirer.

Secretary Olney evidently has made up his mind that he will not be an innocent bystander and get it in the neck this year, whatever Tom Reed and Grover Cleveland may decide to do.

Ex-Secretary Olney has declared for Bryan and has published an article giving his reasons therefor and advising all Democrats to follow his example.

The first census returns which have come in show that the most rapid growth of the last ten years has been in the border land about the big cities—just outside the heart of the town, but not far enough to be in the country. The trolley car is probably responsible for this development. It has made possible the thick peopling of land which was formerly too far out for the homes of persons whose daily work was in the city.

Stories of the trickiness of the Boers have appeared by the dozen, but none of them to beat their little dodge at Magersfontein. There they obtained a number of gas pipes. Each time a big gun was fired with smokeless powder a gas pipe charged with black powder was let off a couple of hundred yards away; and thus the Boer gunners were enabled to go on firing coolly and collectedly, without even a shell falling near them.

Within the last few years English people have discovered that the interior of the Malay Peninsula is full of rich tin ore. The Chinese knew this hundreds of years ago, and actually made a road all the way down from their own country, a distance of over 1,000 miles. Thousands settled around the mines and worked them, and to-day there is a little nation of Chinese in the peninsula, in whose hands is most of the commerce of the country.

When Li Hung Chang was in Philadelphia during his tour of this country a piece of his silk jacket was torn off in a crowd, either by accident or design. The venerable Mongolian was much annoyed at his loss because the particular piece of silk was embroidered with a figure representing a personal gift from the empress of China. A detective has just found the scrap of garment—he declines to say where except to his superiors—and it will be forwarded to Marquis Li.

Australian rabbit exporters are dissatisfied with the methods of the colonial government towards exterminating rabbits. An expensive department, it is said, is maintained for the purpose of poisoning the animals, whereas trapping would be equally efficacious and would bring in a revenue of 100,000 pounds. There is now a large trade in frozen rabbits and exporters would be willing to pay reasonable prices for them, the money to go to the extermination department.

Austria is the one country in the world which never puts a woman in prison. Instead of giving a female criminal so many months in jail she is sent, no matter how terrible is her record, to one or other of the convents devoted for the purpose and kept there during the time for which she is sentenced. The convent—is not a mere prison in disguise, for its courtyard stands open all day long, the only bar to egress being a nun who acts as porteress, just as in other convents.

Mme. Patti, who recently attained her fifty-seventh birthday, has for many years held the record for the largest sum earned by a woman. Her highest total for twelve months is $350,000. Her present London concert terms are said to be $2,000 a night, but her high-water mark for a single performance is $11,000, received in Buenos Ayres. Mme. Patti has written some "Confessions," from which it appears that her favorite novelist is Dickens; her favorite pastime, entertaining her friends.

The Rev. L. J. Coppin, colored, of Philadelphia, who was recently elected bishop of the African methodist episcopal church in the Transvaal, will sail for Africa next January. By that time the members of the denomination hope to raise $20,000, and when he arrives in the Transvaal there will be a reorganization of the conference and work on the college will be commenced. Bishop Coppin, who is about 55 years old, is a native of Philadelphia and a graduate of the Protestant episcopal divinity school.

The postmaster general of the British Central Africa Protectorate says, the mails are still conveyed for the most part upon the heads and backs of native postmen. The men are recruited chiefly from the Yao and Atonga tribes, and wear a uniform. Fully 300 bags of mail are made up each month at the different post offices in the protectorate for conveyance by these men, the total distance traveled being close upon 10,000 miles per month, the cost of transit being less than a halfpenny per mile per bag

CATHOLIC BODIES TO UNITE.

Meeting of Vast Importance To Be Held in Philadelphia—Delegates From All Over the Country.

Washington, Sept. 7.—Advices received here indicate that one of the most important meetings of Catholic priests and laymen ever held in this country will convene at Philadelphia under Archbishop Ryan's auspices on September 17.

This meeting will be attended by delegates representing every section of the United States and from all the Catholic benevolent and fraternal societies under the guidance of episcopal authority, which, it is estimated, embrace a membership of fully 150,000 souls.

The object in view is to form a federation of these associations, if possible, for the general good of them all. It is understood that the order known as the Catholic Knights of America" has initiated the movement looking to the amalgamation, in this respect following the suggestion recently given by Bishop McFaul, of Trenton, N. J.

TWO SOLDIERS MISSING.

It Is Feared That Lieut. Brewer and Private O'Flaherty Were Captured by Filipino Robbers.

Washington, Sept. 7.—News has reached the war department that First Lieut. Richard Henry Brewer, Company F, 27th infantry, volunteers, a Washington boy, in company with Private O'Flaherty, left Novalichis for Manila on July 13 last. Neither has been heard from since. Lieut. Lieut. Brewer is a grandson of Judge Brewer, of Annapolis.

A NEW VOLCANO.

Guadalajara, Mexico, Sept. 7.—A new volcano has broken forth about 30 miles southeast of the old Colima volcano. The new volcano made its appearance suddenly and without warning. The natives living near the base of the mountain, as it is called, were much alarmed at first and fled from their homes, but as prospects of danger passed they returned. The volcano is small, and local scientists predict that it will soon disappear.

Torpedoboat Dahlgren Damaged.

New York, Sept. 7.—The torpedoboat Dahlgren, while backing out of her slip, collided with the torpedoboat Gwin, according to a dispatch received from Newport, R. I. The Gwin was so much damaged that it will be necessary to send her to the Brooklyn navy yard for repairs, which may cost several thousand dollars. Two plates have been ripped open six or eight feet forward of the smokestack and about a foot above the waterline. It is said the Dahlgren's reversing gear failed to work.

Russia After American Coal.

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 7.—Baron Ferson, Russian naval agent, who returned to Washington Wednesday night, came here to see Wan. Lamb agent for a large firm of Pocahontas coal dealers, and, it is believed in the trade, concluded a contract under which the Russian navy will be supplied with coal from this port.

TROPICAL HURRICANE.

Much Damage Was Wrought on the Southern Coast of Florida.

A Bark Containing Lumber Dashed Upon the Rocks South of Cape Foul Light—The Crew Is Missing.

Miami, Fla., Sept. 8.—The tropical hurricane, which has done considerable damage on the coast of Jamaica and Cuba, struck the Florida coast Wednesday, the wind at one time reaching a velocity of nearly 100 miles an hour. It is learned that the crews of at least two vessels were swept overboard about 50 miles south of here. No damage was done at Miami. Telegraph wires were blown down and communication with the country was cut off from the outside world from Wednesday until Friday afternoon. The bark Culboon, Capt. Richter, of St. Johns, N. B., laden with 33,000 feet of fine lumber, is ashore five miles south of Cape Foot light, about 35 miles south of Miami. She is waterlogged. The Culboon was driven by the force of the waves over one of the reefs forming the inner passage, and is lying in 12 feet of water. Nothing has been heard of her crew. The Culboon encountered the hurricane Wednesday morning. At 10:30, after losing her rudder and nearly all her canvas the vessel was hurled upon the rocks. The vessel and cargo may be saved. The Culboon sailed from Pascagoula, Miss., August 23, and was bound for Rosario, Argentine Republic.

Three miles south of the Culboon is a deserted lumber laden bark which stranded during the night of the 5th. The crew, it is feared, was swept overboard during the storm. The vessel has a wind mill and is consequently thought to be Norwegian.

West Palm Beach, Fla., Sept. 8.—Considerable damage has been done in this section by the tropical hurricane which struck here Wednesday. The gale continues. The bulkhead of the immense Palm Beach pier was swept from its foundation and washed several hundred feet to the north. A force of men were engaged in repairing some slight damage to the pier and had a stationery engine out on the end of it when the storm struck this point. The men all escaped to the shore. The current is running very high and it will be several days before repairs can be attempted. A number of small boats which were anchored interior and lakes were torn from their moorings and sunk. Several docks and seawalls were badly injured.

PORTO RICAN CENSUS.

Under Educational Qualification, the Number Entitled to Vote on the Island Is But 47,973.

Washington Sept. 8.—Gen. Sanger, director of the Porto Rican census, has just published the third bulletin relating to the population of the island of Porto Rico. This deals with the citizenship on the basis of literacy, with special reference to the effect upon the voting population of the educational requirement imposed by the Foraker act.

The males of voting age number 201,071, and but 3.8 per cent. are of foreign birth. Of the white persons of Porto Rican birth, 29.4 per cent. can read or write, while 17.2 per cent. of the colored population are illiterate. Under the educational qualification, the number entitled to vote in the island would be 47,973, or 27 per cent. of the native-born males of voting age, restricting the suffrage to about one-fourth of the adult males. The cities of San Juan and Ponce contain most of the foreign element of the island, but even there the native whites and colored each outnumber the foreign element.

WILL PROCEED TO MANILA.

The Transports Warren and Aztec Arrive at Nagasaki, China, and Kobe, Japan.

Washington, Sept. 8.—The war department has been informed that the transport Warren arrived at Nagasaki Thursday and that the transport Aztec arrived at Kobe, Japan, Friday. The Warren has aboard two battalions of the 9th cavalry and the Aztec the horses of the 3d cavalry. In accordance with the decision of the war department not to send any more troops to China both transports have been ordered to proceed to Manila. The men of the 3d cavalry already have preceded their mounts to the Philippines.

THE POLAR EXPEDITION.

The Stella Polare Reached as Far North as 82.4, But Found No Wintering Harbor.

Christiania, Sept. 8.—Further details regarding the Arctic expedition of the duke of Abruzzi, on board the Stella Polare, whose return was reported Thursday from Tromsoe, Norway, show that the expedition last year through Nightengale sound and the British canal reached as far north as 82.4, but, finding no wintering harbor, it returned to Teplitz bay, Crown Prince Rudolphsland, where the Stella Polare was frozen in about September 1.

The duke of Abruzzi's fingers were frostbitten on a trial sledge trip at Christmas, and two joints were amputated, obliging him to remain for several months in his tent. The cold increased to 52 degrees Celsius. On March 11 the advance was renewed, one sledge and 25 dogs started north. After ten days' marching three started to return to the ship, which, however, they never reached. Their fate is unknown. A second party of three men passed the 83d parallel after a march of 20 days, and then returned to the ship. A third party, led by Capt. Cagni, with two Alpine guides and an Italian sailor, reached latitude 86.33, and was then obliged to return through lack of food. It started with six sledges and 45 dogs, and returned with two sledges and seven dogs, having subsisted for 17 days exclusively on dogflesh.

On August 8 the Stella Polare started homeward. She traversed the British canal in a single day, and then drifted about for a fortnight in a severe struggle with drift ice before reaching the open sea.

INCREASED POPULATION.

Washington, Sept. 8.—The census bureau up to Friday night had tabulated the returns from 54 cities. These show a population of 14,644,711. This is an average increase in population per city of 27.90 percent. The same cities in 1890 had a population of 11,130,045, making a total gain of 3,494,666. The percentage of increase in 1890 was calculated on the aggregate gain and not on the average increase per city as is the case this year. The result was that the percentage of gain, according to the census bureau of this, while appearing to be larger, namely 31.33, was not so in fact, owing to the different method offered for making calculation.

EXPORT DUTY ON TOBACCO.

The Growers of Cuba Submit a Petition to Gov. Gen. Wood Asking for Its Removal.

Havana, Sept. 8.—The tobacco growers have submitted a petition to Gov. Gen. Wood asking the removal of the export duty on tobacco. The petition is being favorably considered, as it affects only the low-grade product, which is not used in the United States, but goes chiefly to Spain.

Gen. Rodriguez, the mayor, will receive official notification Saturday that municipal bonds may be issued for the purpose of sewering Havana.

In view of the fact that the mayor has refused to dismiss the present staff of employes, a majority of the members of the council have passed a vote of want of confidence in him.

Put Torch to Powder Mill.

Fresno, Cal., Sept. 8.—Frank W. Browning suddenly became insane on a ranch near here and emptied two loads from a shotgun into a Japanese who, he imagined, had conspired against him. The Jap died. The insane man next walked to a powder house, half a mile away, applied a torch to it, and was blown, with it, to pieces.

Lumber for the Orient.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 8.—The government transport Goodwin, now at Tacoma, is loading building lumber for the troops in the Orient. She will come to Seattle to complete her cargo of 2,500,000 feet, taking also 600 doors and 800 windows, and then will sail for Taku, China. The war department is to establish a temporary post at Taku.

Jockey Severely Injured.

Chicago, Sept. 8.—An accident of a serious nature occurred in the steeplechase at Harlem. Leando fell at the first jump and rolled over Jockey C. Johnson, who was carried off the field on a stretcher. He was unconscious for nearly an hour. Physicians who attended him said there might be internal injuries but did not anticipate any serious results.

Will Attend the Maneuvers.

Berlin, Sept. 8.—Lieut. Col. Livermore, military attache of the United States legation at Stockholm, who has been spending several days in Berlin, left for Stettin Friday in Emperor William's suite to attend the maneuvers.

Population of Racine, Wis.

PRESENCE OF MIND.

A Little Bit of Bluff That Failed to Work with a Wide Awake Man.

If there be one thing that I more than another admire it is the having one's wits about one—perhaps because I never had mine. To be possessed only of "esprit d'escalier is simply an aggravation, writes John Paul in Harper's Magazine.

As illustrative of ready-witted men I recall an incident that I have often told but never published. Let me do that now in justice to one that is gone.

In company with the late J. R. Osgood I once of an evening dropped in at Wallack's old Fourteenth Street theater. We could get no seats, as there was standing room only. At the end of the first act two orchestra seats were vacant in front, and we walked down and took them. Barely were we seated when two gentlemanly-looking young men came down the aisle and addressed me.

"Beg pardon, but have you checks for those seats?"

I was on the point of rising, when Osgood replied: "No. Have you?"

They hadn't. It was merely a bit of supreme bluff. But how few would have had the readiness to meet and parry.

The Fall of Babylon.

"Now, children," said the Sunday school teacher, "which of you can tell me why Babylon fell?"

There was a long silence. The little ones bent over and looked at one another and drew long breaths, but none of them said anything.

"Come, come!" the teacher exclaimed at length. "I'm surprised! Isn't there any little boy or girl in this class who can tell why Babylon fell? Isn't there any one of you who can think of any reason why Babylon should have fallen?"

Then a boy with large brown freckles on the bridge of his nose and a thumb with a blackened nail put up his hand.

"Ah," the sweet-faced teacher said, "I thought some of you must know, if you only stopped to think. What was it, Percy?"

"Mebby he stepped on a banana peel," Percy suggested.—Chicago Times-Herald.

THOUSANDS DEAD

The Most Destructive Hurricane in Modern Times Visits the Coast of Texas.

CITY OF GALVESTON PARTLY WRECKED

There Was Great Destruction of Property Along the Line for a Hundred Miles Inland.

Several Towns and Villages Were Wiped From the Face of the Earth by the Terrible Gale.

It Is Reported Sabine Pass, Tex., Has Been Completely Destroyed By the Hurricane.

Houston, Tex., Sept. 10.—The storm that raged along the coast of Texas Saturday night was the most disastrous that has ever visited this section. The wires are down, and there is no way of finding out just what has happened, but enough is known to make it certain that there has been great loss of life and destruction of property all along the coast and for 100 miles inland. Every town that is reached reports one or more dead, and the property damage is so great that there is no way of computing it accurately. Galveston remains isolated. The Houston Post and a press correspondent made efforts to get special trains and tugs Sunday with which to reach the island city. The railroad companies declined to risk their locomotives. All sorts of rumors prevail, but with no substantial basis.

Bridges Wrecked.

It is known that the railroad bridges across the bay at Galveston are either wrecked or likely to be destroyed with the weight of a train on them; the approaches to the wagon bridge are gone and it is rendered useless. The bridge of the Galveston, Houston & Northern railroad is standing but the drawbridge over Clear creek and at Edgewater are gone and the road can not get trains through to utilize the bridge across the bay.

A train went down the Columbia tap road Sunday morning as far as Chenango Junction. The town was greatly damaged and the bodies of nine Negroes were taken from the ruins of one house. The train could proceed no further and came back to Houston, leaving the fate of the people at Angleton, Columbia, Brazora, Velasco and Quintana uncertain. The small town of Brookshire, on the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, was almost wiped out by the storm. The crew of the work train brought this information. When the train left there the bodies of four persons had been recovered and the search for others was proceeding. Hempstead, across the country from Brookshire, was also grently damaged, but so far as known no lives were lost.

Sabine Pass Completely Destroyed.

Sabine Pass had not been heard from Sunday. Saturday morning the last news was received from there, and at that time the water was surrounding the old town at the Pass, and the wind was rising and the waves coming high. From the new town, which is some distance back, the water had reached the depot and was running through the streets. The people were leaving for the high country known as the back ridge, and it is believed that all escaped.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 10.—A special to the Constitution from Beaumont, Tex., says it is reported there that the city of Sabine Pass was completely destroyed by the storm. The hurricane was the worst ever known.

Dead Bodies Brought In.

Houston, Tex., Sept. 10.—Two bodies have been brought in from Seabrook, on Galveston bay, and 17 persons are missing there.

Three persons were drowned at Morgan's Point, and others are missing. With the exception of those of Mr. Nicholson and Mrs. James Woodloet, the bodies of the dead have not yet been identified.

In Houston one person was killed—Henry Black, a hack driver. The property damage is great, a conservative estimate placing it at $250,000. The Merchants' and Planters' oil mill was wrecked, entailing a loss of $40,000. The Dickson car wheel works suffered to the extent of $16,000. The big Masonic temple, which is the property of the grand lodge of the state, was partly wrecked.

Churches Damaged.

Nearly every church in the city was damaged. The First Baptist, Southern Methodist and Trinity Methodist, the latter a Negro church, will have to be rebuilt before they can be used again. Many business houses were unroofed. The residence portion of the town presents a dilapidated appearance but the damage in this part of the city has not been so great as in some others. The streets are almost impassable because of the litter of shade trees, fences, telephone wires and poles. Much damage was done to window glass and furniture. Many narrow escapes are recorded.

Another train has left here for Galveston, making the third Sunday. The two preceding ones have not been heard from, as all wires are down.

Train Lifted From the Track.

The Santa Fe train which left here at 7:05 Saturday night was wrecked at a point about two miles north of Alvin. Mrs. Prather, of Rosenberg, Tex., was killed, and several were injured. The train was running slowly when it encountered the heavy storm. It is reported that the train was literally lifted from the track. Mrs. Prather was thrown across the car and half way through a window. When the car was removed it was found that her head had been under water and she was drowned.

GALVESTON STRICKEN.

Thousands of Houses, Mostly Residences, Were Destroyed By the West India Storm.

Houston, Tex., Sept. 10.—The first news to reach this city from the stricken city of Galveston was received Sunday night. James C. Timmins, who resides in Houston, and who is the general superintendent of the National Compress Co., arrived in the city at 8 o'clock Sunday night from Galveston. He was one of the first to reach here with tidings of the great disaster which has befallen that city and the magnitude of that disaster remains to be told because of his endeavors to reach home. After remaining through the hurricane on Saturday he departed from Galveston on a schooner and came across the bay to Morgan's Point, where he caught a train for Houston. The hurricane, Mr. Timmins said, was the worst ever known.

The estimates made by citizens of Galveston was that 4,000 houses, most of them residences, have been destroyed, and that at least 1,000 people have been drowned, killed or are missing. Some business houses were also destroyed, but most of them stood, though badly damaged.

The City a Complete Wreck.

The city, Mr. Timmins avers, is a complete wreck so far as he could see from the water front. Water was blown over the island by the hurricane, the wind blowing at the rate of 80 miles an hour straight from the gulf and forcing the sea water before it in big waves. The gale was a steady one, the heart of it striking the city about 5 o'clock Saturday evening and continuing without intermission until midnight Saturday night, when it abated somewhat, although it continued to blow all night.

Galveston Submerged.

The city of Galveston, he says, is now entirely submerged and cut off from communication. The boats are gone, so the railroads can not be operated, and the water is so high people can not walk out by way of the bridge across the bay, even should that bridge be standing. Provisions will be badly needed, and a great many of the people lost all they had. The water works power house was wrecked, and a water famine is threatened, as the elsterns were all ruined by the overflow of salt water. This Mr. Timmins regards as the most serious problem to be faced now. The city is in darkness, the electric plant having been ruined.

There is no way of estimating the property damage at present. So far as he could see or hear, Mr. Timmins says, the east end portion of the city, which is the residence district, has been practically wiped out of existence. On the west end, which faces the gulf on another portion of the island, much havoc was done. The beach has been swept clean, the bathhouses are destroyed and many of the residences are total wrecks.

Nearly 3,000 Lives Lost.

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 10.—A special to the Commercial Appeal from New Orleans says: "Advices regarding the awful effects of the storm which has been raging along the gulf coast of Texas are just beginning to arrive, and the story they tell is fraught with horror. First in importance is the news that Galveston was struck by a tidal wave and that the loss of life there was between 2,500 and 3,000. The water is 15 feet deep over Virginia Point. Telegraph wires are down to Port Lavaca, Rockport, Aransas Pass, Corpus Christi and Brownsville, on the lower coast, and grave fears are entertained regarding the safety of the inhabitants of those towns."

COMMUNICATION CUT OFF.

Rumors of Dire Disaster Are Flying Thick and Fast, Without Being Authenticated—Wires Down.

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 10.—Telegraphic communication with South Texas is cut off about 100 miles north of Houston. Up to 3 p. m. Sunday it had been impossible to obtain reliable news from Galveston as to the extent of the hurricane in that section.

Rumors of dire disaster are flying thick and fast without being in any way authenticated. All that is known is that the disaster has occurred, but its extent is not known. The last wire the Western Union had to Houston went down at 1:30 Sunday morning. This wire was working so badly at that hour that whatever information Houston had to impart could not be made out. The storm center is rapidly approaching Northern Texas, and its fury wrecks all telegraph lines in its path, doing vast damage and killing people in scattered localities.

Smithville Partially Destroyed.

A cyclone has demolished a part of the town of Smithville, on the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railroad. A number of persons are reported killed. The railroad and telegraph companies have gangs and wrecking trains out attempting to work their way south, but the fierceness of the storm makes it impossible for them to gain any headway, having to seek shelter in order to save their lives. The conditions at Galveston and Houston are undoubtedly grave. The four immense bridges, from four to six miles each in length, connecting Galveston with the main land, are either wholly or partially wrecked.

The storm at Temple was severe, and fears are entertained that the city is badly wrecked.

The railroad officials say it is impossible to move trains south of Houston at present.

Without attempting to recite any of the various disastrous rumors, the conservative opinion is that the situation at Galveston is extremely grave, with no possible hope of news from that section for many hours to come. Courtney, North-bound trains from Houston Saturday night were from 15 to 18 hours late.

Serious Disasters.

A private message from San Antonio states that a serious disaster occurred at Corpus Christi, Rockport and other coast towns, the nature of which can not be determined.

A bulletin from Smithville at noon stated that the grain elevators and other large buildings in Galveston [illegible] into the bay.

All the railroads southward from Dallas at noon issued a bulletin instructing their agents to discontinue the sale of tickets or accepting freight for the south until further orders. All efforts to reach Sabine Pass and Port Arthur have failed.

DEATH AND DESOLATION.

Houses, Barns, Crops and Orchards Destroyed Along the Columbia Tap Railroad.

Houston, Tex., Sept. 10.—A train came in on the Columbia Tap railroad Sunday afternoon and its crew tell a story of death and desolation in the country through which they passed. Conductor Ferguson states that houses, barns, crops and orchards have been destroyed and great damage has been done. A. L. Forbes, postal clerk, reported that at Oyster creek the train crew and passengers heard cries coming out of a mass of debris. Several persons answered the cries and found a Negro woman fastened under a roof. They pulled her out and she informed her rescuers that there were others under the roof. A further search resulted in the finding of nine dead bodies, all colored persons. When the train arrived at Angleton, the jail, all the churches and a number of houses had been blown down. Three fatalities are known to have occurred at Angleton but the train stopped there only few minutes and the number of killed or their names could not be learned. Many persons killed

At Areola a family named Wofford had gathered in the second story of their house. The upper portion of the house was blown away, and Mr. Wofford's mother was instantly killed. The hurricane was particularly severe at Brookshire, 27 miles west of Houston, on the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railroad. Four dead bodies have been taken from the debris of wrecked houses, and it is believed that others have been killed. It is reported that only four houses are left standing in Brookshire, which had a population of 600 people.

Later reports received from Alvin state that many persons were killed there. Eleven bodies have been recovered.

AT VIRGINIA POINT.

Two Hundred Corpses Were Counted From a Relief Train—The Prairie Strewn With Debris.

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 10.—The following telegram was just received from Houston by the News:

"Relief train just returned. They could not get closer than six miles of Virginia Point where the prairie was covered with lumber, debris, pianos, trunks and dead bodies. Two hundred corpses were counted from the train. A large steamer is stranded two miles this side of Virginia Point as though thrown up by a tidal wave. Nothing can be seen of Galveston. Two men were picked up who floated across the main land who say they estimate the loss of life up to the time they left at 2,000."

The above message is addressed to Superintendent Felton, Dallas, and comes from Mr. Vaughan, manager of the Western Union of Houston.

A Battle With Wind and Wave.

New Orleans, Sept. 10.—The Norwegian steamer Utstein, Capt. Anravold, arrived from Porto Cortez Sunday after a terrific battle with wind and waves. The Utstein reports that the steamer Jos. Oteri, Jr., with her rudder post gone, is anchored about 40 miles south of Southwest Pass. A towboat has been sent to the relief of the disabled steamer.

BULLER ADVANCES.

He Came Into Action With the Boers East of Lydenburg—Movements of Lord Methuen.

Capetown, Sept. 10.—Sir Redvers Buller continues his advance. He crossed the Mauch Berg, ten miles east of Lydenburg, and came into action with the Boers.

The occupation of Lydenburg, which took place last Thursday, is regarded as making one of the last stages of the war. The Boers now talk of trekking into German territory.

It is said that papers seized at Pretoria show that the Netherlands Railway Co. in many ways actively assisted the Boers. It converted its workshops into arsenals and provided the Transvaal forces with horseshoes.

The new Municipal Gas Co., of Chicago, will cut the price of gas to 50 cents a thousand feet.

RETURNED TO PEKING.

Japanese Cavalry Escort Prince Ching to the Chinese Capital.

No New Developments in the Chinese Situation at Washington—No News Received From Gen. Chaffee at War Department.

Washington, Sept. 10.—Acting Secretary Hill, of the state department, said Sunday night that there were no new developments in the Chinese situation Sunday night. Dr. Hill was at the state department for a time during the morning, but no telegrams of importance had come during the night and there was nothing to make public. The naval officials were also without any information from the east during the day, nor were any dispatches from Gen. Chaffee posted at the war department. The Japanese legation furnished a news paragraph of considerable interest and importance, indicating that the Chinese imperial family are alive to the necessity of having a duly authenticated representative at Peking to meet the foreigners with a view to the arrangement of affairs there. This news is the return of Prince Ching to Peking to which place he was escorted by a company of Japanese several days ago. Prince Ching is one of the best known pro-foreigners in China, has occupied important positions in the government of that country and his return by the direction of the emperor is to the officials here a good augury for the opening of negotiations for peace.

Washington, Sept. 10.—The Japanese legation has received the following telegram from the foreign office at Tokio:

Gen. Yamaghuchi wired to the following effect:

"Col. Shiba, who was sent with a company of cavalry to Ting-Ho, September 3, escorted Prince Ching back to Peking. The prince's residence, being in the district occupied by Japanese is guarded by them. Previous to his arrival the prince communicated to Maj. Gen. Fukushima saying that on account of the present grave situation he had been ordered by the emperor to return to Peking and to arrange affairs immediately.

"The district in possession of Japanese is now quiet and in order, and the Chinese, entertaining no fear, have resumed their business.

"The railway south of Tang-Sung is working, but it is unable to say when communication beyond that place will be reopened."

Tokio, Sept. 7.—Advices from Peking, dated September 1, say that Emperor Kwang Su was then at Hsuen Hwa Fu, in the province of Chi Li, 130 miles north of Peking. It is also reported that Gen. Yung Lu and his entire family committed suicide. A similar report has been received regarding Hsu Fu (possibly Emperor Kwang Su's tutor).

Li Ping Heng, at one time governor of Shantung, who was reported fatally wounded on August 10, is said to have been killed in the engagement at Yung Chau.

THE STRIKE POSTPONED.

It Is Believed That the Operators Are About to Make Concessions of Some Kind to the Miners.

Shamokin, Pa., Sept. 10.—Fourteen thousand miners between here and Mt. Carmel Sunday morning received from George Hartlein, secretary of district No. 9, United Mine Workers of America, the news from President Mitchell that a postponement of the strike had been ordered. Most of the men feel that the operators are about to make a concession of some kind, and they are eagerly awaiting further news from Indianapolis. In case no concessions are granted within two or three days, the men as a whole expect President Mitchell to order the strike.

Secretary Hartlein gave out the following statement Sunday night relative to the miners observing President Mitchell's orders for a postponement of the strike:

"Although the miners in a great sense were disappointed, they feel that their cause is being honestly handled by the executive board and that arrangements are being made between the board and the operators whereby the strike will be averted. Otherwise, if the operators make no concessions, there is no alternative but to strike."

Gen. McClernand's Condition Better.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 10.—The condition of Gen. John A. McClernand was slightly improved Sunday. He takes some nourishment, and there is now a shadow of hope for his recovery.

INTERESTING STATE NEWS.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Bill Introduced in Kentucky House to Make Primary Elections the Sole Manner of Nominating.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 5.—The general assembly convened at noon Tuesday after a three days' recess, and a host of new election measures were offered. The bills offered by the democratic members are all drafted after the Goebel election law, but many safeguards not in that measure are embraced in them. When the senate assembled at noon, Senator Harrel, democrat, offered a resolution providing for the appointment of a special election committee of three republicans and two democrats, to sit with the regular committee and consider all bills offered. The resolution lies over until Wednesday.

Senator Johnson (Dem.) introduced a bill which provides for removing the party emblems from the official ballot, and also requires universal registration. Senator Puryear also had a new bill.

Steve Henry, of Kenton, offered a bill changing the hours of election as before outlined. It provides that the polls shall open at 6 a. m. and close at 7 p. m. and is for the benefit of laboring people. Abele, of Covington, offered a bill similar to the one offered by Henry. Walton, of Hart, and Heissman, of Louisville, offered bills repealing the Goebel law, but offering no substitute.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 6.—Representative Swan, of Calloway, sent up in the house Wednesday an amendment to the Goebel law, and Mr. Burkamp, of Newport, offered an amendment providing for the opening of the polls in cities of the second class at 6 o'clock instead of 7 o'clock in the morning. Mr. Reed, of Allen county, made the first speech. He said that all the republican minority of the house wanted was a fair law and that the republicans would vote with the democrats to secure it. Mr. Roy, of Carlisle county, was the first speaker on the democratic side. He favored the preservation of the ballots and general registration throughout the state. Mr. Baird, of Barren, followed. He argued in favor of his bill. Mr. Lewis, of Leslie, a mountain member, favored equal representation on all election boards. Mr. Bagby, of Boyle, a democrat, indorsed what Mr. Lewis said.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 7.—The senate session opened at 10:30 o'clock Thursday, and the agreement of the night before between the conservatives and the radicals regarding the selection of a special committee on elections was carried out. The democrats selected six partisan members on the committee and the republicans selected two Brown democrats, one populist and two republicans.

A resolution providing for joint sessions of the senate and house committees was adopted.

The resolution for sine die adjournment on September 20 was entered.

Representative George Travers, of Campbell county, introduced a bill in the house of representatives which, if adopted, will do away with party conventions in Kentucky. It provides that on the first Tuesday in August each year primary elections be held to nominate candidates for the offices to be filled at the November election. All parties casting 25 per cent. of the vote must hold primaries.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 8.—When the lower branch of the assembly met at 11 o'clock Friday, three new election bills were offered. Mr. Brown, of Nelson, offered one providing that a circle be placed under the official device on the ballot, instead of a square. Mr. Randolph, of Caldwell, offered two measures. One provides that the precinct officers be equally divided between the two dominant parties, and that in case of a tie between them as to the right of a person to vote he be allowed to do so. The second provides that an election officer be not required to be a householder, as required by present law.

The senate held a short session Friday morning, meeting at 10:30 o'clock. The only business done was the defeat of a resolution providing for the paying of mileage to the officers of the two houses.

The senate special committee on suffrage and election met at 11 o'clock in the morning and organized by the selection of Senator Ferguson, democrat, chairman, and Senator Kirk, republican, as secretary. It was determined that the committee should meet with the special house committee, but it should act separately.

Johnson, owned by H. K. Knapp, of New York; Magian, property of Perry Belmont, of New York, and Ornament, owned by H. P. Headley, the owner of the farm. The stud barn caught fire and was partially consumed when the fire was discovered. Sir Walter and Magian were with difficulty taken from the barn, and Ornament and G. W. The Fairview Sunday School will give an outing, Saturday, 15th at Dry Creek.

Hayden Davis, who was taken very ill, suddenly, a few days ago, is improving.

Mrs. J. Miller and son, Herbert, of Newport, were guests of Dr. Murat and wife, Sunday.

The Constance Sunday school outing was a success as to numbers, but in the refreshment line water was very scarce.

Walton.

Mrs. Susan Lanahan, a former resident of Walton, died in Ludlow, Sept. 5th., aged 41 years.

W. E Vest, last week, sold the Southgate tract of land containing 60 acres to J. D. Mayhugh for $6,500.

"The Don't Worry Club" erstwhile "The Drag" had a jolly time at Mrs. Greene Fields, Friday night.

Physicians' prescriptions and family receipts given prompt and careful attention at H. L. Eskew's pharmacy.

Mr. Harry L. Eskew has had several coats of paint on the floor of the Walton Pharmacy and it presents a very handsome appearance.

The success of Walton Pharmacy is due to the strict adhereuce to its business motto: "In medicine pure quality is of the first importance."

On the 5th inst., John L. Vest, Esq., left this locality to abide permanently in Independence. There are most too many attorneys here to suit him.

The pharmacy of H. L. Eskew consists of a clean and fresh stock of drugs and medicines, simply because goods are disposed of and immediately replenished.

Steve L. Ingram has succeeded in obtaining work in the Krell Piano Co., Cincinnati. He will use the commuter going into the city every morning and coming home at night.

Mrs. G. W. Marten had a very brilliant lawn fete at her residence Saturday night, for the benefit of the Baptist church. It was well attended and was quite a success in every respect.

Some lines of business are flourishing in Walton. Mr. Ike Kahn is building an extension to his store 18x30 ft. nearly doubling its capacity. He says he has never been in a place that suited him better than Walton.

Brittenhelm Bros. sold the property occupied by R. C. Greene to Enoch Weat for $2,250. Verily, the Graded Free School is doing the work claimed for it. There is a great demand for houses and the clamor for them has only commenced.

Brittenhelm Bros. are putting a capacious cistern on the old Brooks property—10 feet in depth by 10 in diameter and will contain 188.5 barrels of water. There should be many more as the people here have suffered much in dry times for drinking water, to say nothing of culinary and other purposes.

Mr. John W. Thomas exhibits the handsomest souvenir of Wm. Jennings Bryan that has yet been shown. It is a heavily japanned tea tray about 12x 18 inches with a superb likeness of the Great Commoner, cabinet size on the face. You can get one of these useful and highly ornamental articles for 35 cents at the Phoenix Hotel and they are really the prettiest things out.

The Graded Free School promises to be a pronounced success. The first week has passed and all went nicely. The classes have been arranged and the pupils are already at hard work; the teachers have been very busy and feel greatly encouraged by the interest shown in the success of the school by the pupils themselves. Numerous applications are coming in from persons outside of the district.

Mrs. Lora Wills and husband are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Diers, on High street. The reader will see that the lady's name comes first; this is in accordance with an idea which will hereafter prevail in the Walton news, and that in all cases where one of our girls chooses to marry an "outlander," and they afterward visit the place, she as the best known of the pair shall have the precedence in being mentioned; and then, also patent to every married man that they invariably take it whether or no it is accorded them. As an instance, a young fellow lately succeeded in getting one of our attractive young ladies to think he would be her devoted adorer for life. She married him and the notice of their appearance here this morning reads, "Mrs. Ethel Pangell and husband are visiting Walton for a few days. It is learned from Mrs. P. that she will go to housekeeping in Verona, her husband being the night operator of the L. & N. R. R. at that station.

Col. J. R. Whitson and John Meeks, of Florence, came very near making a mistake, "Labor Day" by going to work. They just happened to think.

William Sutherland has gained quite a reputation as a veranda builder this summer. His taste and skill in this line are unquestioned and hard to beat.

If we were to tell the readers of your most excellent paper that our friend, H. O. Rouse, received as a present, the blackest and sleekest imported cat in this district, there would be no harm done.

Rev. Adams preached a very interesting and instructive sermon, Sunday evening, concerning neglected opportunities and reading worthless, trashy books by young people especially.

The Hon. Harry Baker, of Erlanger, has a host of friends in Boone, who are glad to learn of his returning health, and hope to soon see him rosy as a peach and as happy as a man with a shirt waist on.

Any Democrat who desires a solid silver, hand engraved, free silver campaign badge, can deposit $1 with the Recorder and get it. This campaign will be a memorable one and the badge can be worn as a souvenir of it for 50 years. Fail's free silver badge is the only one made of solid silver and to last for years as a handsome pin.

The residence of Jas. A. Huey came within an ace of burning to the ground one day last week, and only for the prompt work done by the bucket brigade and Solomon Long with his fire pump, would have gone. Painters were burning old paint off of the weatherboarding and its likely, set fire to bird's nest or some accumulation of dry stuff on inside.

Should we say that J. L. Frazier had on his farm a spring that flowed pure apple vinegar and all he had to do was to bottle it up and sell it, most people would denounce the statement as a quovadian fable. Then if we said Napolean Bristow had raised two acres of pickles near this spring and when the cucumbers were ready for pickling had irrigated the patch with vinegar from "Squire's" spring, converting the entire outfit into first-class pickles, ready for market in a few hours, the statement would be regarded as fishy, at least, and Tom Judge would never mention his "lightning bug story" again. If we happened to mention that John Garrison had fattened 75 hogs in "Nips" pickle patch on the pickles left for seed and afterward turned the vinegar in on them for 48 hours, converting the whole lot of pickles into pickled pork, worth 75c a pound, the story would be doubted by some folks, because some folks will doubt undoubtful things. But if we should say that spreading vipers by the thousand had risen up out of this spring with heads on them like balloons, tongues like flaming swords and 40 feet long and had eaten the spring, hogs, pickle patch and every man, woman and child up within 5 miles, the statement would be about as reasonable as the article published in the Enquirer about "spreading vipers" in Boone and Kenton counties.

Last Saturday was the hottest day of the season. The mercury registered 100 in the shade here, and it ran up to 130 in the sunshine.

Notwithstanding the severe hot weather of last week, the tobacco raisers were busy cutting and housing their tobacco. The crop is equal to or better than the crop of last year, and the most of it is put away in good shape, although there is some we are informed that is damaging considerably in the house.

Gasburg.

The Woolper bridge will be finished this week.

School in our district will begin next Monday, Lizzie Parker, teacher.

The melon crop is nearly exhausted. Owing to the inferior quality of the melons they are selling extremely low.

Some corn has been put in the shock and is said by those who did the cutting, to be the heaviest they ever handled.

Capt. J. D. Parker and son, Frank, of Cincinnati, spent a couple of days, recently, with relatives here and at Petersburg.

There is a great demand for tobacco sticks, nearly every raiser is out and a very considerable portion of the crop is uncut.

We hear that a prosperous young farmer of the Rabbit Hash country is negotiating for a truck farm here, and will move to it this fall if the trade is made.

The turkey crop is the smallest for years, in fact, the business of raising turkeys has almost been abandoned on account of the complaints of many who never raise them.

Pete Woodruff, who has lived on the farm of Wm. Appleton, deceased, for the last 18 years, has rented a farm on Wilson creek, Ind., one mile above Aurora, and will move there in the near future.

A local politician, who is usually well informed as to the lay of the land politically in this (Petersburg) precinct, told us that Berry would get double as many votes in the precinct as the other three candidates combined, or, in other words, two-thirds of the whole vote. The Gasburg end of the precinct is in a manner solid for Berry.

Utzinger.

Wm. Gaines will teach our school this winter.

A. N. S. Walton sold to Thompson & Wingate 30 head of butcher cattle, Saturday, weighed at Bullittsville, for $4.10 per huadred.

Corn cutting and tobacco cutting are keeping the boys out of mischief now. Well followed, they take the poetry out of a fellow about as fast as anything we know of.

The sale of the personal property of T. E. Randall, deceased, last Saturday, was well attended and everything sold well. It was a great day for the candidates and they made good use of the time.

The writer was visited by an insurance agent, last week, from Lawrenceburg, Ind. He represented the Equitable Burial Association, and when asked if a person could quit it at any time he chose, referred us to the name of the association. "Don't you see that it is the e-quit-able." We took a membership.

RHINOCK'S HOT RAP AT HIS OPPONENTS.

[Kentucky Post.]

Ex-Mayor Joseph L. Rhinock made a hot speech last Saturday night at Erlanger in which he took some sharp raps at his opponents for the Democratic congressional nomination.

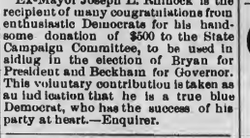
He said he would ask the voters to nominate a man who would stand by Bryan. They could therefore not afford to nominate Congressman Berry, because of his treachery to the State ticket last year. Rhinock then took up Congressman Berry's record as a party man from 1872 down.

He said that in 1872 Berry ran for Congress against W. E. Arthur, the regular Democratic nominee, stating that he was "independent in politics and recognized no party fealty." In a speech some days after that Rhinock said Berry claimed that the national existence of the Democratic party had ceased. He claimed that in the next year Berry supported the Republican nominees.

In 1874, he said, Berry was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for mayor of Newport, and, failing to secure it, ran as an independent, thus helping the Republicans to win. In 1891, when Berry was defeated for State Senator, Rhinock said, he gave a statement to a Cincinnati paper, in which he went on to tell how he thought a coalition of liberal Democrats and Republicans for the overthrow of the dominant Democratic party would be a good thing.

Mr. Rhinock claimed that in 1886 at the convention which nominated John G. Carlisle, Berry said: "I do not know whether I am a Democrat or not."

Turning his attention then to D. Linn Gooch, Rhinock said his opponent had come to Kentucky not so very long ago from a point in Ohio, and was now advertising himself as the friend of Goebel. The speaker said in 1899, when Goebel was running for Governor, he himself had spent $5000 to run a paper in Kentou county, when Goebel was without an organ.



Rhinock said Goebel was his friend. "I appointed him," said the speaker to the only appointive office he ever held, that of President of the Library Trustees.

Rhinock accused Gooch of having secured the support of a nonunion paper. He referred to a statement in that paper which said if Rhinock were seut to Congress he would be the only Jew who ever represented Kentucky at Washington. Mr. Rhinock spoke of his father living in Kentucky more than 50 years, and said if his birth injured him, then he did not think he was in America.

He accused Gooch of hiring a lot of cheap speakers because he could not make a speech himself. In conclusion he strenuously denied the charges that he was or ever had been an employe of the Standard Oil Company, or that he ever owued any stock of that corporation.

Ex-Mayor Joseph L. Rhinock is the recipient of many congratulations from enthusiastic Democrats for his handsome donation of $500 to the State Campaign Committee, to be used in aiding in the election of Bryan for President and Beckham for Governor. This voluntary contribution is taken as an indication that he is a true blue Democrat, who has the success of his party at heart.—Enquirer.

Immediately after the ceremony an elegant repast was partaken of by all present. The couple were the recipients of many handsome and useful presents. They left the same afternoon on the F. F. V. for Upland, Ind., where they will reside for the next two years and where the groom is finishing his ministerial studies. Only the immediate relatives of the family were present. May happiness and prosperity ever be their lot as they journey together through life.—Bracken Chronicle.

Joseph W. Scott, owner of the Sugar Grove Herd of Jersey cattle had great luck with his stock at both the Florence and Alexandria fairs this year. He captured 16 premiums at Florence, heretofore noted in these columns, and took the following at Alexandria:

He also won three first prizes at Alexandria fair.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. A. Gaines entertained, last Thursday evening, a number of young friends in honor of their guests, Miss Helen Mercl Schuster, of Covington, and Miss Margaret H. Laughlin, of Walnut Hills, Ohio. It is needless to say that the entertainment was a most enjoyable affair to all who were favored in being present. Mr. and Mrs. Gaines have proven themselves delightful host and hostess in their new enterprise, in converting their beautiful home into a summer resort for the elite of society in Covington and Cincinnati. Mr. Gaines is one of those jovial, unselfish, generous hearted souls that makes his guests enjoy the full measure of bliss whilst under his roof. Mrs. Gaines is a genial, unassuming hostess, who makes her guests feel that they are one of the family circle. In this roll they have grown exceedingly popular in Covington and Cincinnati society.

Miss Schuster has with her her niece, Miss Helen A. Reame, a beautiful little Miss aged 6, who sang and recited like a born artist—she appeared in public the first time at the age of four. Judging from her beauty, grace and self-possession we predict for her a bright future and feel confident that she will prove a worthy [illegible] Father distinguished aunt and instructress.

Miss Schuster, after repeated solicitation, recited one of her favorite selections. She made a very happy selection, for it not only held the guests spellbound during the recital, but it gave her the opportunity to manifest her artistic culture in facial expression, thorough command of voice, graceful and appropriate gesticulation. In the social circle during the evening she proved herself a most charming and brilliant conversationalist. She has consented to give an entertainment in the Court-house at Burlington on the evening of October 5th. She will bring other artists to assist her. Due notice will be given in next week's Recorder.

Misses Sue Bernard and Mary Daugherty, of Cynthiana, who have been spending several days with Miss Fannie Willis, contributed also to the enjoyment of the evening. They are highly cultured musicians and they rendered some lovely music on the piano. In the social circle their genial natures cultured minds and lady-like deportment render them very attractive. They have returned home leaving behind many admirers.

Miss Margaret H. Laughlin is highly cultured in music and well versed in the art of elocution, having once been a pupil of Miss Schuster—owing to the fact of her having lately buried a sister we were denied the pleasure of hearing her recite or perform on the piano.

Miss Pauline Winston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Winston, who lives with her aunt in Carrollton, contributed to the social enjoyment of the evening. She is a very bright and charming young lady.

Mrs. Lizzie Gaines, of Louisville, was present with her beautiful and gifted daughter, Miss Allie Lee. Her gift consists in her marvelous talent for music. She plays all of the popular airs beautifully and in perfect time. Her touch is exquisite and her fingering is truly artistic. She has never taken a lesson in music.

I will not undertake to mention the various parts played in the evening's entertainment by our home talent. With two or three exceptions, they were all present and did all in their power to make the evening a success.

Williamstown, Ky., Sept. 10.—I will not withdraw and any suggestion or intimation that I will withdraw from the Congressional race in the Sixth Kentucky District in favor of Rhinock or Gooch or anybody else is a political canard, woven out of the desperate imagination of my opponents in this race. I am in the race to stay. My assessment is paid and my name is at the head of the ticket. I have the votes with which to win, and I am getting more every day. Let my friends nail the suggestion everywhere as a campaign lie, put out by desperate machine politicians.

The home of Mrs. Mary Craven was the scene of a pretty wedding on last Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 5th. The spacious parlor was filled with relatives of the young couple. Sweet flowers added their beauty and fragrance, while the sunshine shed brightness over the scene. To the mellow tones of the wedding march rendered by Mrs. George Craven, the attendants, Mr. Wilfred Bullock and Miss Jenny Craven, sister of the bride, entered and stood apart, while the bride, Miss Edith Craven and Mr. Edward Aylor, advanced between them and were met by her pastor, Rev. M. J. Hoover, who spoke the solemn and tender words that made them husband and wife. After receiving congratulations, all were invited to partake of delicious refreshments, after which the bride and groom and their attendants left for Indiana to visit an aunt of the bride. The bride, who is a pretty brunette, looked sweet and winsome in a dress of white mull with lace yoke and underslevees, and trimmed with chiffon and ribbon. She carried bride's roses and ferns. The dress of the bride's maid was also of white closely resembling that of the bride. The groom and his attendant wore the usual black. They received numerous bridal presents.

BRYAN AT CHICAGO.

Speaks to Labor Day Celebraters Upon the Rights and Privileges of Workingmen Under a Republican Form of Government.

Twenty thousand workingmen listened to William J. Bryan at Electric park, Chicago, on Labor day, who, in the course of a lengthy address upon topics suited to the day, said:

"Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen:

"I am greatly obliged to the committee for the invitation which enables me to participate in the celebration of Labor day at this place. This day has been wisely set apart by law to emphasize the dignity of labor and for the consideration of those subjects which especially affect the interests of the wage earner. The laboring men constitute so large and so indispensable a portion of the population that no social, economic or political question can be [illegible] without an investigation of the condition therewith. But there are some questions which touch them immediately, while others only operate upon them in a general way.

"The first thing to be considered is the laboring man's ambition; what are his aims and his purposes; for what is he striving? The animal needs only food and shelter because it has nothing but its body to care for; but man's wants are more numerous. The animal complains when it is hungry, and is contented when its hunger is satisfied; but man is made in the image of his Creator, is a three-fold being and must develop the head and the heart as well as the body. He is not content with mere physical existence; neither will he be content unless all avenues of advancement are open to him. His possibilities must be as unlimited as his aspirations.

"In other countries and in other civilizations, men have been condemned by birth to a particular occupation, but here and here in this country each man, however or wherever born, can strive for the highest rewards in business, state or church, and these avenues of advancement must be kept open.

"No civilization can be considered perfect which does not plant a hope in the breast of every child born into the world; the nearer we approach to this ideal, the better is our civilization. Those who complain of existing conditions cannot be put aside as disturbers of the peace. To seek a remedy for every abuse of government is more patriotic than to profit by bad systems and then frown down all criticism. There should be no antagonism between those engaged in the various occupations, and there will be none when all recognize the mutual obligations which are due between citizens. Our desire should be, not to separate the people into warring factions, but to bring them into better acquaintance and to teach them to live with each other. The enmity which the poor sometimes feel toward the rich and the contempt which the rich sometimes manifest toward the poor would be avoided if each knew the other better and both were content to be guided by the strict rules of justice.

"The extremes of society are really not as far apart as they appear. Those who work for wages to-day may, under a good government, be employers in a few years, and the sons of those who are employers to-day may in a short time be day laborers. Since no one can save posterity from the evil effects of a bad law, all should strive for legislation which will protect every citizen in his rights and in the enjoyment of the fruits of his own genius, his own industry and his own integrity.

"It is of advantage to the rich as well as to the poor that the children of all have an opportunity to secure an education; for education widens the individual's horizon, increases his capacity for usefulness, multiplies his equipments and makes him in every way more serviceable to society. Victor Hugo has described the mob as the human race in misery. Anything which is well-to-do have a selfish interest, and should feel a moral concern, in removing despair from every human breast. As misery is lessened the security of property is increased; human life is protected in proportion as happiness is promoted.

"Why should the man who eats at a well-supplied table forget the man whose toil furnishes the food? Why should the man who warms himself by the fire forget the man whose labor in the forest or in the mine brings forth the fuel? Why should the man clad in the best products of the loom forget the man whose calloused hands make fine clothing possible? Both the consumer and the producer are necessary, but of the two the producer comes first in point of time and in point of importance. Shall the rosebud, blooming in beauty and shedding its fragrance on the air, despise the roots of the bush because they come into actual contact with the soil? Destroy the bud and the root dies, and a second bud will appear, as beautiful and fragrant as the first; but destroy the roots and bud and bush will perish.

"How can the wage earner secure that share of the earth's bounties and the government's protection which he deserves? The associations formed by workingmen have been productive of much good.

"The labor organization as we now find it is the product of industrial conditions. The individual found himself at a disadvantage when dealing with the corporate employer, and the organization not only enables him to contend for his rights upon terms more nearly equal, but it stimulates him to study the questions and the conditions which surround him.

"The labor organization has been foremost in advocating the reforms which have already been secured. Seven years ago the secret ballot was demanded by the wage earners for their own protection. That ballot has been obtained, and through its operations those who toil find that individuals or corporations are able to protect their political rights and to use the ballot according to their own judgments. This is a long step in advance.

"The labor organization has done much to lessen the evils of child labor. No one can visit the factories where children are employed without contemplating the crime which is being perpetrated upon posterity. If there is any temporary economic advantage in the employment of children of tender age, it is insignificant when measured against the permanent injury done to present and future generations. To rob a child of its school days is bad enough, but to bend its back by a load for which only the adult is fitted is even worse.

"The labor organization has also contributed towards the shortening of the hours of toil, and it should not cease its efforts until the eight-hour day is secured. Approximately, one-third of the 24 hours must be given to sleep; if another third of the day is devoted to manual labor, only eight hours are left for eating, for going to and from the place of work, for the reading of current news, for mental improvement, recreation, social intercourse and domestic life. Since the hours occupied in eating and travel cannot be encroached upon, every hour added to the day's labor must be taken from the time devoted to the intellectual development, recreation and the family.

"The labor organization has been a consistent and persistent advocate of the doctrine of arbitration, although it is difficult to see why the burden of this reform should be thrown upon the laboring man. Surely the employer, if he would take a comprehensive view of his own interests, would be as much benefited by arbitration as the employe, and because every prolonged contest between labor and capital brings interruption to business and pecuniary loss to those who are in no way responsible for the disagreement, society in general is even more interested than employers or employes. The desire for justice is so universal that the public can be depended upon to support the finding of an impartial board of arbitration as certainly as it can to support the successful contestant in a law suit. The court of arbitration is one of the certainties of the future, and when it is secured and perfected, we shall wonder why its coming was delayed so long.

"The blacklist, by means of which employers combine to deprive the discharged workman of employment in one of the more recent menaces to the laboring man. The independence of the wage earner decreases as the difficulty of obtaining employment increases, and the skilled workman, whose life has been spent in acquiring efficiency in a certain trade or occupation, becomes practically the chattel of the employer if every opportunity to make use of his experience is closed by agreement between employers.

"The laboring man is also interested in legislation prohibiting oriental immigration. It is unfair to the American workman, who is the foundation of the nation's wealth in time of peace and its defense in time of war, to subject him to the danger of having his occupation given to an oriental laborer, often brought in by contract, who has no permanent interest in our government. If the Asiatics come to work for a few years, [illegible] scale, and then carry home the net proceeds of their toil, the drain upon our money supply will be similar to that caused by landlordism in other countries. The political objection to oriental labor are scarcely less weighty than the economic ones. Race prejudice cannot be disregarded, and we have seen how, in every industrial depression, race animosities result in riot and bloodshed. We cannot afford to bring into this country those who cannot amalgamate with our people.

"The attempt to use the injunction of a court to deprive the laboring man of trial by jury should alarm all our people, for while the wage earner is the first to feel its effects, the people who allow the government by injunction is so far-reaching that no one can hope to escape ultimately. The thing forbidden by an injunction is right without the injunction to be either legal or illegal. If it would be legal, the judge usurps the function of the legislature when he forbids it. If it would be illegal the injunction of the court is unnecessary, for anyone who violates the law can, upon conviction, be made to suffer the penalties prescribed for such violation. The meanest thief and the most brutal murderer are entitled to trial by jury; why should this right be denied the laboring man? Those who oppose government by injunction are not in favor of lawlessness; they are, on the contrary, the best friends of law and order. They deny the right of any man to violate the law in an effort to secure his own interests, but they insist that it is inconsistent with our ideas of government and dangerous to all classes to invest any judge with the three-fold power, first, to make the laws; second, to bring accusation against those charged with the violation of the laws, and, third, to sit in judgment upon the case. Government by injunction is so indefensible that the anti-injunction bill, indorsed by the Chicago platform, passed the senate almost as yea and nay vote being demanded, and since that time no party platform has specifically indorsed government by injunction and no prominent member of any party has ventured upon a defense of the system; and yet corporate influence is so strong that it has thus far been impossible to secure any remedial legislation.

"The fact that United States senators are elected by legislatures, rather than by the people directly, lessens the laboring man's influence in securing [illegible] legislation. When the action of a political convention must be submitted to the voters for ratification at the polls, the convention is constrained to nominate a candidate acceptable to the people; but when a senator is chosen by a legislature the individual voter is far less considered. Even if the direct bribery is not employed, the indirect influence which corporations can exert is resorted to, and more frequently still money is secretly used to aid legislative candidates in close districts. Such obligations are usually repaid in the caucus, and, as a rule, the majority in the caucus controls the party which has the election of the senator. If this question were submitted to the voters the majority in favor of the election of senators by direct vote of the people would be overwhelming, and yet partisanship has delayed the adoption of this amendment. The people submit to policies which they do not like rather than secure improvement by a change in party affiliations.

"The laboring man favors direct legislation wherever practicable for the same reason that he favors the election of senators by popular vote. Direct legislation brings the government nearer to the voter. There is more virtue to the citizen than ever finds expression through their representatives. To hold that a representative can act for the people better than they can act for themselves, is to assert that he is as much interested in the people as they are themselves, and that his wisdom is greater than the combined wisdom of the majority of the people. Neither proposition is sound. Most, if not all, of the evils complained of in government are traceable to the fact that the representative of the people has personal interests at variance with the interests of his constituency. Corruption in municipal, state and federal government is due to the misrepresentation of the people by public servants who use their positions for private advantage. The people should have an opportunity to vote on public questions when important questions can be submitted without too great inconvenience or expense.

"But the laboring man is even more interested in the proposition to establish a labor bureau with a cabinet officer at its head. Such a bureau would keep the executive in constant touch with the wage earners of the country, and could point the way to the redress of their present and future grievances. If labor is given a place in the president's official household, the man selected will necessarily be a worthy and trusted representative of the people for whom he speaks, and his presence at cabinet meetings will give to those who toil for their daily bread assurance that their interests will be properly guarded.

"Mr. Gompers, the chief executive of the Federation of Labor, has, in his correspondence with the secretary of the treasury, so ably presented the laboring man's reasons for opposing a gold standard and a national bank currency, that it is not necessary to discuss those questions at this time.

"The laboring man has abundant reason to fear the trusts. Mr. Charles R. Flint, in a speech delivered in Boston more than a year ago in defense of the trusts, frankly asserts that one of the advantages of those combinations is that 'in case of local strikes or fires the work goes on elsewhere, thus preventing serious loss.' Is it possible that any wage earner can fail to see how completely the trust places the employe at the mercy of the employer?

"The resolutions adopted by various labor organizations in condemnation of militarism and imperialism justify me in making a brief reference to those questions. No class contributes more than the laboring masses in proportion to its numbers to the rank and file of the army; no class contributes more in proportion to its numbers to the expense of the army, and no class is more menaced by the existence of a large army. Most of the countries in Europe which maintain large military establishments collect an income tax which adjusts the burden of the government to the income of the citizen. Here our federal taxes are largely collected upon consumption, and while they are income taxes in the sense that they must be paid out of the incomes of the people, yet the exactions are not proportionate to the incomes. The taxes upon consumption bear heaviest upon the poor and lightest upon the rich and are in fact graded income taxes, the per cent. collected decreasing as the income increases.

"If this nation adheres to the doctrine that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed, and the people have an easy and ready means of correcting all abuses, the government will not need to be supported by a large permanent standing army, for every citizen will be ready to defend such a government from attack. The only domestic use for a large standing army is to suppress by force that discontent which should be cured by legislation.

"To support a permanent army of 100,000 men requires approximately one-half as much money as is annually expended for education in the United States. How much cheaper it is to uplift people by the gentle and powerful process of intellectual development than to blow them up with powder and dynamite!

"Imperialism involves a departure from principles which were universally accepted in this country until within two years. To know that all men are created equal one needs not the wisdom of a sage or the learning of the schools. It was declared to be a self-evident truth; it was evident to those who pledged their lives to the maintenance of the declaration of independence, and it is evident still to the governed. On the preservation of this doctrine our hopes depend; if it is abandoned there is no foundation upon which a government like ours can be constructed.

"Do not allow yourselves to be deceived by those who question the capacity of this people or that people for self-government. Macaulay, in his essay on John Milton, points out the folly of attempting to prepare people for self-government by denying them the right to participate in their own self-government. He said:

"'Many politicians of our time are in the habit of laying it down as a self-evident proposition that no people ought to be free until they are fit to be free. This maxim is worthy of the fool in the old story who resolved not to go into the water till he had learned to swim. If men are to wait for liberty till they become wise and good in slavery, they may indeed wait forever.'

"When I say that those who distrust the capacity of the people for self-government tend directly toward monarchy, I am only repeating what Lincoln deliberately declared in his first annual message. He said:

"'Monarchy itself is sometimes hinted at as a possible refuge from the power of the people. In my present position I could scarcely be justified without raising a warning voice against this approach of returning despotism. It is not needed nor fitting here that a general argument should be made in favor of popular institutions, but there is one point, with its connections not so hackneyed as most others, to which I ask brief attention. It is the effort to place capital on an equal footing with, if not above, labor, in the structure of government. * * * No men living are more worthy to be trusted than those who toil up from poverty, none less inclined to take or touch aught which they have not honestly earned. Let them beware of surrendering a political power which they already possess and which, if surrendered, will surely be used to close the door of advancement against such as they, and to fix new disabilities and burdens upon them till all of liberty shall be lost.'

"The warning is even more needed now than it was 40 years ago. The Army and Navy [illegible] is already justifying the colonial idea, and declaring that fate has decreed for us a destiny in which an imperial executive, free from the restraints of a written constitution, shall exercise all rights according to his own pleasure. The United States Investor, published at Boston, in its issue of July 28, says that

"'Only a blind person can fail to see that remarkable transformation of one kind or another are in store for the race; hence the folly of asserting that the policy of this country, which is destined to play such a leading part in human affairs for the future, shall be governed for the most part by political maxims uttered more than 100 years ago. The greatest evil which now confronts this country is the clamor raised by a certain faction for a settlement of our problems of state by just such a method as we have been considering. Unfortunately more than a century ago a certain notable declaration was made in this country to the effect that all men ought to be free and independent. This was the generalization of the French school of Voltaire and the encyclopaedists. It is a dictum absolutely lacking foundation in history and in modern scientific investigation. It was, however, a handy phrase for us to employ when asserting our right to break away from the mother country; it suited the crude notions of the world in 1776 admirably, though in itself but a bit of sublimated demagogism. The declaration was a serviceable means to the end that we at that time desired. To bring forward this declaration in this year, 1900, in connection with our treatment of the Filipinos and the Cubans is as gross an absurdity as ever was perpetrated. To do so is to offer an insult to the intelligence of the people who first subscribed to the declaration in question.'

"But why quote from newspapers as to what may be done hereafter in the presence of a law already enacted which makes subjects out of Porto Ricans, withdraws from them the guarantees of the constitution and asserts the power of the president and congress to govern them without their consent—and to them will this representation of power as unlimited and tyrannical as was ever asserted or exercised by any ruler in all the history of the human race—a power which, if once given and been approved by the people, it furnishes the supreme question of the present campaign. In the presence of these perils the laboring man has responsibility commensurate with his opportunity. Without a large percentage of the laboring vote no party can win an election in the United States. Upon the laboring men rests the duty of their silent ballots can shape the destiny of this nation, and either bring the government back to its ancient landmarks or turn it into the pathway followed by the empires of the old world."

Lucky Strikes.

Miners returning from Alaska diggings tell all kinds of tales about luck, but pretty well agree that the man who succeeds is the one who does not realize the risk he is running, and takes every desperate chance. The men who are scientific and calculating do not find the best claims. A stout constitution, enough money to buy food for six months and a disposition to look for gold anywhere seem to be the elements needed for success. But not all good luck stories have pleasant endings. One man dropped dead when at the end of the first clean-up he found himself a rich man. He had a weak heart, and success killed him. One of the greatest pieces of luck at Nome City is that of a boy of 19, who came there as a stowaway, was kicked on shore, and in two months was worth $100,000. Strangest of all, he had the sense to send his fortune home and follow it himself.—Golden Days.

THE THREE CROSSES.

Dr. Talmage Discourses on Redemption of the Race.

Topic Suggested by Famous Paintings of Munich—Types of Humanity Represented by the Two Malefactors.

The famous paintings in the picture galleries of Munich seem to have suggested the topic of this discourse, which Dr. Talmage sends from the quaint Bavarian town, but the theme which inspired the painters awakens in the great preacher thoughts of the redemption of the human race, which was the supreme design of that scene of suffering and death. The text is Luke xxiii., 33: "There they crucified Him and the malefactors, one on the right hand and the other on the left."

Just outside of Jerusalem is a swell of ground, toward which a crowd are ascending, for it is the day of execution. What a mighty assemblage! Some for curiosity to hear what the malefactors will say and how they will act. The three persons to be executed are already there. Some of the spectators are vile of lip and bloated of cheek. Some look up with revenge, hardly able to keep their hands off the sufferers. Some tear their own hair in a frenzy of grief. Some stand in silent horror. Some break out into uncontrollable weeping. Some clap their hands in delight that the offenders are to be punished at last. The soldiers, with drawn swords, drive back the mob which presses on so hard. There is fear that the proceedings may be interrupted. Let the legion, now stationed at Jerusalem, on horseback dash along the line and force back the surging multitude. "Back with you!" is the cry. "Have you never before seen a man die?"

Three crosses in a row—an upright piece and two transverse pieces, one on the top, on which the hands are nailed, and one at the middle, on which the victim sat. Three trees just planted, yet bearing fruit—the one at the right bearing poison and the one at the left bitter aloes, the one in the middle apples of love. Norway pine and tropical orange and Lebanon cedar could not make so strange a grove as this orchard at Calvary. Stand and give a look at the three crosses.

Just look at the cross on the right. Its victim dies scoffing. More awful than his physical anguish is his scorn and hatred of Him on the middle cross. This wretched man turns half around on the spikes to hiss at the One in the middle. If the scoffer could get one hand loose and he were within reach, he would smite the middle sufferer in the face. He hates Him with a perfect hatred. I think he wishes he were down on the ground that he might spear Him. He envies the mechanics who with their nails have nailed him fast. Amid the settling darkness and louder than the crash of the rocks hear him jeer out these words: "Ah, you poor wretch! I knew you were an imposter! You pretended to be a God, and yet you let these legions master you!" It was in some such hate that Voltaire in his death hour, because he thought he saw Christ in his bedroom, got up on his elbow and cried out: "Crush that wretch!" What had the middle cross done to arouse up this right hand cross? Nothing. Oh, the enmity of the natural heart against Christ! The world likes a sentimental Christ or a philanthropic Christ, but a Christ who comes to snatch men away from their sins — away with Him! On His right hand cross today I see typified the unbelief of the world. Men say: "Back with Him from the heart! I will not let Him take my sins. If He will die, let Him die for Himself, not for me." There has always been a war between this right hand cross and the middle cross, and wherever there is an unbelieving heart there the fight goes on. Oh, if when that dying malefactor perished the faithlessness of man had perished, then that tree which yields poison would have budded and blossomed with life for all the world!

That right hand cross—thousands have perished on it in worse agonies. For what is physical pain compared to remorse at the last that life has been wasted and only a fleeting moment stands between the soul and its everlasting overthrow? O God, let me die anywhere rather than at the foot of that right hand cross! Let not one drop of that blood fall upon my cheek. Rend not my ear with that cry. I see it now as never before—the loathsomeness and horror of my unbelief. That dying malefactor was not so much to blame as I. Christianity was not established, and perhaps not until that day had that man heard the Christ. But after Christ has stood almost 19 centuries, working the wonders of His grace, you reject Him.

That right hand cross, with its long beam, overshadows all the earth. It is planted in the heart of the race. When will the time come when the spirit of God shall, with its ax, hew down that right hand cross until it shall fall at the feet of the middle cross, and unbelief, the railing malefactor of the world, shall perish from all our hearts? Away from me, thou spirit of unbelief! I hate thee! With this sword of God I thrust thee back and thrust thee through. Down to hell; down, most accursed monster of the earth, and talk to those thou hast already damned! Talk no longer to these sons of God, these heirs of Heaven.

"If Thou be the Son of God." Was there any "if" about it? Tell me, thou star, that in robe of light did run to point out His birthplace. Tell me, thou sea, that didst put thy hand over thy lip when He bade thee be still. Tell me, ye dead who got up to see him die. Tell me, thou sun in midheaven, who for Him didst pull down over thy face the veil of darkness. Tell me, ye lepers who were cleansed, ye dead who were raised, is He the Son of God? Aye, aye, responds the universe. The flowers breathe it; the stars chime it; the redeemed celebrate it; the angels rise on their thrones to announce it. And yet on that miserable malefactor's "if" how many shall be wrecked for all eternity! That little "if" has enough venom in its sting to cause the end of the soul. No "if" about it. I know it. Ecce Deus! I feel it thoroughly—through every muscle of the body, and through every faculty of my mind, and through every [illegible] of my soul. Living, I will preach it; dying, I will pillow my head upon its consolations. I was the God-

Away, then, from this right hand cross. The red berries of the forest are apt to be poisonous, and around this tree of carnage grow the red, poisonous berries of which many have tasted and died. I can see no use for this right hand cross, except it be used as a lever with which to upturn the unbelief of the world.

Here from the right-hand cross I go to the left-hand cross. Pass clear to the other side. That victim also twists himself upon the nails to look at the center cross, yet not to scoff. It is to worship. He, too, would like to get his hand loose, not to smite, but to deliver the sufferer of the middle cross. He cries to the railer cursing on the other side: "Silence! Between us is innocence in agony. We suffer for our crimes. Silence!" Gather round this left-hand cross, O ye people! Be not afraid. Bitter herbs are sometimes a tonic for the body, and the bitter aloes that grow on this tree shall give strength and life to thy soul. The left-hand cross is a repenting cross. As men who have been nearly drowned tell us that in one moment, while they were under the water, their whole life passed before them, so I suppose in one moment the dying malefactor thought over all his past life—of that night when he went into an unguarded door and took all the silver, the gold, the jewels, and as the sleeper stirred he put a knife through his heart; of that day when, in the lonely pass, he met the wayfarer, and, regardless of the cries and prayers and tears and struggles of his victim, he flung the mangled corpse into the dust of the highway or heaped upon it the stones.

He says: "I am a guilty wretch. I deserve this. There is no need of my cursing. That will not stop the pain. There is no need of blaspheming Christ, for He has done me no wrong. And yet I cannot die so. The tortures of my body are undone by the tortures of my soul. The past is a scene of misdoing, the present a crucifixion, the future an everlasting undoing. Come back, thou hiding midday sun! Kiss my cheek with one bright ray of comfort. What, no help from above—no help from beneath? Then I must turn to my companion in sorrow, the One on the middle cross. I have heard that He knows how to help a man when he is in trouble. I have heard that He can cure the wounded. I have heard that He can pardon the sinner. Surely in all His wanderings up and down the earth He never saw one more in need of His forgiveness. Wilt thou turn for the moment away from Thy own pangs to pity me? Lord, it is not to have my hands relieved or my feet taken from the tortnre—I can stand all this—but, oh, my sins, my sins, my sins! They pierce me through and through. They tell me I must die forever. They will push me out into the darkness unless Thou wilt help me. I confess it all. Hear the cry of the dying thief: 'Lord, remember me when Thou comest into Thy kingdom.' I ask no great things. I seek for no throne in Heaven, no chariot to take me to the skies, but just think of me when this day's horrors have passed. Think of me a little—of me, the one now hanging at Thy side—when the shout of Heavenly welcome takes Thee back into Thy glory. Thou wilt not forget me, wilt thou? 'Lord, remember me when Thou comest into Thy kingdom.' Only just remember me."

This left hand cross was a believing cross. There was no guesswork in that prayer, no "if" in that supplication. The left hand cross flung itself at the foot of the middle cross, expecting mercy. Faith is only just opening the hand to take what Christ offers us. The work is all done; the bridge is built strong enough for us all to walk over. Tap not at the door of God's mercy with the tip of your fingers, but as a warrior with gauntleted fists at the castle gate. So with all the aroused energies of our souls let us pound at the gate of Heaven. That gate is locked. You go to it with a bunch of keys. You try philosophy. That will not open it. A large door generally has a ponderous key. I take the cross and place the foot of it in the lock, and by the two arms of the cross I turn the lock, and the door opens.

This left hand cross was a pardoned cross. The crosses were only two or three yards apart. It did not take long for Christ to hear. Christ might have turned away and said: "How darest thou speak to me? I am the Lord of Heaven and earth. I have seen your violence. When you struck down the man in the darkness, I saw you. You are getting a just reward. Die in darkness—die forever." But Jesus said not so, but rather, "This day thou shalt be with me in Paradise," as much as to say: "I see you there. Do not worry. I will not only bear my cross, but help you with yours."

I have shown you the right hand cross and the left hand cross; now come to the middle cross. We stood at the one and found it yielded poison; we stood at the other and found it yielded bitter aloes. Come now to the middle cross and shake down apples of love. Uncover your head. You never saw so tender a scene as this. You may have seen father or mother or companion or child die, but never so affecting a scene as this. The railing thief looked from one way and saw the left side of Christ's face. But to-day, in the full blaze of Gospel light, you see Christ's full face. It was a suffering cross. If the weapons of torture had gone only through the fatty portions of the body, the torture would not have been so great, but they went through the hands and feet and temples, the most sensitive portions. It was not only the spear that went into His side, but the sins of all the race—a thousand spears—plunge after plunge, deeper and deeper, until the silence and composure that he [illegible] accordeu him gave way to a groan, through which rumbled the sorrows of time and the woes of eternity. Human hate had done its worst, and hell had buried its sharpest javelin, and devils had vented their hottest rage when, with every nerve of His body in torture and every fiber of His heart in excruciation, He cried out: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" It was a vicarious cross. The right hand cross suffered for itself, but the middle cross for you. When a king was dying, a young man cried: "Pour my blood into his veins, that he die not." The veins of the young man were tapped and the blood transferred, so that the king lived, but the young man died. Christ saw the race perishing. He cried: "Pour my blood into their veins, that they die not." My hand is free now because Christ's was crushed; my brow is painless now because Christ's was torn; my soul escapes because Christ's was bound; I gain Heaven because Christ for me endured the horrors of hell.

To this middle cross look, that your souls may live. I showed you the right hand cross in order that you might see what an awful thing it is to be unbelieving. I showed you the left hand cross that you might see what it is to repent. Now I show you the middle cross that you may see what Christ has done to save your soul.

Oh, that I may engrave on your souls ineffaceably the three crosses, so that if in your waking moments you will not heed, then in your dreams at night you may see on the hill back of Jerusalem the three spectacles—the right hand cross showing unbelief, dying without Christ; the left hand showing what it is to be pardoned, while the central cross pours over your soul the sunburst of Heaven, as it says: "By all these wounds I plead for thy heart. I have loved thee with an everlasting love. Rivers cannot quench it. Floods cannot drown it." And while you look the right hand cross will fade out of sight, and then the left will be gone, and nothing will remain but the middle cross, and even that in your dream will begin to change until it becomes a throne, and the worn face of Calvary will become radiant with gladness, and instead of the mad mob at the foot of the cross will be a worshipful multitude, kneeling. And you and I will be among them.

But, no; we will not wait for such a dream. In this our most aroused mood we throw down at the foot of the middle cross sin, sorrow, life, death—everything. We are slaves; Christ gives deliverance to the captive. We are thirsty; Christ is the river of salvation to slake our thirst. We are hungry; Jesus says: "I am the bread of life." We are condemned to die; Christ says: "Save that man from going down to the pit; I am the ransom." We are tossed on the sea of trouble; Jesus comes over it, saying: "It is I; be not afraid." We are in darkness; Jesus says: "I am the bright and morning star." We are sick; Jesus is the "balm of Gilead." We are dead; hear the shrouds rend and the grave hillocks heave as He cries: "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." We want justification; "Being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." We want to exercise faith: "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." I want to get from under condemnation: "There is now, therefore, no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus." The cross; he carried it. The flames of hell; He suffered them. The shame; He endured it. The crown; He won it. Heights of Heaven sing it, and worlds of light to worlds of light all round the heavens cry: "Glory! Glory!" Let us go forth and gather the trophies for Jesus. From Golconda mines we gather the diamonds, from Ceylon shores we gather the pearls, from all lands and kingdoms we gather precious stones, and we bring the glittering burdens and put them down at the feet of Jesus and say: "All these are thine. Thou art worthy." We go forth again for more trophies, and into one sheaf we gather all the scepters of the Caesars, and the Alexanders, and the czars, and the sultans, and of all royalties and dominions, and then we bring the sheaf of scepters and put it down at the feet of Jesus and say: "Thou art King of kings. All these thou hast conquered." And then we go forth again to gather more trophies, and we bid the redeemed of ages, the sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty, to come. And the hosts of Heaven bring crown and palm and scepter and here by these bleeding feet and this riven side and by this wounded heart cry: "Blessing and honor and glory and power unto the Lamb forever and ever."

A UNIQUE SHOE INDUSTRY.

The "ghetto," the home of a mixed mass of humanity, presents a remarkable and unique phase of New York shoe selling, says the New York Tribune. Petty shoemakers visit the numerous city shoe factories daily and buy up scraps and "seconds" of all kinds of leather, which they take to their homes, and, after being inspected and assorted by the entire family, it is finally made into pieced backs and wedge heels in black, tan patent leather and numerous odd combinations, every inch of leather being utilized. A steady worker turns out at least 24 pairs of these shoes, working from seven a. m. until late into the night. In the meantime the thrifty wife puts the finished product into a clothes basket and, taking a stool, stations herself at the prominent corner of Hester and Essex streets, right in the heart of the "ghetto." Here activity reigns, thousands upon thousands of wage earners swarm through the streets; the venders loudly cry their wares to attract the attention of bargain seekers.

After a day of bantering and talking the woman has disposed of her shoes and goes home with an empty basket and a pocketful of small change. After many weeks of this routine the economical shoemaker has saved enough to realize an ambition and he buys a push cart—a two-wheeled affair much like the familiar fruitman's cart—and with shoes bought at fire sales he pushes boldly into some crowded thoroughfare and lines up against the curb. A tempting price loudly proclaimed serves to dispose of the stock as often as he can replenish the same. Under these circumstances the meager capital has increased sufficiently to enable him to open a small shoe store in Hester street and to employ an assistant. He searches wholesale shoe houses for odds and ends, damaged and mismated shoes, and picks up numerous lots for a fraction of their value.

He has now assumed the dignity of a merchant and has gained the confidence of his countrymen. Encouraged by his success and confident of his ability, he buys in larger lots and begins to supply other push-cart dealers. The demand eventually assumes greater proportions; he attends auction sales, which are very frequent in New York, and realizes profit from every venture. In the course of a few years his environments become too small, he disposes of his push cart and rents a basement in Bayard street, among the East side shoe jobbers.

An Imperial Appeal.

This may not be a verbatim copy of the letter that the unfortunate young Chinese emperor sent to the representatives of the powers, asking their protection against the empress dowager, but it is undoubtedly a good deal like it—if it is like it at all:

Victoria's Stock of Tobacco.

Although Queen Victoria does not permit smoking in her immediate neighborhood, yet she keeps on hand a stock of the most superb Havana cigars for her guests, and the consumption thereof is about 3,000 a year.—Chicago Chronicle.

PEOPLE OF NOTE.

Giacoma Puccini, the composer, is the fifth representative in the direct line of a family of musicians. His great-great-grandfather, born in 1712, was conductor at Lucca and the teacher of Guglielmi. Descendants of his in each generation have been composers.

That Queen Victoria is a faithful patron of Irish lace and linen is well known. Her liking for the linen is so enthusiastic that no cotton is permitted to be used in any of the royal residences. Even the simplest kitchen cloth must be made of Irish flax.

Among the many attractions at North Beach, near New York, there is a wild man who, according to the owner of the show, was "captured at great expense in the wilds of Borneo." The wild man's name on the bills is "An-nahk-r-am," and it is declared that he eats cats, dogs, birds and mice. The name spelled backward bears a close resemblance to that of a noted Ohio man.

[illegible] American politics which appeared in a recent number of the London Chronicle it was pointed out that out of the 25 presidents of the United States all but one have been of British family origin. Fifteen, headed by Washington, came of English stock. Three, including James Monroe, had Scotch ancestors. One, Thomas Jefferson, inherited pure Welsh blood, while five others traced their lineage to Scotch-Irish ancestry.

George Gould attended a meeting of the Union Pacific railroad directors a few days ago and lighted a cigarette. "Drop that cigarette," said Chairman Harriman. "I have issued an order forbidding employes to smoke cigarettes. You are an employe; you get $10 for attending one of these meetings. You too, Mr. Schiff," addressing another millionaire director who was toying with a lighted perfecto. "We directors must not make rules for employes and then break them ourselves." The distinguished employes quietly obeyed orders.

HINTS TO HOUSEKEEPERS.

Patties, green peas, olives and pickles are quite favorite combinations, making also a most acceptable course for luncheon or dinner.

Tomatoes may be salted and peppered, dipped into beaten egg and cracker crumbs and fried until they are brown. For these it is better not to use the onion. They are particularly delicious served with fish.

Into the work bag of the modish young woman goes now usually a pair of fine imported hose, upon which in moments of leisure she expends her skil embroidering French dots and [illegible], vine-like tracings. A recent bride was the recipient of a dozen pairs of silk stockings, embroidered in sets of three by her four bridesmaids.

A housekeeper who is afraid of germs uses on her bare floors a solution which is in use in some of the hospitals abroad. The floors are painted with a solution of paraffine and petroleum, which gives them a brown color and renders them impervious to anything in the nature of microbes. Then, wiped up occasionally with a cloth saturated with an antiseptic solution, they are as sanitary as anything can be. The paraffine solution will last two years.

To stuff green peppers, plunge the peppers into hot fat for two minutes, remove and peel off the thin outer coating, which will be found shrivelled. Cut from the bottom a thin slice and remove the inside. Make a mixture of one cupful of boiled rice, one finely chopped tomato, two tablespoonfuls of finely chopped mushrooms one tablespoonful of butter and one teaspoonful of onion juice for every six peppers. Fill this into the peppers, place them, open side down in a pan and bake about 20 minutes.

WE DO NOT ASK AGAIN.

One Occasion When the Piety of a Michigan Politician Was Not Conspicuous.

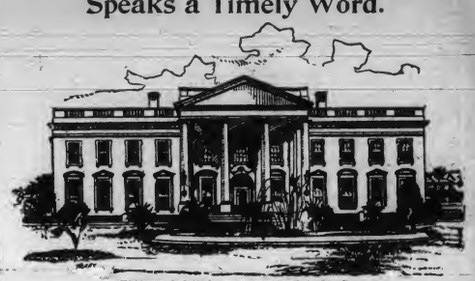
M. E. Chittenden, the Michigan politician who died recently, dearly loved a joke. His own initials, "M. E. C.," he always insisted, stood for Methodist Episcopal church, which organization, could it have secured him, would have acquired a very lively member.

"Mart," as Mr. Chittenden was familiarly called, relates the Chicago Chronicle, partially lost his hearing some years ago and communication with him thereafter was one of the fine arts. Being the agent of the Standard Oil company for a large territory, he traveled considerably, and on a certain occasion fell in with a couple of friends at Hillsdale, who invited him to go with them to dinner at the house of a resident acquaintance. One of them quietly said to the host: "Mr. Chittenden is an exceedingly pious man and likes to have the food blessed before partaking. You must invite him to ask the blessing."

Accordingly, when all were seated, silence fell upon the company, while the host turned to Mr. Chittenden with "Will you ask the blessing?"

Up went Chittenden's hand to his ear, with his usual quick, nervous gesture, as in a [illegible] attitude he remained in a few more decided than unctuous:

"I've grown so all-fired deaf lately that if you've got anything to say to me you'll have to say it devilish loud."



A roar from the two friends disclosed to Chittenden and the astonished host that they had been the victims of a practical joke. But "Chit" enjoyed it amazingly when he understood what had happened.

With Regrets.—"The true editorial spirit," said the old-timer, "is declining." "I guess you're right," agreed the struggling author. "It certainly doesn't appear to be accepting."—Philadelphia Press.

Often the only difference between the laborer and his employer is that the former is a mere bread-winner while the latter is a mere dough-winner.—Puck.

PRESIDENT TYLER'S DAUGHTER,

WHITE HOUSE, WASHINGTON, D. C.

"One of the most aristocratic faces seen in Washington is that of Mrs. Semple, daughter of President Tyler. She has passed her 80th year and yet retains an exceedingly youthful complexion. Personally she is charming, and impresses one as stepping out of the European courts," so says The National Magazine, under the heading "Social Sidelights at the Capital."

The following is a letter from this interesting lady, written from the Lenox Home, Washington, D. C., to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, concerning their great catarrh tonic, Peruna. Mrs. Semple writes: The Peruna Medicine Company, Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen—"Your Peruna is a most valuable remedy. Many of my friends have used it with the most flattering results and I can commend it to all who need a strengthening tonic. It is indeed a remarkable medicine."

Sincerely, Letitia Tyler Semple.

Peruna is a specific to counteract the depressing effects of hot weather. A free book entitled "Summer Catarrh," sent by The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

Every spring you clean the house you live in, to get rid of the dust and dirt which collected in the winter. Your body, the house your soul lives in, also becomes filled up during the winter with all manner of filth, which should have been removed from day to day, but was not. Your body needs cleaning inside. If your bowels, your liver, your kidneys are full of putrid filth, and you don't clean them out in the spring, you'll be in bad odor with yourself and everybody else all summer.

DON'T USE A HOSE to clean your body inside, but sweet, fragrant, mild but positive and forceful CASCARETS, that work while you sleep, prepare all the filth collected in your body for removal, and drive it off softly, gently, but none the less surely, leaving your blood pure and nourishing, your stomach and bowels clean and lively, and your liver and kidneys healthy and active. Try a 10-cent box today, and if not satisfied get your money back—but you'll see how the cleaning of your body is

From Owenton Herald.

The long advertised and much talked of Democratic primary election was held in this county last Saturday. As there were only 18 offices for 75 candidates, there were of necessity 57 disappointed office seekers, to say nothing of the hundreds of friends of the several candidates, each of whom was cocksure his man would get there. But such is politics; and it were well if nothing worse could be said. The unsuccessful ones, so far as we have been able to find out, have accepted their defeat with the best possible grace and in a truly philosophic manner.

Probably there never was just such an election in Owen county before. Beardless boys, as well as gray-haired men, were among the active "workers" at the polls, each having his pockets loaded down with silver to be used in bie business. Voters were raffled off to the highest bidder like sheep in the market, and with an effrontery unparalleled hitherto. The old-time one and two dollar prices were found early in the day to be wholly insufficient for the purpose, and the nice little fee of twenty-five dollars per caput was quite common by noon. Before the polls closed it is alleged that forty dollars was paid for an extra quality of voter in Owenton, while it is said that at Poplar Grove the price reached seventy-five dollars in one case.

During the two weeks preceding the election it is alleged that one hundred barrels of whisky were distributed over the county in the interest of the candidates. We should say, however, that there were a few notable and noble exceptions to the damaging charges of illegal use of money and whiskey in their races. The "floating" population of the county has been estimated at five hundred by those who pay particular attention to matters political, and this estimate, in the light of what was observed upon the surface last Saturday, is none too large.

This is the condition of things that confronts the good people of the county, and it ought to be met in some effective way at once. Without particularizing, it has been demonstrated that a candidate can be nominated without the demoralizing agencies resorted to in the cases to which reference has been made in a general way, so the flimsy excuse made in so many cases that they are necessary to success, falls to the ground. The whole matter, as we look at it, is in the hands of the people and is not so difficult of solution.

How would some such plan as this do? Let the voters of each precinct enter into a solemn contract not to support any candidate who will not obligate himself in a sufficient and reasonable bond not to use liquor or money beyond his necessary campaign expenses to secure votes. Should this action be taken and due notice of it given to the candidates, we are satisfied that our next primary will be free from even a suspicion of such things as disgraced the recent one. What say the people to it?

The Paducah News, which failed to support the ticket last year, comes out in the following wise appeal to Democrats to line up for the great battle this fall: "There is no use whatever in any Democrat sulking about Beckham's nomination. Many of us thought he was not as strong as some other man might be, but the way to cure that defect, is by turning in and giving him hearty support. Let the dead past bury its dead, and while admitting that all of us have made mistakes, come on and hold up the hands of our candidate in his effort to win. This is not the time for discussion, but action. Gov. Beckham was most clearly the choice of the Democrats of the State, and there is absolutely no reason whatever for any man to hold back in the approaching campaign. No fairer convention was ever held in Kentucky than was the Lexington convention. It was a model for all other conventions to follow in its absence of rancor, and its fairness of action. It has taken the other road, and turned its back on the Music Hall convention methods and given the people evidence of what can be done when a great party is upon good behavior. We wish especially to urge those who like ourselves did not support the ticket last year to fall into line now, and show that we appreciate the great change that has come to party methods since the Music Hall convention divided the party. Absolutely no reason exists for bolting the nomination of Mr. Beckham. He was most clearly the choice of the party. He is a clean young man of unblemished private character. His official acts while in office have been both wise and Democratic. He has thus far shown a willingness to listen to advice that argues well for his political future, and proves that the affairs of the State may be safely entrusted to him. It is most clearly the imperative duty of all Democrats to fall into line, dress ranks, and never stop charging till No-vember victory crowns the struggle."

Crop and Stock.

Many fields of corn will make fifteen barrels per acre, and some fields of tobacco from 1,500 to 2,000 lbs., per acre.—Georgetown Times.

Thomas O'Brien, of San Francisco, one of the most prominent Irish American Republicans on the Pacific coast, has declared for Bryan and Stevenson.

William P. Myert, of Chicago, one of the three surviving delegates of Illinois to the first Republican National Convention, says he will vote for Bryan this year.

Some grades and kinds of tobacco in Florida bring as high as $50 per hundred pounds. This is Sumatra tobacco and is pole-cured and shaded from the time it is cut until it becomes well cured.

W. V. Thompson, who travels for a large New York house and has recently been through Michigan and Indiana, is satisfied that those States will go for Bryan. Mr. Thompson is a Republican.

Dr. Henry Wade Rogers, former President of Northwestern University and recently called by the faculty of Yale, says he will vote for Bryan and Stevenson. In 1896 he voted for McKinley and Hobart.

Colonel Joseph Elboeck, editor of the Staats-Anzeiger, Chicago, who advocated Palmer and Buckner in 1896, both on the stump and in his paper, announces that this year he will give his support to Bryan and Stevenson.

On account of the position of their party upon trusts, a large number of Republican drummers of Chicago have formed an organization to support and work for Bryan and Stevenson, and their example is being followed all over the United States.

There are between 2,000 and 2,500 head of export cattle being fed in Boyle county for this fall's market. It is expected that the best of them will sell at from five to five and a half cents. Some small lots have already been engaged at five and a quarter.

There were about 500 cattle at Winchester on court day, common to fair, with prices ranging from 3 to 5c. Several hundred ewes sold at $4 to $4.25 and quite a number of next year's lambs were engaged at 5 to 5½c. There was some demand for mule colts.

Six thousand Quakers of Ohio, at their yearly conference, adopted a minute to the purport that all Friends should vote against the Republican party because it has put on its ticket a "man of blood" like Roosevelt, and because President McKinley is waging needless war for the benefit of trade on the helpless people in the Philippines.

Of the world's corn crop of 1899, viz: 2,611,000,000 bushels, the United States furnished 2,200,000,000 bushels; Austria-Hungary, 80,000,000 bushels, a serious falling off from the 153,000,000 bushels in '98; Argentine, 72,000,000 bushels, and Italy, 68,000,000 bushels. The crop was about 111,000,000 bushels more than the average crop of the last four years.

Very few people are awar that in the last twenty years the number of fish in the great lakes has been decreasing rapidly. It is a fact that as compared with ten years ago it requires practically double the number of men, boats and nets to catch the same number of fish. The government has for twenty years maintained a large number of stations along the lakes where fish have been propagated in enormous numbers, but in spite of all this the supply is steadily decreasing.

The Bravery of Woman.

Was gradually shown by Mrs. John Dowling, of Butler, Pa., in a three years' struggle with a maligant stomach trouble that caused distressing attacks of nausea indigestion. All remedies failed to relieve her until she tried Electric Bitters. After taking it two months she wrote: "I am now wholly cured and can eat anything. It is truly a grand tonic for the whole system as I gained in weight and feel much stronger since using it." It aids digestion, cures dyspepsia, improves appetite, gives new life. Only 50c. Guaranteed, at McKim's, Burlington, Oelsner's, Florence, Crouch's, Union.

All the liars are not out West. The Mobile News says an artist in that city painted a dog so natural that the animal had hydrophobia during the hot weather. He's the same, says The Press, who painted a copy of a beer bottle with such skill that the cork flew out just as he finishing it, and after he was married he painted a picture of his first baby so life-like that it cried and his wife spanked it before she discovered her mistake.

Endured Death's Agonies.

Only a roaring fire enabled J. M. Garretson, of San Antonio, Tex., to lie down when attacked by Asthma from which he suffered for years. He writes his misery was often so great that it seemed he endured the agonies of death; but Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption wholly cured him. This marvelous medicine is the only known cure for Asthma as well as Consumption, Coughs and Colds, and all Throat, Chest and Lung troubles. Price 50c and $1. Guaranteed. Trial bottles free at McKim's, Burlington; Oelsner's, Florence; Crouch's, Union.

Katie, the six year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Mylor, residing on the Oliver Carver farm near town, accidentally swallowed a pin about four inches in length Thursday afternoon, and it gave her considerable pain. The little girl was brought here and Dr. S. B. Robinson and Dr. G. F. Gaines endeavored to extract the pin from her throat where it had lodged but were unable to do so and Dr. Robinson took her to Cincinnati yesterday morning where she will be operated on.

The tobacco growers have been quite busy the past week cutting and housing one of the finest crops of tobacco raised in this section for many a day. There is considerable danger of the crop houseburning, but additional precautions are being taken to prevent any damage. The acreage and quality of crop is far above the average year.

The Sparta Deposit Bank, the new banking institution established at Sparta, will open its doors for business Monday, Sept. 17th, and the prospects are very encouraging for a nice business.

Quite a number of our citizens have been suffering with hay fever. This is the first time it has been so prevalent here. The extreme continued warm weather is the cause.

All our physicians have been quite busy during the warm spell with an unusual amount of sickness.

A number of farmers hereabouts were in town this week looking for hands to cut tobacco. At the present time there is more work than there are hands to do it.

"I suffered for thirty years with diarrhoea and thought I was past being cured," says John S. Halloway, of French Camp, Miss. "I had spent so much time and money and suffered so much that I had given up all hopes of recovery. I was so feeble from the effects of the diarrhoea that I could do no kind of labor could not even travel, but by accident I was permitted to find a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and after taking several bottles I am entirely cured of that trouble. I am so pleased with the result that I am anxious that it be in reach of all who suffer as I have." For sale by McKim, Burlington, C. S. Balsly, Bullittsville, O. N. Dogs are killing large numbers of sheep in Robertson county, and the Mt. Olivet Advance is advocating a law in our State similar to that of Ohio, which places a tax on dogs and the sum raised in this manner is used to pay for sheep killed by dogs. It is a good law, and our sheep raisers should make a fight for it. The destruction of sheep by dogs in this county is getting to be very great and something must be done to stop it.

Mr. Arthur Goebel has put in a claim of $10,000 in the settlement of William Goebel's estate for Dr. J. N. McCormack, who was one of the physicians in attendance on the Governor. Dr. McCormack had declined to make any claim for his services. This extraordinary fee is said to have been awarded Dr. McCormack as a testimonial to his services in prolonging Senator Goebel's life long enough for the Legislature to take up his contest in the Gubernatorial matter, and declare him to be the Governor of Kentucky, thus satisfying his ambition.

Lightningon the Fourth of July destroyed a barn in Frederick township near Pottsville, Pa., that was built in 1704 and had been famous in local history since the Revolution. The farm on which it was then located was owned by Col. Frederick Antes and Gen. Washington, with his body guard, had his headquarters there during the encampment at Pettegrove.

BOONE . COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1900. NO. 48

THIS will be an active week with the political hustlers in this Congressional district.

SOME of the local political orators have been assigned to duty, and will take the stump the last of this month.

THE number of lives lost at Galveston is estimated by some as high as 8,000. The exact number will never be known.

IF you want to see a redhot campaign get two Covington politicians out for the nomination for the same office. This holds good of either party.

OLLIE JAMES who speaks here next court day has the reputation of being an excellent stumper, and his services are always in demand during a campaign,

WHENEVER Bryan speaks the entire population of the country for miles around turns out to hear him. He is receiving greater ovations than he did in 1896.

THE RECORDER could tell its readers this week who will be nominated for Congress, next Saturday, but it wont, as all interest in the primary would thereby be destroyed.

THE voter who cannot demonstrate beyond question that his favorites will receive the nomination in next Saturday's primary, is very badly posted in regard to the lay of the political land in the district.

MANY believe that ex-Secretary Olney's recent letter is a reflection of President Cleveland's views on the political issues of the day. It may be, but Cleveland has always heretofore been able to make known his views on any subject of political interest.

THE two houses of the General Assembly will each present a new election law this week, and then the fun will begin in earnest. Of course each house will consider its measure "the thing," and it may be some time before either will yield a point, or make any concessions.

WHENEVER Cincinnati or Louisville has an exhibition of any kind they flood the rural press with free advertising matter, but their merchants, especially those of Cincinnati, never patronize the country papers to any extent, therefore the free advertising desired by the city ought to be inserted in the waste basket.

EVERY few days there is a startling political flop in some quarter, each party sustaining about the same number of surprises. But there seems to be a strong break to Bryan from the Democratic gold bug column of 1896, and the outlook for Democratic success this fall is far better than it was in '96. A blind man can see this.

To rebuild a city as unfavorably located as Galveston has proven, is folly in the superative degree. A city on an island in the gulf, and the highest land above sea level, upon which any part of it stands, being only ten feet, renders it anything but a desirable place for the investment of capital, and it is reasonable to suppose that very little will find its way there in the future.

A German syndicate has just made arrangements whereby it secures all the timber on a large strip of land in the mountains in eastern Kentucky. It is estimated that the strip contains about 800,000 of the finest specimens of oak trees. Foreign syndicates are investing heavily in eastern Kentucky, and especially in timber and mining interests. They own large tracts of the finest land, which will quadruple in value when railroads reach that section of the State.

WITH next Saturday's primary election will close one of the hottest campaigns within their party the Democrats of the Sixth District have ever experienced in selecting a candidate for Congress. But, notwithstanding the harsh things that have been said about the three candidates during the campaign, let every one who casts a ballot next Saturday, then and there register a vow to do his part towards giving the nominee a big majority at the regular election.

GOOCH WILL WIN.

At a meeting of the Jefferson Club on Friday evening the following resolutions were unanimously adopted in the absence of Mr. Gooch:

"Whereas, Our worthy President D. Linn Gooch, is now a candidate for Congress in the Sixth District of Kentucky; therefore, we as member of the Jefferson Club desire to say to the Democracy that he is entirely worthy of their support by reason of his long and faithful services both with voice and purse, always doing his utmost to advance the cause of the great common people. We wish to make known to the Democracy that Colonel Gooch was the bosom friend of William Goebel and was his selection to succeed Berry. We desire to state in the most positive manner that this man, Joe Rhinock, who is known to us, never had any standing with William Goebel as a Congressional candidate, and the proof of it is that when Rhinock tried to succeed Goebel in the Senate he was defeated in his plans by the noble brother of our martyred leader, Justice Goebel. This should answer Rhinock's pretensions.

"We, therefore, call upon all Democrats who love the memory of William Goebel to rise against this man Rhinock, who is a tool for the Standard Oil Company, and who is now engaged in trying to break up the Goebel organization in this district and in the State of Kentucky. We ask the Democracy to look at the men behind him in this contest, and that will tell the tale; and, therefore, be it.

"Resolved, By the Jefferson Club that we give our hearty and earnest support to Hon. D. Linn Gooch for Congress, as a mark of our confidence in him, and to show the love we bear for the memory of William Goebel.

"John Percival.
"James F. O'Down.
"John P. Maurer.
"Lewis L. Manson.
"M. D. McInnearney.

[Record, Covington.]

The fight, as it now appears, is entirely between Col. Berry and Mr. Gooch. Mr. Rhinock will be lucky if he comes out third in the race.

Mr. Rhinock harps a heap on unions. The only "union" we ever heard of him belonging to is the Standard Oil union.

Mr. Gooch is going through this campaign with clean hands, a clean mouth and a clean character. Mr. Rhinock, with all his dirty mud slinging, can not smirch him.

[Extra, Covington.]

The candidacy of Hon. Joseph L. Rhinock is simply a huge passing joke, and is so regarded by all who are up in politics. There is nothing to his candidacy but a ludicrous attempt to enact the "Comedy of Errors," with an indifferent stock company, composed of hungry henchmen, with Joe in the leading role as chief actor. Up to this writing it is painfully apparent that the artists in charge of the play are proving themselves dismal failures.

The Hon. Joseph L. Rhinock writes fulsome laudations of himself, and takes good care to have them printed in every Sunday's issue of the Enquirer. To the casual reader they have all the appearance of being the utterances of that great journal—but they are not. The Honorable Joe planks down his good coin every time he has them inserted, coupled with the understanding that they are to appear in the paper minus the marks of a paid "ad."

Eli Cotton, of Sanders, says: "I have been all over our county, and am satisfied that D. Linn Gooch will get the largest vote of any candidate. As far as Sanders is concerned, I don't believe Rhinock will get a vote."

Hon. S. K. Lee, of Corinth, Grant county, regarding the Congressional race, says:

"I am a tobacco buyer, and have canvassed the district pretty thoroughly. Gooch has always had a good following, but since Westover has pulled off, he will get almost the entire Westover vote. Mr. Gooch will get more votes than both the other candidates."

Mr. Miller, Sheriff of Campbell county, says:

"If there ever was any doubt in regard to Mr. Gooch getting the nomination, Westover's withdrawal has removed that doubt, as he will receive 95 per cent. of the Westover vote in my county. I do not believe that Joe Rhinock will get 300 votes in Campbell county. Talking yesterday with two prominent politicians who are Westover's lieutenants, one of them remarked that Joe Rhinock might buy John Westover but he could not buy an honest farmer, who had intended to vote for Westover, believing he was making the race in good faith. There is no doubt in regard to Mr. Gooch carrying Campbell county over both the other candidates. In the country districts of my county he will get 80 per cent. of the vote, Berry will get 20 per cent and Rhinock will get none at all."

Westover Withdraws.

"TO THE DEMOCRATS OF THE SIXTH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT:—The cry of 'anybody to beat Berry,' and the lavish use of money in the race for Democratic Congressional nomination, having so disintegrated my support that it has rendered my nomination on next Saturday an impossibility, many of my friends at home and my managers in the other country counties have insisted that I quit the fight. I cannot afford to carry my friends into a hopeless contest. I have promised many of the boys over the district that if the time came in the race when it became apparent to me that I could not win the fight I would frankly tell them so. Following the advice of my friends I reluctantly quit the contest. To my friends over the district, and especially to the young men, who have labored faithfully and unselfishly in my interest, I am profoundly grateful, and shall never cease to remember their devotion to my cause. The race seems to have narrowed down to two men. My only wish is that that best man and the best Democrat may win the nomination; that the party may be united and all Democrats give their loyal support to the Democratic ticket and congressional nominee. Party success means more than individual success, and in the interest of party harmony I now withdraw from the race.

J. H. WESTOVER.

As to what will become of the Westover vote in the primary next Saturday is a matter that has got the wisest politicians in the district guessing. It is evident that each candidate will get a portion of it, but there is no telling which of the three will profit most by his withdrawal.

IN another column appears Judge Westover's card in which he announces his withdrawal from the race for the Democratic nomination for Congress in this district. It has been evident for the last three weeks that a candidate without a long bank account could not expect to win the nomination, but the mistake Mr. Westover made was in declaring, only last week, that he intended to stay in the fight until the nomination was made. The fact that the time has come when nominations are determined by the size of a candidate's pocket book is to be deplored, and there is no prospect of the evil being remedied.

THE South Carolina State Board of Education has adopted books for the public schools and for six years from date no others can be used. The board has given heed to the demands made by Confederate veterans and others that "Southern children should be taught from Southern books," and all the histories and readers selected come from a Richmond publishing house and the histories are written by a Virginian. General Walker after returning from the last Confederate reunion resigned his place as manager of a publishing house in Charleston to devote his whole time to this cause, whoking not only in South Carolina but in other Southern States. The books selected by the state board have received the indorsement of officers of the Survivors' Association.

Several fellows around here were rendered candidateless very unexpectedly.

RHINOCK WILL WIN.

Ex-Mayor Rhinock has been pouring hot shot into his opponents, and said in a speech at Big Bone Springs:

"In 1872 Berry ran against Wm. E. Arthur, who was the regular Democratic nominee for Congress. He also said, I am independent in politics. I recognize no party fealty, and am subject to the decision of no convention. In 1873 Mr. Berry voted against Hon. George B. Hodge, Democratic nominee for State Senator, and voted against James McArthur and Wm. Morin, regular Democratic nominees for Representatives. In 1874, when the Democrats nominated Capt. Ed Air for Mayor, Mr. Berry ran against him independently, thereby securing the election of Louis Constans, the Republican candidate. In 1875, when John Botton and R. W. Nelson were the regular Democratic nominees for representatives, Mr. Berry was against them, and also in 1875 Mr. Berry voted for the Republican nominee for Marshal of Newport against the Democratic nominee. In the issue of the Cincinnati Daily Gazette, August 4th, 1884, the Republican paper, Mr. Berry gave out the following interview:

"'Q. Do you think a political change in Kentucky would be beneficial?

"'A. By Mr. Berry: I believe it would, and predict at same future time a combination of liberal Democats and Republicans by which the Democratic party may be overthrown for the time being on some such plan as was adopted in Tennessee.'

"In 1886 Mr. Berry said that at the convention at Newport, which nominated John G. Carlisle, himself an ex-Democrat, 'I don't know whether I am a Democrat or not, and proceeded to advocate the Blair mixed school bill. Berry deceived Goebel in 1899, and and not support the State ticket. Bryan came all the way from his Nebraska home and appealed to the Democrats to stand by the state ticket when your own Congressman, four times honored with a seat in Congress, did all in his power to defeat the ticket.

"Concerning the patent medicine man who opposes me from Kenton and who proclaims to the Democracy that it was Governor Goeble's desire that he be sent to Congress, I have but this to say: You remember Goebel said on the floor of the Senate in the contest for the election of a Federal Senator that no man should crawl through the grave of Isaac Wilson into the Senate of the United States, and his words are very applicable to my opponent from Kenton, and I say no man shall crawl through the grave of your martyred Governor into the halls of Congress. I spent for the State ticket last year more than $5,000, and I am a Democrat who can honestly say to you that never in all my life have I scratched a Democratic ticket after the nominations were made. If I had to engage speakers to run around over the district for me I would be ashamed to look into your faces and ask you for the nomination for Congress. I am for Beckham and Bryan and every plank of that splendid Kansas City platform. Fellow Democrats, I ask you to consider why the Republican Committee of the Sixth District have from time to time postponed the naming of their candidate until after the Democratic primaries. Does it mean when Albert S. Berry is defeated that he is going to get the Republican nomination? Well, give him the chance; that's where he belongs to-day."—Kentucky Post.

[Enquirer.]

"Yes sir," said a well-known Sixth District Democrat yesterday who had just returned from a tour through the district. "Rhinock has shown that he is by far the strongest man in Kenton and Campbell against Berry, and the country counties who are opposed to Berry have united on Rhinock, believing he is the man to stand by. It will be a grand victory for the young man, who is in every sense of the word a self-made man and worthy of the promotion."

"The developments of the past week prove conclusively that the fight for the Democratic nomination for Congress next Saturday is between ex-Mayor Rhinock and Albert S. Berry. Rhinock has steadily gained ground in the country, and it is admitted that he has the best chance to carry Boone county, and that he will get a big vote in the other country counties, as the opposition to Berry in the country are determined to defeat Berry for his treachery to the Democratic party, and they will unite on Rhinock, knowing that he is several thousand votes stronger in the big counties of Kenton and Campbell than any of his opponents. It will be a grand victory for Rhinock. From a poor and penniless boy he has worked his way up to a substantial, respected and honorable gentleman, in every way worthy and capable of filling the high honor that he asks for. No better or more deserving Democrat ever lived." These remarks were made by a gentleman of veracity, who has achieved phenomenal success as a political prophet.

Said a lifelong member of the Jefferson Club yesterday: "I believe that the action of a handful of the members of the club getting together and stultifying the principles of the club by indorsing a candidate before a Democratic primary will prove a veritable death blow to the club, as no Democratic club ever displayed such animosity and unfairness and enjoyed a long life thereafter.

"Mr. Rhinock was the first President and organizer of the Jefferson Club, and when he made the race for the nomination of Mayor of Coviggton the club attempted to indorse his candidacy, but Mr. Rhinock, with his motto, 'Fair play for all Democrats,' promptly refused to listen to such action, declaring he had the interests of the club at heart, and in a spirit of fairness insisted on the club awaiting until after the nomination before tendering any indorsement.

"I believe that Mayor Rhinock will get three fourths of all the votes, of the club members, and I regret to see the club fall asnnder on account of the lack of good judgment of a half dozen prejudiced and overofficious members in indorsing a certain candidate from Kenton county before the nomination was made."

Cincinnati Tobacco Market.

There was no marked change in the price of the various grades of leaf tobacco offered for sale this week, when compared with those current for the same types a week ago. Common trash and lugs, also the commoner sorts of tops leaf, held firm and were active in the bidding, and while the price bid for them was not materially advanced the general tone of the market for tobacco in this class was better and more in accord with views of the seller.

The inquiry for the better sorts of plug fillers was more active, the same selling as high as 18 cents. Those that heretofore have been selling at from 11 3-4 to 14 cents received more attention from the buyers, consequently there was less fluctuation and prices bid, as a rule, were nearer the marks of shippers than for the previous week.

The better grades of lugs and trash, also filler leaf, that for some time have been ranging from 7 to 9 cents may be quoted as firm and unchanged.

That coming "fatalities cast their shadows before" is now said to be the case in the Galveston catastrophe. Two months ago an old negro preacher, living in Galveston had three dreams upon three consecutive nights to the effect that Galveston was being destroyed by a tidal wave.

He told his friends about the first dream and the second, and with the coming of the third he began to preach among the colored people to leave the island, as well as advising the whites to do so. Every one laughed at him, and, finally, in sheer despair, the old negro took his departure for Houston, with his few household effects, stating that he was going to leave the island, even if no one else did.

He has not been heard of since he arrived in Houston, some four weeks ago, but parties who remember the incident are looking for the old negro now, considering him an important personage. —Austin (Texas) Cor. St. Louis Republic.

The Kentucky Neely.

Judging from the itemized bill that Collier turned in to account for the last ten thousand dollars he made way with during the stormy scenes at Frankfort last winter, he must have had a few private tips from Mr. Neely, of Cuban postal fraud fame.

One of the items in Gen. Collier's account is $600 for onions. Mr. Coulter and some of his assistants, according to a dispatch to the Courier-Journal, have figured out this item, and find that at last winter's prices Mr. Collier must have bought 900 bushels of onions. There are 210 averaged-sized onions to a bushel, and there were 40 soldiers here for forty days and 100 here for sixty days. Therefore, each soldier the first forty days must have eaten four and a half onions, while during the last sixty days there were eighteen onions for each soldier.

Another item is three and a half tons of rice, about 7,500 pounds. An experienced cook has informed Auditor Coulter that three and a half tons of Rice, when boiled, would dam the Ohio river or fill the Custom-house in Louisville about three times.

There is also an item of 4,000 sides of bacon, or ten sides a day for the forty soldiers during the first forty days, and forty sides a day during the last sixty days.

Desides there was an item of $365 worth of whiskey, in addition to numerous "prescriptions" at $2.50 each.

NEXT week Hon. Adali E. Stewenson will begin a stumping tour, taking in the States of Michigau, Wisconsin, Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and West Virginia.

Among the representatives of foreign countries at the famed Chautauqua assembly, Chautauqua, N. Y., none attracts more attention than Miss Carrie Rousseau, of Kenilworth, South Africa. She is a cousin of President Steyn, of the Orange Free State, over which British dominion is now established.

New surgical instruments operated by electric motors are coming into use. The most wonderful is an electric saw, which cuts through bone and tissue with lightning speed. This machine has already found an extensive use in large hospitals, and has proved of value in severe operations, where the shock attending the use of the slower hand saw would have frequently proved fatal to the patient.

Women live longer than men. Statistics of the various countries are remarkable on this point. In Germany only 113 out of 1,000 males reach the age of 50, while more than 500 of 1,000 females reach that age. In the United States there are 2,583 female to 1,398 male centenarians. In France, of 10 centenarians, 7 are women and only 3 men. In the rest of Europe, of 21 centenarians, 16 are women.

Excavations were recently made at Cripplegate, London, to determine whether the medieval bastion covered any remains of the old Roman bastion, supposed to have existed in that neighborhood. The first excavation revealed a Roman wall five feet below St. Giles' churchyard, which is 16 feet below the street level. The average height of this old wall was 25 to 30 feet, but so far only about seven feet have been exposed.

Women are reveling in a Japanese craze. Milady must have her Japanese morning room, and, if you are a fortunate intimate, you may perhaps obtain a glimpse of this coveted apartment. A few cushions are permitted on the divan, but not many; and there are no chairs.

The engineering feat of transporting a steamboat of 550 tons from Scotland to Lake Titicaca—the most elevated lake in South America—has just been accomplished. The vessel is the Coya. It was constructed in Scotland and then taken in sections to Mollendo, Peru, from which place it was carried in twenty-two cars to the railroad skirting the steep sides of the Andes to the lakeside, nearly 13,000 feet above the sea level. There the sections of the vessel were put together again and the boilers and engines installed.

England and most other countries are complaining bitterly at the rapidly increasing price of coal. But if the coal famine leads civilization to adopt electric or sun heating it will save Europe and North America alone a little bill of $315,000,000 a year loss to buildings and personal property by fire. London alone has ten fires a day on an average, and spends $750,000 a year on her fire brigade. New York has 18 fires every 24 hours, and expends $3,510,000 in putting them out. Every time an alarm is sounded in London it costs $200.

It will occur but one time in the coming century, on that date—7943. The middle day of the century will be January 1901. There will be 380 eclipses of the moon and sun during the century.

CREMATING THE DEAD

Search for Unfortunate Victims at Galveston, Still Progressing.

The Cleaning Up and Disinfecting of Streets, Stores and Buildings Goes Bravely On—Order Out of Chaos.

Galveston, Tex., Sept. 14.—More than 2,000 dead bodies have been identified, and the estimate of Mayor Jones that 5,000 souls perished in the great hurricane does not appear to be magnified. The city is being patroled by the troops and a citizens' committee, and a semblance of order is appearing.

Austin, Tex., Sept. 14.—Advices to Gov. Sayers Thursday indicate that several trains loaded with supplies for the destitute are en route to Galveston. The arrival of these supplies will relieve the situation at Galveston very materially, as the governor is informed that quite a lot of clothing is included in the list.

Gov. Sayers made the following statement Thursday night:

"The city authorities at Galveston are in full control, and every effort is being made to find and bury the dead, to remove the debris and to sanitate the city. Contributions of the most liberal character are rapidly reaching me, and I shall see that the money is used to the very best advantage for the sufferers and that there shall be no waste of the magnificent contributions coming from the free hands and generous hearts of a sympathetic people.

"In behalf of the people of Texas I desire to express my acknowledgment to the people of the United States for the ready and generous responses they have made in coming to the aid of our afflicted people. The number of deaths, the amount of destitution and the losses of property are far greater than anticipated.

"The secretary of the navy has placed the revenue cutter Galveston at my disposal, and I have in turn placed it at the disposal of the mayor of Galveston. The addition of this cutter to the boats already loaned by the federal government will give us five boats at Galveston to handle supplies and passengers to and from the mainland, and I anticipate that their presence there will relieve the situation very materially."

Galveston, Tex., Sept. 15.—The first real attempt to clear away the great mass of debris piled along the beach front for a distance of several miles was begun Friday.

Advertisements were printed in the News which appeared Friday morning, asking for hundreds of men and boys to do this work. A multitude responded. They were formed into squads and promptly put to work with police and deputy sheriffs in charge. It is hoped that a vigorous prosecution of this work will lead to the early recovery of bodies still in the debris. That there are many of them there is no shadow of doubt. It is difficult indeed to imagine how half the people that did escape got free of this fearful flotsam and jetsam.

Telegraphic communication has been partially restored, the Western Union and Postal companies having reached the city with one wire. Large forces have been at work along the lines of both companies.

Austin, Tex., Sept. 15.—During Friday Gov. Sayers received quite a large number of subscriptions and it is estimated that the total subscription lists to date, here and at Galveston, will reach $1,300,000. Gov. Sayers states that as soon as possible he will prepare a list of subscriptions by states and give it out.

During the day Gov. Sayers ordered a train load of provisions to be sent from Dallas to Galveston under guard to prevent any possible interruption by marauders and also ordered provisions and clothing sent from San Antonio.

Galveston, Tex., Sept. 15.—The sympathy felt for Galveston throughout the world was again evidenced Friday morning when local bankers were notified by cable that the Liverpool cotton exchange had subscribed £1,000 for the relief of the sufferers and that more will follow. The people are profoundly grateful for the generous response of the world to their appeal for relief and from a wish to be worthy of the aid extended to them, they are speaking more hopefully of reconstruction.

Galveston, Tex., Sept. 17.—What a contrast. Last Sunday gloom, desolation and despair prevailed in this storm torn city. Sunday, hope and determination have seized the people; they realize that the task before them is gigantic, yet with the generous aid that is flowing into them in a broad stream from all parts of the civilized world, and their own indomitable purpose, the sick and wounded will be healed, the destitute relieved and the recuperation of Galveston will be speedy and the city will be rebuilt and placed on a more enduring foundation and her commercial career started again. Such is the spirit displayed to-day by this grievously stricken people.

You can hear no complaining, no expression of want of confidence, but only of hope, zeal and determination, and this is exemplified by the vigorous enterprise visible on every hand. Although it is the Sabbath, work is pushed under a systematic plan of operation that is rapidly bringing order out of chaos. The search and burial or cremation of the unfortunate victims within the corporate limits is being rapidly prosecuted by a large force in organized squads under military direction. Down the island and on the mainland the work of interring the dead is conducted with the same system. Looting and the desecration of corpses have ceased since the military have assumed control, and they are co-operating harmoniously with the civil authorities.

The clearing up and disinfecting of streets, stores and buildings goes bravely on and the sanitary condition of the down-town portion of the city has been greatly improved. Mayor Jones stated Sunday there would be no let-up in the work until the entire city was cleansed and disinfected. Dry goods stores and clothing houses resemble great laundries and every available space is occupied with goods hung up to dry. Fortunately the weather is clear, hot and dry for the purpose. Those merchants whose stocks were but slightly damaged have been doing a rushing business, and so have the restaurants, but their stocks are very limited and fresh meat difficult to obtain. Extra[illegible] are rare exceptions, although the supply of food at hotels and restaurants is limited. This will be remedied in a few days.

Since all the railways terminating here have united upon one bridge, and are pushing the work night and day, with a large force reconstructing it, while the trucks are being restored on the island and mainland by large forces, it is confidently asserted that Galveston will have communication directly by Wednesday next. If this is done it will relieve the existing situation wonderfully, as all supplies are now brought in by boat.

The injured and sick, under the thorough system inaugurated by the board of health and local physicians, aided by volunteers from the outside, are receiving every care and attention and are doing as well as could be expected under the circumstances, which are being improved daily.

All churches in the city either being wrecked or ruined, with one or two exceptions, divine services were in most cases suspended. Mass was celebrated at St. Mary's cathedral Sunday morning and was largely attended. Father Kirwin preached an eloquent and feeling sermon in which he spoke of the awful calamity that had befallen the people. After expressing sympathy with the afflicted and distressed, he advised all to go to work in burying the dead. That was their first duty; the next was to bring the names of the widows and orphans to the church, and they could rest assured of the unfortunates being cared for.

Father Kirwin said: "We will build a more secure, larger, a better city here and need never fear a repetition of the calamity of the century."

The keeper of the life saving station at the western extremity of the island got in Sunday. He reports the station gone and that a frightful scene of desolation exists there. He reports that 180 bodies were buried there; that the prairie and marshes are strewn with the carcasses of animals and reptiles and that the stench is stifling.

New York, Sept. 17.—Late Sunday night it was announced at the chancellery of the cathedral that the amount collected in the Roman Catholic churches in this city for the Galveston relief fund would probably amount to $15,000.

New York, Sept. 17.—Garnegie hall was filled Sunday with people who came to attend the memorial service for the Galveston dead under the auspices of the Salvation army. Three hundred and fifty dollars were raised for the relief fund.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 17.—Nearly $8,000 has been subscribed in Atlanta for the Galveston sufferers. A portion of this is already in the hands of Gov. Sayers.

Coal Goes Up in St. Louis.

St. Louis, Sept. 15.—The immediate effect of the threatened anthracite miners' strike in this city was an advance of the price from $6.75 to $7.25 a ton by dealers Friday. A further advance is expected after the strike goes into effect. The visible supply of hard coal is small, as bituminous coal is generally used.

Peter Maher Defeats Jim Jeffords.

Philadelphia, Sept. 15.—Peter Maher, of this city, completely outclassed Jim Jeffords, of California, in the two rounds of what was to have been a six-round fight at the Pennsylvania Athletic club Friday night. At no stage of the fight did the Californian show any cleverness.

Washington, Sept. 15.—Assistant Secretary Vanderlip has given notice to banks having old 2-per-cent. bonds on deposit to secure deposits of public moneys that the bonds must be surrendered at once and other bonds substituted, or their deposits will be decreased.

A Swiss named Walter was arrested at San Sebastian, Spain, on a charge of plotting with anarchists to kill a European monarch.

CHINESE SITUATION.

Russian General Admits His Troops Will Winter at Tien-Tsin.

The Sixth United States Cavalry Is at the Summer House of the American Legation in the Western Hills.

Peking, Sept. 11, via, Taku, Sept. 14.—The allied generals were in conference four hours to-day, the principal topic being how best to encourage the Chinese to return to work. It was agreed that looting should cease and that foraging parties should hereafter be accompanied by an officer who should give receipts for all supplies taken.

The question of wintering at Tien-Tsin was brought up with a view of ascertaining, if possible the attitude of the Russians. Gen. Linevitch admitted that most of his troops would winter there.

At the Japanese legation it is now believed that the man who claims to have killed Baron Von Ketteler is the actual criminal. The Japanese believe that he has been paid to accuse himself by the Russians, in order to discredit Prince Ching. The Japanese favor Prince Ching and the Russians Li Hung Chang.

The 6th United States cavalry will leave to-morrow for the western hills where is located the summer house of the United States legation.

Two thousand Germans, under Gen. Hoepfner, have left for Siang-Hsang (Liang-Hiang?), a walled city occupied by Boxers, who recently attacked a party of German soldiers. The city has one gun.

Washington, Sept. 17.—Nothing came from Gen. Chaffee during the day and the situation regarding the question of the withdrawal of the troops from Peking, it was stated, was unchanged.

When Li Hung Chang reaches Tien-Tsin he will assume the viceroyship of the great province of Chi-Li, thence he will proceed to Peking. Whether with his new office as viceroy and with the additional powers he may have as a peace plenipotentiary, he will be able to meet the demands of the foreign governments for the complete restoration of order, the preservation of peace and the protection of foreigners are questions which must answer themselves as time progresses. It is understood that up to this time there has not been any serious consideration by this government of the personnel of any commissioners that may be appointed to secure a peaceful and stable government. Several names have been mentioned, but this is as far as the matter has progressed.

Nothing official has reached this government of the reported rejection by Germany of Yung Lu as a peace negotiator with Li Hung Chang and Prince Ching. It would not be surprising, however, if this were true, as the officials believe Germany or any other government would be justified in refusing to treat with a person who has been regarded in part, at least, responsible for much of the harm that has been done.

The Paris dispatch announcing the discussion of the possibility of a conference in some other country than China for the purpose of setting terms of peace, caused some discussion in diplomatic and other circles. Such a suggestion has not been made to this government, however, and nothing is know of it here.

Tien-Tsin, Sept. 13, via Shanghai, Sept. 15.—The Russians, it is reported here, are rapidly pushing troops into Manchuria, where all indications point to extensive operations before the arrival of winter.

They have suspended work on the railroad to Peking which adds to the complications. It is believed that their object in this is to compel the other powers to consent to the destruction of Peking.

The Tu Liu expedition has returned to Tien-Tsin. The march back was unopposed and it is reported that the Boxers have retired in force to a village 30 miles up the Grand canal.

The Americans did not participate in the burning and looting of Tu Liu and this caused considerable comment among the other commanders.

The 6th United States cavalry, it is reported here, have been ordered to camp at Yang-Taun, up the Pei-Ho, with a view of strengthening the line of communication.

A Remarkable Family.

Tusumbia, Mo., Sept. 17.—A remarkable birth is reported here from Mary's Home, a little town near this place. Mrs. Henry Smith, wife of a tiemaker, became the mother of five boys at one time. They are reported to be well and weigh a total of 30 pounds. Smith, according to reports, has a remarkable family. He has been married about seven years and is the father of 16 children. Only one time has there been born a single baby at a single birth. There are two pairs of twins, two pairs of triplets and the quintet reported.

DEATH OF SICARD.

The Retired Rear Admiral Expired Suddenly of Apoplexy at Westernville, N. Y.

Rome, N. Y., Sept. 15.—Rr. Adm. Sicard died of apoplexy at his summer home at Westernville Friday morning. The house in which he died was erected by William Floyd, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

Rr. Adm. Sicard.

Rr. Adm. Montgomery Sicard was retired in 1898. Since 1851 the ocean was his home. He served during the civil war with several blockading squadrons until 1862, when he was made lieutenant commander. After the war Sicard spent two years at the naval academy and two years on the Pensacola. In 1881 he was made captain, and in 1894 he was promoted to commodore, and later to rear admiral. When the Spanish war broke out Adm. Sicard was placed in command of the squadron at Key West, but he became ill and was invalided, Rr. Adm. Sampson succeeding him.

The Portuguese Government Authorizes His Departure From Lourenco Marques.

Lisbon, Sept. 17.—The Portuguese government has telegraphed to the governor of Mozambique authorizing the departure of Mr. Kruger for Europe. The governor, however, must satisfy himself that Mr. Kruger is really going to Europe. Meanwhile he is instructed to take all precautions to safeguard the personal security of Mr. Kruger.

The Hague, Sept. 17.—The government of the Netherlands has telegraphed to Lourenzo Marques offering a Dutch warship to bring Mr. Kruger to Holland.

CORBETT IN QUEENTOWN.

He Emphatically Denies That His Fights With Sharkey and McCoy Were Fakes.

Queenstown, Sept. 15.—A press representative on boarding Friday the Cunard line steamer Campania, from New York, handed to James J. Corbett, the pugilist, a number of dispatches relating to the charges made against him in New York. He read them and said:

"It is ridiculous to say that my fights with Sharkey and McCoy were fakes.

"The allegations of Mesdames Corbett and McCoy," he said, "are too ridiculous to speak about."

Corbett and Marguerite Corneille, the actress, were booked as "Mr. and Mrs. Martin." Her mother was with her and Corbett occupied a separate state room.

Having committed the triple crime, he ran amuck, killing five others and wounding two fatally. Then he went to the local cemetery and committed suicide.

Capt. McQueston Killed.

Washington, Sept. 17.—The war department Sunday received information from Gen. MacArthur of the tragic death in the Philippines of Capt. Charles McQueston, of the 4th regular United States infantry, the result of wounds by a soldier whom he had attacked during a temporary fit of insanity.

Took His Own Life.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Sept. 15.—A man, supposed to be Frank McGill, of Brownwood, Tex., who came here from Jackson, Miss., killed himself after having told several persons he had lost a daughter and three grandchildren in the Galveston flood. Among his effects was a letter from the cashier of the First National bank of Brownwood, Tex.

Killed the Victor.

Clarksville, Tenn., Sept. 15.—At Dewcy, Trigg county, Ky., near the Tennessee line, Dave Kennedy, a merchant, shot and fatally wounded Jim Walker, who had got the best of Kennedy's nephew in a fight.

A BIG STRIKE ORDERED

One Hundred and Forty Thousand Men Are Involved.

The Miners in the Anthracite Coal Regions Making Preparations for the Coming Struggle.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 14.—The officials of the United Mine Workers of America Thursday issued a statement to the public giving the causes that have led up to the strike which was ordered Wednesday. Among other things he says:

The average wages of the anthracite miner for many years has been less than $250 annually. During that period of time the cost of many of the necessaries of life has been increased over 20 per cent. An increase in the cost of living, without a corresponding increase of wages, is equivalent to a reduction in wages.

The laws of the state of Pennsylvania make 2,400 pounds a ton of anthracite coal; yet anthracite miners are compelled to mine from 2,700 to 4,000 pounds for a ton, and, in addition to that, are docked exorbitant amounts, often reaching 12 per cent. of their daily earnings, for any impurities which may be sent out with their coal. Where they are paid by the car, instead of being required to furnish a well-rounded heap on the car at the breakers, as was originally agreed to, they have gradually been compelled to increase the amount of coal in each car by building the same perpendicularly from 6 to 18 inches above the edge.

They are compelled to purchase the powder used in mining from their employers, paying $2.75 per keg for a grade of powder that can be purchased elsewhere for $1.50 per keg, and which wholesales for about $1 per keg. They are required by many of the companies to deal in "pluck-me" stores or leave their employment. They must pay to the company $1 per month for a doctor, whether they need him or not, and have no voice in saying who the doctor shall be. The smallness of their earnings, together with the great cost of living, has compelled them to take their children from school before they have reached the age prescribed by law, and place them at work in the breakers, in order to keep the family from starvation. When any miner, feeling the burden of these conditions has gone to the management and asked to have them removed, he has been told if he does not like it he can quit.

Hazleton, Pa., Sept. 17.—With the exception of President Mitchell's arrival, there was little evidence shown here Sunday that Hazleton was the storm center of the present coal war between capital and labor. Nothing occurred to disturb the serenity of the Sabbath. Quite a large number of miners came to town, but soon left when they found that there was no news floating around. With the exception of the engineers, firemen, pump runners and repair men, no one was around any of the mines in this vicinity. Public meetings of miners were held during the day at Harley, Ebervale and Freeland, on the north side; Shepter and Harwood, on the west side, and at Colerain, south of here.

The largest gathering was that at Freeland, 12 miles north, where the union men are not so strong as the organizers would like to have them. This meeting was held in the open air and was addressed by National Committeeman Benjamin James and a number of other leaders well known in these regions. There were 2,000 persons in the crowd. When Mr. James asked all those to raise their hands who were against a strike not an arm went up.

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 17.—The miners in the Lykens region are divided on the strike question, and it is expected that at least half of them will go to work Monday. A meeting of the union men at Lykens was held Sunday afternoon, at which it was decided not to work, but it is thought enough will stand by the company to operate the mine. Reports from Wiconisco are that the men will obey the strike order as long as there is any hope of a compromise with the operators. A secret session of the Lykens and Wiconisco miners was held Sunday night at Lykens to invite the mine employes at Williamstown to join the strike. The men there do not belong to the union and are opposed to a strike because of the refusal of the miners at Lykens and Wiconisco to support them in the strike of 1886.

The distance raced was 1,500 metres.

M'KINLEY'S VIEWS.

Abstract of Letter Accepting Nomination for President.

IN FULL ACCORD WITH PLATFORM

Says Opposing Parties Compel Republicans to a Second Battle on the Money Issue—Regarding Philippine Islands.

The following in an abstract of the letter of Hon. William McKinley accepting the nomination of the republican convention of 1900 for president of the United States:

The nomination of the republican national convention of June 19, 1900, for the office of the presidency of the United States, which is the official representative of the convention whose action was conveyed to me, is accepted. I have carefully examined the platform adopted and give to it my hearty approval. Upon the great issue of the last national election it is clear. It upholds the gold standard and indorses the legislation of the present congress by which that standard has been effectively strengthened. The stability of our national currency is therefore assured so long as those who adhere to this platform are kept in control of the government. In the first battle, that of 1896, the friends of the gold standard and of sound currency were triumphant and the country is enjoying the fruits of that victory. Our opponents, however, are not satisfied. They compel us to a second battle, in which the issue on which the first was fought and won. While regretting the reopening of this question which controls and disturbs the present satisfactory financial condition of the government and visit uncertainty upon our great business enterprises, we accept the issue and again invite the sound money forces to join in the winning contest and we hope a permanent triumph for an honest financial system, which will continue inviolable the public faith.

As in 1896 the three silver parties are united, under the same leader who, immediately after the election of 1896, said in an address to the bimetallists, said:

"The friends of bimetallism have not been vanquished: they have simply been overcome. They believe that the gold standard is a conspiracy of the money-changers against the welfare of the human race, and they will continue the warfare against it."

The policy thus proclaimed has been accepted and confirmed by these parties.

In all lines of the platform I cordially announce that their efforts shall be unceasing until the gold standard, established from statute books and the free and unlimited coinage of silver at 16 to 1 shall take its place.

All the Issues Important.

The relative importance of the issue I do not stop to discuss. All of them are important. Whichever may be successful will be bound in conscience to observe into administration and legislation its several declarations and declare its position will be as obligatory as another, but all are not immediate. It is not possible that these parties would, even if the ratio of 16 to 1, the immediate realization of which is demanded by their several platforms, ave void and independent in the event that they should be clothed with power. Otherwise their professions of faith is insincere. It is therefore the imperative business of those opposed to this financial heresy to prevent the success of the parties whose union is only assured by adherence to the silver issue. Will the American people, through the ballot, destroy our credit, hazard the overthrow of the wise financial legislation of the past year and revive the danger of the panic attended with all of the inevitable evils of shattered confidence and prostrated industry which justly alarmed and aroused them in 1896?

Stands by Protection.

The republican party remains faithful to its principle of a protective tariff which supplies sufficient revenues for the government and adequate protection to our enterprises and producers; and of reciprocity which opens foreign markets to the fruits of American labor, and furnishes new channels of trade which to market the surplus of American farms. The time-honored principles of protection and reciprocity were, in the judgment of the republican victory to be written into public law.

During the past year more than $19,000,000 of United States bonds have been paid from the surplus revenues of the treasury, and in addition $45,000,000 of two per cents, matured, called by the government, and for the payment of Pacific railroad bonds issued by the government in aid of the roads in the sum of nearly $44,000,000 have been paid into the treasury before 21, 1897. The treasury balance is in satisfactory condition, showing on September 1 $135,479,009, including the $150,000,000 gold reserve held in the treasury. The commercial relations with the Pacific railroads have been substantially closed, $124,421,000 being received from these roads, leaving a balance part in cash and the remainder with ample securities for payments deferred.

Volume of Our Currency.

Instead of diminishing, as was predicted four years ago, the volume of our currency is greater per capita than it has ever been. It was $21.10 in 1896. It had increased to $26.60 on July 1, 1900, and $26.87 on September 1, 1900. Our total money on July 1, 1896, was $1,806,434,990; on July 1, 1900, it was $2,062,435,495, and on September 1, 1900.

Our financial and agricultural conditions are more promising than they have been for many years; probably more so than they have been for a generation. Labor abounds every where throughout the republic. I rejoice that the southern as well as the northern states are enjoying their full share of these improved national conditions and that all are contributing so largely to our remarkable home and foreign trade. The money lender receives lower rewards for his capital than he has ever invested in active business. The rates of interest are lower than they have ever been in this country, while those who labor and those who produced on the farm and in the workshop, and the labor producing them, have advanced to the front.

Our Foreign Trade.

Our foreign trade shows a satisfactory and increasing growth. The amount of our exports for the year 1900 over those of the exceptionally prosperous year of 1899 was about half a million dollars for every day of the year. Of these sums have gone into the homes and enterprises of the people. There has been an increase of over $50,000,000 in exports of agricultural products; $92,692,220 in manufactures, and in the products of the mines over $10,000,000. Our trade balances cannot fail to give satisfaction to the people of the country. In 1898 we sold abroad $615,482,678 of products more than we bought abroad; in 1899 $529,847,893, and in 1900 $544,671,701, making during the three years a total balance in our favor of $1,689,779,190—nearly five times the balance of trade in our favor for the whole period of 108 years from 1790 to June 30, 1897, inclusive.

Four hundred and thirty-six million dollars of gold have been added to the gold stock of the United States since July 1, 1896. The law of March 14, 1900, authorized the refunding into two per cent. bonds of that part of the public debt represented by the three per cents. due in 1908, the four per cents. due in 1907, and the five per cents. due in 1904, aggregating $840,000,000. More than one-third of the sum of these bonds was refunded in the first three months after the passage of the act, and on September 1 the sum had been increased to more than $525,000,000, making in all $330,578,050, resulting in a saving of over $5,379,620. The ordinary receipts of the government for the fiscal year 1900 were $79,527,080 in excess of its expenditures.

While our receipts both from customs and internal revenue have greatly increased, our expenditures have been decreasing. Civil and miscellaneous expenses for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, were only $14,000,000 less than in 1899, while on the war account there is a decrease of more than $95,000,000. There were required $8,000,000 less to support the navy this year than last, and expenditures on account of Indians were nearly two and three-quarter million dollars less than in 1899. The only two items of increase in the public expenses of 1900 over 1899 are for pensions and interest on the public debt. In 1899 we expended for pensions $139,394,952, and for the fiscal year 1900 our payments on this account amounted to $140,877,316. The net increase of interest on the public debt of 1900 over 1899, required by the war loan, was $283,408.25. While congress authorized the government to make a war loan of $400,000,000 at the beginning of the war with Spain, only $200,000,000 of bonds were issued, bearing three per cent. interest, which were promptly and patriotically taken by our citizens.

Unless something unforeseen occurs to reduce our revenues or increase our expenditures, the congress at its next session should reduce taxation very materially.

Five years ago we were selling government bonds bearing as high as five per cent. interest. Now we are redeeming them with a bond at par bearing two per cent. interest. We are selling our surplus products and lending our surplus money to Europe. One result of our selling to other nations so much more than we have bought from them during the past three years is a radical improvement of our financial relations. The great amount of capital which has been borrowed of Europe for our rapid, material development have combined a constant drain upon our resources for interest and dividend and made our money market unstable in consequence. Disturbances by calls for payment or heavy sales of our securities whenever money stringencies or panic occurred abroad. We have now be- ing these debts and bring home many of our securities and establishing thereby a credit abroad by our loans and placing ourselves upon a sure foundation of financial independence.

Regarding the Boer War.

In the unfortunate contest between Great Britain and the Boer states of South Africa, the United States has maintained an attitude of neutrality in accordance with its well-known traditional policy. I did not hesitate, however, when requested by the governments of both South African republics, to proffer the good offices for a cessation of hostilities. It is to be observed that while the South African republics did not request of our powers, the United States was the only one which complied. The British government declined to accept this intervention of any power.

Ninety-seven per cent. of our exports and imports are now carried by foreign ships. For ocean transportation we pay annually to foreign ship owners $100,000,000. We ought to own the ships for our carrying trade with the world, and we ought to build them in American ship yards and man them with American sailors. Our own citizens should receive the transportation charges now paid to foreigners.

The Canal Question.

A subject of immediate importance to our country is the completion of a great waterway of commerce between the Atlantic and Pacific. The construction of a maritime canal is now more than ever indispensable to that intimate and ready communication between our eastern and western coasts and between the mainland and the possessions of the Hawaiian islands and the expansion of our influence and trade in the Pacific.

Our national policy more imperativsly than ever calls for its completion and control by the government; and it is believed that the next session of congress, after receiving the report of the present commission appointed under the act approved March 3, 1899, will make provision for the sure accomplishment of this great work.

Capital and Labor.

Combinations of capital which control the market in commodities necessary to the general use and which, by stifling oppressing natural and ordinary competition, thus enhancing prices to the general consumer, are obnoxious to common law and the public welfare. They are dangerous conspiracies against the public good and should be made the subject of prohibitory or penal legislation. Publicity is the best remedy and influence to check this evil. Uniformity of legislation in the several states should be secured. Discrimination between wholesale purchases and what is useful and necessary in business operations is essential to the wise and effective administration of the statutes. Honest cooperation of capital is necessary to meet new business conditions and extend our markets, but combinations in restraint of trade, create monopolies and control prices should be effectively restrained.

The law which can be rendered to labor is to afford it an opportunity for steady and remunerative employment, and to give it every encouragement for advancement. The policy which subserves this end is the true American policy. The past three years have been satisfactory to American workingmen than many preceding years. Any change in the present industrial or financial policy of the government would be disastrous to their highest interests. Legislation which will secure an increasing foreign market for American products, employment should continue to will secure steady work, and with the present gold standard the workingman is secured against payments for his labor in a depreciated currency. Nowhere in the world they is better than a short dollar; one will bring better rewards. The other will lessen the rewards of toil. The one will promote contentment and independence; the other penalize and impoverish. The wages of labor should be adequate to keep the home in comfort, educate the children and, with thrift and economy, lay something up for the days of infirmity and old age.

Practical civil service reform has always had the warm support and cooperation of the republican party. The future of the merit system is safe in its hands.

The merit system, as far as practicable, is made the basis of appointments to office in our new territory.

The Army and Navy.

The American people are profoundly grateful to the soldiers, sailors and marines who have in every time of conflict fought their country's battles and defended its honor. The survivors and the widows and orphans of those who have died are justly entitled to receive the generous and considerate care of the nation.

Referring to the work accomplished in Cuba, the president says a long step has been taken in the fulfillment of the sacred guarantees to the people of the island.

Notwithstanding the many embarrassments incident to a change of national conditions, Porto Rico is rapidly showing the good effects of her new relations to this nation.

The Philippine Question.

The power of the government has been used with the liberty, peace and the prosperity of the Philippine people and force has been employed only against force which arose in the way of the realization of these ends.

After reciting the events of importance in the islands, the president proceeds to show what "has been done and is being done to bring the benefits of liberty and good government to the people of the archipelago, the letter continues:

Every effort has been directed to their peace and prosperity, their advancement and well-being, not for our aggrandizement, for pride or power, for gain or revenue, not for exploitation, but for humanity and civilization; and for the protection of the vast majority of the population who welcome our sovereignty against the designing minority whose first demand after the surrender of Manila by the Spanish army was to enter the city that they might loot it and destroy those not in sympathy with their selfish and treacherous designs.

Would not our adversaries have sent Dewey's fleet to Manila to capture and destroy the Spanish sea power there, or, dispatching it there, would they have withdrawn it after the destruction of the Spanish fleet, and if the latter, whither would they have directed it to sail? Where should it have gone? What port in the orient was open to it? Do our opponents condemn the expedition under the command of Gen. Merritt to strengthen Dewey in the distant ocean and make it the triumph over Spain, with which nation we were at war? Was it not our highest duty to strike Spain at every possible point that the war might be successfully concluded at the earliest practicable moment?

And was it not our duty to protect the lives and property of those who came within our control by the fortunes of war? Could we have come away at any time between May 1, 1898, and the conclusion of peace without a stain upon our good name? Could we have come away without dishonor at any time after the ratification of the peace treaty by the senate of the United States?

There has been no time since the destruction of the enemy's fleet when we could or should have left the Philippine islands to themselves. After the treaty was ratified no power but congress could surrender our sovereignty or alienate a foot of the territory thus acquired. The congress has not seen fit to do the one or the other, and the president had no authority to do either, if he had been so inclined, which he was not. So long as the sovereignty remains in us it is the duty of the executive, whoever he may be, to uphold that sovereignty, and if it be attacked to suppress its assailants. Would our political adversaries do less?

We are in agreement with all of those who supported the war with spain; and also with those who counseled the ratification of the treaty of peace. Upon those two great essential steps there can be no issue. Both of these come all of our responsibilities. If others would shirk the obligations imposed by the war and the treaty, we cannot decline to act with them, and here the issue is made. It is our purpose to establish in the Philippines a government suitable to the wants and conditions of the inhabitants, which will prepare them for self-government when they are ready for it. That I am aiming to do under my constitutional authority, and will continue to do until congress shall determine the political status of the inhabitants of the archipelago.

Are our opponents against the treaty? If so, the commander-in-chief would not have been ratified in the senate but for their assistance. The senate which ratified the treaty and the congress which added its sanction by a large appropriation—comprised senators and representatives of both parties.

Would our opponents surrender to the insurgents, and to whom—to Aguinaldo? Is that to be the result? If not their purpose, then it should be promptly disclaimed, for any other course would raise hopes raised by our opponents in the minds of the Filipinos, that with their success at the polls in November there will be a withdrawal of our army and of American sovereignty over the archipelago; the anarchy and bloodshed which the Tagalog people recognized and the powers of self-government which all other parties of the archipelago conferred upon the Tagalog leaders.

The most serious belief in the minds of the insurgents that this will be done has already prolonged the rebellion and increased the difficulties of the pacification of a large army. It is now delaying full peace in the archipelago and the establishment of civil government, and has influenced many of the insurgents against whom we are fighting to continue the struggle in the expectation that the relief offered by Gen. MacArthur under my direction. But for these false hopes, a considerable number would have long since had in our military establishment in the Philippines, and the realization of a stable government would be already at hand.

The American people are asked by our opponents to yield the sovereignty of the United States in the Philippines to a small fraction of the inhabitants of the archipelago, while in rightful possession under the protocol with Spain, awaiting the ratification of the treaty of peace by the senate, and which has since been in active, open rebellion against the United States. We are asked to yield our sovereignty to a small minority, in the islands without consent of the majority, and to abandon the largest portion of the population, which has been loyal to us, to the cruelties of the insurgent bands. More than this, we are asked to protect this minority in establishing a government, and to this end suppress the opposition of the majority. We are required to set up a stable government in the interest of those who have no right to sovereignty and fired upon our soldiers, and then unanimously withdraw or sacrifice against its enemies within and against those having ambitious designs from without.

This would require an army and navy far larger than is now maintained in the Philippines and would place us in the wrong of what will be necessary with the full recognition of our sovereignty. A military support of our own power, and thus proposed, is the very essence of militarism. Both our opponents in their platform oppose, but which they their policy would of necessity be established in its most offensive form.

The American people will not make the murderers of our soldiers the wards of the republic and the objects of its bounty, liberty and order to the Philippines. They will not make them the builders of the new commonwealth. Such a course would be a betrayal of our sacred obligations to the peaceful Filipinos, and would place at the mercy of those who have murdered the lives and property of the natives and foreigners.

In short, the proposition of those opposed to us is to continue all the obligations in the Philippines and to give rest upon the government, only changing the relation from principal, which now exists, to that of surety. Our responsibility is to remain, but our power is to be diminished. Our obligation is to be no less, but our title is to be transferred to another power, which is without experience or training, or the ability to maintain a stable government at home and absolutely helpless to perform its international obligations

Some of C. P. Huntington's Maxims.

The business methods C. P. Huntington followed were very simple, and were as simply described by himself. Some of his maxims are worth preservation.

"When you can't go on horseback go on foot."

"All honest work is honorable work."

"I never work hard, I work easy."

"Work at anything to get enough money with which to buy a meal. If you earn three cents only spend one of them, then see to it that you are never without money afterward."

"Stand in a porch at night; sleep in a package box, but never become a pauper."

"Run after work; it won't run after you."

"It does no good to cram the mind full of knowledge that will not help a young man in the work he is fitted to do."

"A boy who has the push to succeed in life will succeed without higher education."

"There is growing up a wall of caste, with honest labor on the one side and frivolus gentility on the other."—Chicago Times-Herald.

[Boston Traveler.]

The question upon which the Presidential mind is most exercised is that of the Philippines. And this very naturally carries the President into a denial of the charge of imperialism, and an attempted justification of the course of the Administration in its policy of subjugation of a people that has shown itself as determined and as anxious for independence as our forefathers of the Revolution. It is sufficient for our purpose here to say that Senator Hoar, who has had every opportunity to know, flatly contradicts the President in his statements with relation to our dealings with the Filipino leaders, and Carl Schurz has publicly challenged the supporters of the Republican policy of subjugation of the Filipinos to cite an example in all history of greater perfidy than ours toward them, without an answer to his challenge. The issue will not down.

WHAT THE HORSE WOULD SAY.

Don't loan me. If it is to go for the doctor, use me yourself.

Don't rein my head up to make me look showy and high strong. It pains me a great deal to be compelled to hold my head in an unnatural position.

Don't check or whip me for defending myself from flies. What do you do when flies bite you? I have feelings as well as you.

Don't compel me to work when my shoulders are sore. Put on me a collar that fits my shoulders. When you first train me when my shoulders are tender, wash in cold water with salt added at night. To compel me to work when my shoulders are sore, is like you working when your hands are sore.

Don't leave the harness on me at noon in the long summer days, give me a chance to cool and rest.

Don't sit on my back to talk.

Don't check or whip me for stumbling. I don't want to stumble any more than you do.

Don't put frozen bits in my mouth. My mouth is as sensitive to pain as yours.

Don't feed me corn the year round. Give me a chance at both grain and roughness. Soak my corn in hot weather.

Don't over-load me, it will cause me to lose confidence.

No sin the writer fears more to answer for than that of loaning horses and hitching them to big loads, although you did not have to use a whip.

I have seen on Sundays, at a country church, about fifty horses tied to the hitch rack, reined up. To me it seemed as if their owners wanted their horses to be seen with their heads the highest. Unable to defend themselves from the flies they were compelled to stand and let the flies sting the blood out of them. While the thoughtless or cruel owner sat in a comfortable seat.—St. Louis Journal of Agriculture.

NOTES.

Fowls demand especial care during the moulting season.

Open the windows of the poultry house during the hot nights.

Provide shade for your fowls during September and October.

Don't keep chickens, ducks, turkeys and geese in the same yard.

Treat your fowls gently and teach them to look to you for kindness.

If confined in small yards the fowls should be supplied with green stuff.

Too much feed, or rather the way too much is given, is as bad as too little.

Do not forget to clean out the poultry house every other day—daily would be better.

Four spreadding adders—the genuine article—were killed on the street, last week, between the bank and the court house. They were about eight inches long, and evidently belong to the same hatching. No. 4 was killed last Sunday morning, and Thomas Rouse, who was present, related this experiment with an adder, a few years since: "My son and I were building fence, when we found a spreadding adder, and having heard that they would die from the effects of their own bite, we concluded to make the reptile its own executioner and commenced tormenting it with that in view, and it was not long until the snake had sunk its fangs deep in its sides. We then waited developments, and in a short time the reptile had shaken off the mortal coil and was as limp as a rag. We threw it out on a bank and continued our work, but in a short time the snake began to crawl, when we went after it again, and concluded to dose it with tobbacoo juice, and see what effect that would have. In a few minutes the snake was again apparently dead, and was thrown back on the bank, where it lay some time before it began to crawl again, when my son mashed its head off. I now believe the only sure way to kill an adder is to cut its head off."

Generally speaking there seems to be more authority shown from the political field than good principle to create taxation without representation, to appropriate the people's money without their consent. The new constitution and the thistle law has too much Britishism for true democracy. The thistle law invites more harm than good. Now as our old Commonwealth has been redeemed through the blood of William Goebel, let those whom the people trust show by their work that they are for liberty and freedom. This will be remembered for the sake of one who gave his blood to redeem us from the clutches of monopoly money power and those who seek to destroy liberty. Then this much of his message will be fulfilled in behalf of the great common people. We want men to represent us who will not show their animal nature for the dollars. If you swallow a political pill the opposite party will. Even though some of our hired hands in the political field bolt the principles of our party, let us stand together. Perhaps we can draw from the populace men who will carry out our principles under oath.

Farmers living near Independence, Kenton county, are alarmed over a threatened general attack of hydrophobia among the stock in that vicinity. Sunday six cattle owned by Charles McDonald, a stock raiser of that place, showed unmistakable signs of madness and had to be killed. Dr. Meyer, a Cincinnati veterinarian, had been called to attend the animal and he gave it as his opinion that the cattle were affected with genuine hydrophobia. Thirty other head of cattle owned by McDonald, it is feared, are also in danger, and are being closely watched for hydrophic symptoms. A shepherd dog owned by McDonald showed signs of rabies last week and was killed. It is the opinion that the dog had bitten a number of the stock in the neighborhood before it was put out of the way.

God's Judgments Are Like Sharp Razors, Says Dr. Talmage.

Nations of the World Are Either Punished or Rewarded—All Calamities Are Directed by Divine Wisdom.

Dr. Talmage, in his journey westward through Europe, has recently visited scenes of thrilling historic events. He sends this sermon, in which he shows that nations are judged in this world and that God rewards them for their virtues and punishes them for their crimes. The text is Isaiah 7, 20: "In the same day shall the Lord shave with a razor that is hired, namely, by them beyond the river, by the king of Assyria."

The Bible is the boldest book ever written. There are no similitudes in Ossian or the Iliad or the Odyssey so daring. Its imagery sometimes seems on the verge of reckless, but only seems so. The fact is that God would startle and arouse and propel men and nations. A tame and limping similitude would fail to accomplish the object. While there are times when the employs in the Bible the gentle dew and the morning cloud and the dove and the daybreak in the presentation of truth, we often find the iron chariot, the lightning, the earthquake, the spray, the sword and, in my text, the razor. This keen-bladed instrument has advanced in usefulness with the ages. In Bible times and lands the sheard remained uncut save in the seasons of mourning and humiliation, but the razor was always a suggestive symbol. David said of Doeg, his antagonist: "Thy tongue is a sharp razor working deceitfully"—that is, it pretends to clear the face, but is really used for deadly incision.

In this striking text this weapon of the toilet appears under the following circumstances: Judea needed to have some of its prosperities cut off, and God sends against it three Assyrian kings—first Sennacherib, then Esarhaddon and afterward Nebuchednezzar. These three sharp invasions that cut down the glory of Judea are compared to so many sweeps of the razor across the face of the land. And these devastations were called a hired razor because God took the kings of Assyria, with whom He had no sympathy, to do the work, and paid them in palaces and spoils and annexations. These kings were hired to execute the Divine behests. And now the text, which on its first reading may have seemed trivial or inapt, is charged with momentous import: "In the same day shall the Lord shave with a razor that is hired, namely, by them beyond the river, by kings of Assyria."

Well, if God's judgments are razors, we had better be careful how we use them on other people. In careful sheath these domestic weapons are put away where no one by accident may touch them and where the hands of children may not reach them. Such instruments must be carefully handled or not handled at all. But how recklessly some people wield the judgment of God! If a man meets with business misfortune, how many there are ready to cry out: "That is a judgment of God upon him because he was unscrupulous or arrogant or overreaching or miserly. I thought he would get cut down What a clean sweep of everything! His city house and country house gone. His stables emptied of all the fine bays and sorrels and grays that used to prance by his door. All his resources overthrown and all that he prided himself on tumbled into demolition. Good for him!" Stop, my brother. Don't sling around too freely the judgments of God, for they are razors.

Some of the most wicked business men succeed, and they live and die in prosperity, and some of the most honest and conscientious are driven into bankruptcy. Perhaps the unsuccessful man's manner was unfortunate, and he was not really as proud as he looked to be. Some of those who carry their heads erect and look imperial are humble as a child, while many a man in seedy coat and slouch hat and unblacked shoes is as proud as Lucifer. You cannot tell by a man's look. Perhaps he was not unscrupulous in business, for there are two sides to every story, and everybody that accomplishes anything for himself or others gets industriously lied about. Perhaps his business misfortune was not a punishment, but the fatherly discipline to prepare him for Heaven, and God may love him far more than He loves you, who can pay dollar for dollar and are put down in the commercial catalogues as A1. Whom the Lord loveth He gives $400,000 and lets die on embroidered pillows? No; whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth. Better keep your hand off the Lord's razors, lest they cut and wound people that do not deserve it. If you want to shave off some of the bristling pride of your own heart, do so, but be very careful how you put the sharp edge on others. How I do dislike the behavior of those persons who when people are unfortunate say: "I told you so getting punished—served him right!" If those I-told-you-so's got their desert they would long ago have been pitched over the battlements. The mote in their neighbor's eyes, so small that it takes a microscope to find it, gives them more trouble than the beam which obscures their own optics. With air sometimes superfilious and sometimes pharasaical and always blasphemous they take the razor of Divine judgment and sharpen it on the hone of their own hard hearts and then go to work on men sprawled out at full length under disaster, cutting mercilessly. They begin by soft expressions of sympathy and pity and half praise and lather the victim all over before they put on the sharp edge.

Let us be careful how we shoot at others lest we take down the wrong one, remembering the servant of King William Rufus, who shot at a deer, but the arrow glanced against a tree and killed the king. Instead of going out with shafts to pierce and razors to cut we had better imitate the friend of Richard Coeur de Lion. Richard, in the war of the Crusades, was captured and imprisoned, but none of his friends knew where, so his loyal friend went around the land from stronghold to stronghold and sang at each window a snatch of song that Richard Coeur de Lion had taught him in other days. And one day, coming before a jail where he suspected his king might be incarcerated, he sang two lines of song, and immediately King Richard responded from his cell with the other two lines, and so his whereabouts were discovered, and a successful movement was at once made for his liberation. So let us go up and down the world with the music of kind words and sympathetic hearts, serenading the unfortunate and trying to get out of trouble men who had noble natures, but by unforeseen circumstances have been incarcerated, thus liberating kings. More hymn book and less razor.

Especially ought we to be apologetic and merciful toward those who, while they have great faults, have also great virtues. No weeds verily, but no flowers. I must not be too much enraged at a nettle along the fence if it be in a field containing 40 acres of ripe Michigan wheat. Some time ago naturalists told us there was on the sun a spot 20,000 miles long, but from the brightness and warmth I concluded it was a good deal of a sun still. The sun can afford to have very large spot upon it, though it be 20,000 miles long, and I am very apologetic for those men who have great faults, while at the same time they have magnificent virtues.

Again, when I read in my text that the Lord shaves with the hired razor of Assyria the land of Judea, I think myself of the precision of God's providence. A razor swung the tenth part of an inch out of the right line means either failure or laceration, but God's dealings never slip, and they do not miss by the thousandth part of an inch the right direction. People talk as though things in this world were at loose ends. Cholera sweeps across Moscow and Madrid and Palermo, and we watch anxiously. Will the epidemic sweep Europe and America? People say: "That will entirely depend on whether the inoculation is a successful experiment; that will depend entirely on quarantine regulations; that will depend on the early or late appearance of frost. That epidemic is pitched into the world, and it goes blundering across the continents, and it is all guesswork and an appalling perhaps." I think, perhaps, that God had something to do with it, and that His mercy may have in some way protected us, that He may have done as much for us as the quarantine and the health officers. It was right and a necessity that all caution should be used, but there have come enough macaroni from Italy, and enough grapes from the south of France, and enough rags from tintterdemalions, and hidden in these articles of transportation enough cholerasic germs to have left by this time all the cities mourning in the cemeteries. I thank all the doctors and quarantines, but more than all, and first of all, and last of all, and all the time, I thank God. In all the 6,000 years of the world's existence there has not come one thing merely "happened so." God is not an anarchist, but a king, a father.

When little Tad, the son of President Lincoln, died, all America sympathized with the sorrow in the white house. He used to rush into the room where the cabinet was in session and while the most eminent men of the land were discussing the questions of national existence. But the child had no care about those questions. Now, God the Father and God the Son and God the Holy Ghost are in perpetual session in regard to this world and kindred worlds. Shall you, His child, rush in to criticise or arraign or condemn the Divine government? No; the cabinet of the Eternal Three can govern and will govern in the wisest and best way, and there never will be a mistake, and, like razor skillfully swung, shall cut that which ought to be cut and avoid that which ought to be avoided. Precision to the very hairbreadth. Earthly timepieces may get out of order and strike wrong, saying it is one o'clock when it is two, or two when it is three. God's clock is always right, and when it is one it strikes one, and when it is 12 it strikes 12, and the second hand is as accurate as the minute hand.

Further, my text tells us that God sometimes shaves nations. "In the same day shall the Lord shave with a razor that is hired." With one sharp sweep He went across Judea, and down went its pride and its power. In 1861 God shaved the American nation. We had allowed to grow Sabbath desecration and oppression and blasphemy and fraud and impurity and all sorts of turpitude. The south had its sins, and the north its sins, and the east its sins, and the west its sins. We had been warned again and again, and we did not heed. At length the sword of war cut from the St. Lawrence to the gulf and from Atlantic seaboard to Pacific seaboard. The pride of the land, not the cowards, but the heroes, on both sides went down. And that which we took for the sword of war was the Lord's razor. In 1863 again it went across the land; in 1863 again; in 1864 again. Then the sharp instrument was incased and put away.

Never in the history of the ages was any land more thoroughly shaved than during those four years of civil combat, and, my brethren, if we do not quit some of our individual and national sins the Lord will again take us in hand. He has other razors within reach besides war—epidemics, droughts, deluges, plagues—grasshopper and locust—or our overtowering success may so far excite the jealousy of other lands that under some pretext the great nations may combine to put us down. Our nation, so easily approached on north and south and from both oceans, might have on hand at once more hostilities than were ever arrayed against any one power. I hope no such combination against us will ever be formed, but I want to show that, as Assyria was the hired razor against Babylon, and the Huns the hired razor against the Goths, there are now many razors that the Lord could hire if, because of our national sins, He should undertake to shave us. In 1870 Germany was the razor with which the Lord shaved France. Japan was the razor with which He shaved China, and America the razor with which He shaved arrogant, oppressive and Bible-hating Spain. But nations are to repent in a day. May a speedy and worldwide coming to God hinder on both sides the sea all national calamity. But do not let us as a nation either by unrighteous law at Washington or bad lives among ourselves defy the Almighty.

One would think that our national symbol of the eagle might sometimes suggest another eagle—that which ancient Rome carried. In the talons of that eagle were clutched at one time Britain, France, Spain, Italy, Dalmatia, Rhaetia, Noricum, Pannonia, Moesia, Dacia, Thrace, Macedonia, Greece, Asia Minor, Syria, Phoenicia, Palestine, Egypt and all northern Africa and all the islands of the Mediterranean—indeed, all the world that was worth having a hundred and twenty millions of people under the wings of that one eagle. Where is she now? Ask Gibbon, the historian, in his prose poem, "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire." Ask her gigantic ruins, bemoaning their sadness through the ages, the screech owl at windows out of which worldwide conquerors looked. Ask the day of judgment, when her crowned debauchees, Commodus and Pertinax and Caligula and Diocletian, shall answer for their infamy. As men and as nations let us repent and have our trust in a pardoning God rather than depend on former successes for immunity! Out of 13 of the greatest battles of the world Napoleon had lost but one before Waterloo. Pride and destruction often ride in the same saddle.

But notice once more, and more than all, in my text, that God is so kind and loving that when it is necessary for Him to cut He has to go to others for the sharp-edged weapon. "In the same day shall the Lord shave with a razor that is hired." God is love. God is pity. God is help. God is shelter. God is rescue. There are no sharp edges about Him, no thrusting points, no instruments of laceration. If you want balm for wounds, He has that. If you want Divine salve for eyesight, He has that. But if there is sharp and cutting work to do, which requires a razor, that He hires. God has nothing about Him that hurts, save when dire necessity demands, and then He has to go clear off to some one else to get the instrument.

King Henry IV. of England crowned his son as king and on the day of coronation put on a servant's garb and waited, he, the king, at the son's table, to the astonishment of all the princes. But we know of a more wondrous scene—the King of Heaven and earth offering to put on you, His child, the crown of life and in the form of a servant waiting on you with blessing. Extol that love, all painting, all sculpture, all music, all architecture, all worship! In Dresdenian gallery let Raphael hold Him up as a child, and in Antwerp cathedral let Rubens hand Him down from the cross as a martyr, and Handel make all his oratorios vibrate around that one chord: "He was wounded for our transgressions, bruised for our iniquities." But not until all the redeemed get home, and from the countenances in all the galleries of the ransomed shall be revealed the wonders of redemption, shall either man or seraph or archangel know the height and depth and length and breadth of the love of God.

At our national capital a monument in honor of him who did more than anyone to achieve our American independence was for scores of years in building, and most of us were discouraged and said it never would be completed. And how glad we all were when in the presence of the highest officials of the nation the work was done! But will the monument to Him who died for the eternal liberation of the human race ever be completed? For ages the work has been going up. Evangelists and apostles and martyrs have been adding to the heavenly pile, and every one of the millions of redeemed going up from earth has made to it contribution of gladness and weight of glory is swung to the top of other weight of glory, higher and higher as the centuries go by, higher and higher as the whole millenniums roll, sapphire on the top of jasper, sardonyx on the top of chalcedony and chrysoprasus above topaz, until far beneath shall be the walls and towers and domes of our earthly capitol, a monument forever and forever rising and yet never done. "Unto Him who hath loved us and washed us from our sins in His blood and made us kings and priests forever." Alleluia, amen.

THE OLNEY LETTER.

Former Secretary of State Comes Out for Bryan.

Eastern Democrats Rejoice Over His Declaration—Victory in New York and the Nation Now Looked For.

On Thursday, September 6, Henry Loomis Nelson, of New Rochelle, N. Y., made public a letter received from Richard Olney, secretary of state under Grover Cleveland, favoring the election of William J. Bryan for president. the letter in full is as follows:

"Boston, 33 Court street, Aug. 14.—Dear Sir: I have yours of the 12th ult. You refer to a previous conversation in which I had intimated my intention to vote the democratic ticket at the coming presidential election and ask for the grounds for so doing. You urged at our interview that such a decision should, as a matter of duty, be accompanied by a willingness to avow the reasons behind it. I recognize the force of that view, and, though it is against my inclinations and habits, proceed to state some considerations which seem to me to justify the purpose I have formed.

"I need hardly say that Mr. Bryan is not the candidate I should choose could I have my own way in the matter and that I entirely dissent from parts of the Kansas City platform. But in laying his course upon the all-important subject of the presidency a citizen is bound to bear in mind that he is dealing with a practical matter and must select the practical results through such legitimate practical methods as are available. Parties cannot be ignored, for example, because ours is a government of parties; the real issue is which of them shall control, and individual effort independent of party must at best be abortive while it may further the success of the one or the other in the field. So the choice between the parties, one of which must certainly prevail, calls for the exercise of the same sound common sense.

Every Citizen Should Vote.

"Perfection in a candidate or platform is an idle dream, and infirmities in its creed and defects in its leadership will always characterize every party. But they in no wise excuse a citizen from taking his assigned part in the government of the country—from making up his mind what the common weal demands and what party success will come nearest satisfying the demands and from using his influence and casting his vote accordingly. If one citizen may properly withhold his vote, logically all may, and all the wheels of government be stopped, while to decline voting because practically certain that others will vote is but to give the latter an undue share of political power and to forego the right to complain of any abuse of it. The obligations of citizenship are avoided, not performed, by standing neutral in an election. The voting power is a trust which calls for use and is violated by the neglect to use.

"There is always a choice between the consequences of one's party ascendancy and those of its antagonist's, and in practice the true question before every citizen always is of the general attitude of a party upon the vital issues of the day and whether, in view of that attitude, its success is not the best thing in sight. Such is the real issue now confronting every American citizen. Be it admitted that the democratic party, its platform and its candidate are open to much just criticism, yet, all things considered, would not its triumph be the best outcome of the present presidential contest.

Urges a Fight for McKinleyism.

"In my judgment nothing is so important as that the American people should take this, their first, opportunity to emphatically protest against the whole policy and spirit of the present administration which may be called McKinleyism—a term used solely for brevity and not because Mr. McKinley is largely responsible for the things complained of, except as he has proved himself unable or unwilling to resist the pressure of political and personal friends or to withstand the temptation of yielding his will to every end of apparently popular doctrine. It may not be feasible to undo what has been done—the complex and silted-up administrations may involve the country in difficulties from which the strongest and wisest may not be able to extricate it. Nevertheless, the policy pursued should be condemned and not condoned.

"The future may be helped and safeguarded even if the past be remediless, while so far as the injurious consequences of past courses can be averted or mitigated, something may be hoped from those not primarily responsible for them.

"From the official authors and justifiers nothing but persistence can reasonably be expected and, should McKinleyism prevail in the pending election, who should say—in view of the administration's proved capacity for reversing itself—that we shall not soon find ourselves in the toils of a Chinese problem even more costly, menacing and insoluble than the Philippine problem itself. Surely every argument urged in defense of our seizure of the Philippines can be used a second time with even greater force to justify our appropriation of a slice of China.

Arraigns the President.

"To support the conclusion to which I have come it is only necessary to consider what McKinleyism is and what is the necessary effect of indorsing it—what it will mean if the American people now solemnly record themselves as approving the McKinley administration and all its works.

"1. It will mean that the American people sanction a syndicated presidency—a presidency got for the asking by pandering to the money of a combination of capitalists intent upon securing national legislation in aid of their particular purposes.

"2. It will mean that the American people approve the legislation thus obtained and justify such legislation as the Dingley tariff bill, with all its iniquities taxing consumers and wage earners—that is, the great mass of the people—in consideration of accumulated wealth.

"3. It will mean that the American people uphold the policy of greed and contempt for alien peoples whose retributive consequences are seen in recent events in China; approve of our joining the ranks of international land grabbers and sanction the rapacity as well as folly by which, while pretending to buy, we in fact forcibly expelled Spain from her Philippine possessions and without excuse either in the demands of national honor or in considerations of the national interest have saddled ourselves with the gravest responsibilities for some 8,000,000 or 10,000,000 of the savage or at best half-civilized brown people of the tropics.

"4. It will mean that the American people approve the tactless and brutal policy pursued since the Philippine acquisition was made, whereby what was pressed upon the country as a treaty of peace was, in fact, the signal for another more costly, bloody and prolonged war.

"5. It will mean that the American people approve the extraordinarily fatuous policy or impolicy, or no policy at all, by which the Philippine archipelago, many thousands of miles away from our shores, becomes an integral part of the United States, while Cuba, the cause and inspiration of the war, lying right at our door, the key to the Gulf of Mexico and absolutely essential to our defense against foreign attack, is declared alien territory and entitled to all the rights of an independent sovereignty.

"6. It will mean that the American people approve as an exhibition of its functions by the national legislature which leaves millions of human beings outside the pale of any recognized code of law and signifies for our new possessions for an indefinite period militarism of the most unadulterated sort.

"7. It will mean that the American people, having in their president the sole representative of the nation as a whole, approve of a national executive who fails to uphold the dignity and the independence of his great office, who exercises his functions in subservience both to other branches of the government and to the clamor of special pecuniary interests, who, condemning the acquisition of territory by force as 'criminal aggression,' wrests her possessing from a foreign state by the menace of the continued war; who finds the 'plain duty' of the government to be one thing to-day and exactly the opposite thing to-morrow, and whose disregard of the elementary principles of civil service reform is a scandal as notorious as it is indefensible.

"8. It will mean that the American people indorse the policy by which the United States of America sets up in business as an Asiatic power and welcome the large standing armies, the increased naval forces, the new administrative agencies, the enlarged and more costly diplomatic service, the onerous taxes, the international complications and the entangling alliances which, and all of which, are the inevitable incidents and consequences of the oriental role to which McKinleyism has undertaken to bedeck us.

"9. It will mean that the American people either do not see, or, seeing, approve, the great and growing if not already overwhelming influence of money in our politics. Our government was not conceived or framed as a money-making machine even for the profit of all the governed, much less for the profit of particular classes or portions of the governed. Its vital principle and its crowning merit are that it stands for equal opportunities to all—that by the maintenance of order and the administration of justice it is designed to give every man a free hand in the struggle for the prizes of life. This theory of the true functions of government McKinleyism directly antagonizes. By protective tariffs, by the most intimate relations between the United States treasury and the general money market, by subsidies to particular industries, by an aggressive colonial policy and in other ways it practically holds out the government as an engine for use in the acquisition of private wealth.

"The natural, the inevitable result is that the control of the country hotly pursues the control of the government as the source of more money—that the flag figures as a sort of commercial asset, replete with possibilities of pecuniary profit for its fortunate custodians. That under the influence of McKinleyism such is the unmistakable trend of things in this country at the present day, giving to the best devised policy of all times somewhat the aspect of a stock jobbing democracy, is only too apparent. Should McKinleyism come again to prevail, for example, it will not be because it is not cordially distrusted and disliked by the great body of American electors. It will be because of the influence of the purse and of the felicitous application of an enormous campaign fund—because of an 'investment scare' which, if in some measure genuine, will be in much greater measure purposely worked up for election ends. To excite the alarm of voters for their immediate pecuniary interests is easy; to evoke patriotism, courage and unselfishness sufficient to effect serious political changes and indispensable to dislodge a party which, comparatively short intervals excepted, has been intrenching itself in the government for nearly 40 years, is infinitely more difficult.

Lesser of Two Evils Shown.

"If the success of the republican party next November means all that I have stated—and how can it mean anything less?—but one conclusion seems possible. The calamitous possibilities said to inhere in democratic success in the enacting election, exaggerated as they are by partisan zeal and subsidized ingenuity, are outweighed by certainties of mischief involved in four years more of McKinleyism. Stock exchange panics, often made to order, generally irrational and now freely predicted by those who know how to make their predictions good, are sure to profit by whatever caprices the market may indulge in, are as dust in the balance compared with the enduring evils to result from the reform national policies which the American people are now desired to impress with the seal of their favor and to thus perpetuate indefinitely.

"The first—if not the republican party in the coming election lies the only hope of the reversal of those policies and of the beginning of a return to more wholesome conditions. Such a defeat would be all the more significant and emphatic because obviously due to the cooperation of citizens in many things quite at odds with the democratic party and its leading men. And it is a defeat that should come now and not later, because not to reject McKinleyism at once tends to fasten it permanently upon the vitals of the country. For myself, therefore, I find it tolerably clear that a citizen's duty in connection with the coming presidential election not only permits but requires him to desire the success of the democratic party. Yours very truly.

"RICHARD OLNEY."

The Champion Trimmer.

William McKinley has changed oftener than anything or anybody, not even excepting the weather. He changed on the money question. He changed on the plain duty question. He changed on the "who will haul down the flag" question. He changed on the forcible annexation question. He has flopped and floundered like an eel out of water. He has shifted and evaded and sidestepped like a champion pugilist who depends more on ability to dodge than ability to hit. He has advocated both sides of every question of public importance.—Omaha World-Herald.

Scare Not Yet Effective.

Campaign plans of Senator Hanna's "get-there" committee have been crippled to some extent, thus early by the apathy of those who are expected to contribute the necessary sinews of war. The responses to the party appeal have aggregated thus far scarcely 30 per cent, of the sum raised in 1896 by September 1 to defeat Bryan. Mr. Hanna will have to devise some new and effective form of scare in time for the later October round-up of reluctant contributors.—Philadelphia Record.

One Effect of Imperialism.

The Porto Ricans received Gen. Miles' army with open arms. Two years later they refuse to celebrate the anniversary, and a government official finds them unfriendly to the United States. This most unnecessary and deplorable result is wholly the result of an administration which has a new imperialistic policy to enforce.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

ABOUT MISS QUITO.

Government Issues Bulletin Regarding Her Habits.

New Jersey Branch of Family Not a Circumstance to Her Alaska Sisters—Have Taken to Traveling on Trains to Distant Points.

The department of agriculture is about to issue a bulletin prepared by Entomologist L. O. Howard, on the mosquitoes of the United States. It discusses their structure and biology and indicates the difference in all stages of existence between the kinds of mosquitoes that transmit malaria and those that do not, and also discusses the subject of remedies. Among other things the bulletin says that since the opening up of the gold fields in Alaska and the great influx of miners and traders, knowledge of the abundance and ferocity of the Alaskan mosquitoes has become widespread and government surveying parties in starting for Alaska for their summer's work are in the habit of consulting the department for mosquito bite remedies. Those who were in Alaska the preceding year always state that they never experienced or even imagined anything in the mosquito line quite equal to those found in our northern territory. Mentioning the reputation of New Jersey in connection with mosquitoes, the bulletin says there is a constant carriage inland from the marshy coast of very many mosquitoes, the railway trains seeming to be the most important mode of conveyance. Many of the cars contain mosquitoes by the hundreds. In this way even mountain resorts will get their supply of lowland mosquitoes, and with the improvement of railway service and the increase in the number of through cars the danger is constantly increasing. The source of supply to distant points where mosquitos are ordinarly rare is thus kept up.

About 250 species of mosquitoes are known, of which only about 30 have been found in the United States. The report says that of the remedies in use in houses the burning of pyrethrum powder and the catching of mosquitoes on the walls in kerosene cups are probably the best; next to a thorough screening and mosquito bars about the bed. The remedies for bites mentioned are glycerin, a lump of indigo and household ammonia.

TWINS LIVE AND DIE ALIKE.

The Singular Case of Claudie and Clyde Wilson in Wood County, O.

One of the most singular cases of similarity in life and death ever known to physicians of that section is shown in Claudie and Clyde Wilson, twins, whose funeral was held at Rudolph, Wood county, O. The children, a boy and a girl, were born four months ago to Mr. and Mrs. Archie Wilson. They looked so much alike that only their mother could tell them apart. They were similar in their actions, their likes, their dislikes, their troubles and their joys.

About two weeks ago the girl fell from her mother's arms and struck on her face on the floor. She cried bitterly, and the boy, too, seemed to have been hurt and he cried as hard and as long as did his sister. A large red lump appeared on the girl's right temple, and last Friday the little one fell sick. The doctor said it was brain trouble and held out no hope for the child's recovery. The boy fell sick from the same brain trouble and died within a few hours of his sister in the same manner.

STATE NEWS ITEMS.

Sub-Committee Selected to Draft an Election Bill to Be Reported Next Monday.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 10.—Both houses of the legislature held only brief sessions Saturday and adjourned till Monday. The house session was unimportant and the only important action by the senate was its refusal to adopt Senator Jones' resolution instructing the committee on elections as to what points should be considered in its work on the proposed new election law. This resolution was referred to the committee. Senator Johnson's resolution to adjourn sine die September 29 was reached on the calendar, but was postponed.

Congressman June Gayle spent the day here in conference with Speaker South Trimble trying to straighten out the controversy between Trimble and Moody in regard to the title to the democratic emblem in the congressional race which both are claiming. Up to Saturday night the row was no nearer settlement than heretofore.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 11.—Representative W. H. Lilly, republican, of Estill county, offered a bill at the session of the house of representatives Monday morning. It provides for the recognition of the democratic, republican, populist and prohibition parties in the selection of election commissioners and officers. The senate was in session but a few minutes. Senator Puryear sent up a resolution expressing Kentucky's sympathy for Galveston and the other stricken cities and towns of Texas, and it was unanimously adopted.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 12.—The session of the senate Tuesday was devoted nearly altogether to memorial exercises in memory of the late Senator Hill, of Newport, and Bell, of Morganfield. Among those who paid tributes of respect to them were Senators, Dyer, of Newport; Watkins, of Union county; Thomas, of Bourbon; Puryear, of Taylor, and Utley, of Lyon.

In the house Mr. Kelday, of Louisville, introduced a concurrent resolution that both houses adjourn sine die September 29. A resolution by Mr. Booker, of Shelby, sympathizing with the Texas tornado sufferers, was adopted. Mr. Strong, of Jefferson county, introduced an election bill which provides that legislative contest committees shall be selected in the same manner as jurors are.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 13.—The house committee on elections is badly split and majority and minority reports will be returned to the house and the fight made on the floor in open session. The democratic majority is in favor of clothing the county election boards with judicial functions to determine contests, with the right of appeal to the courts of the state. Representative Orr leads the opposition to this idea. The committee decided unanimously in favor of placing a circle instead of a square under the device in which the voter is to stamp.

Hon. John B. Thompson, democratic leader of Harrodsburg, offered an election bill before the special committee of the state senate Wednesday morning. It provides for strictly non-partisan election boards.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 15.—The special committee on election in the state senate Friday morning selected a sub-committee to draft an election bill, to be presented in that body on Monday next. The members of the sub-committee are Senators Tolin, of Boone; Utley and Lyon, and Cox of Mason. The special committee of elections in the house will Saturday receive the report of the sub-committee selected to draft an election bill, and it will be presented to the house on Monday or Tuesday. The conservatives will fight the bill and claim strength sufficient to defeat it. The regular sessions Friday were uninteresting.

Bought Kentucky Horses.

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 15.—On a telegraphic order from Emil Boaz, of San Francisco, Garret D. Wilson, of this city, has purchased for the use of Count Waldersee, of Germany, as commander of the allied forces in China, two very fine Kentucky horses. The animals are known as "walk, trot and canter horses," having a great deal of style and very graceful in action. They cost $500 each, one being reared here and the other at Bowling Green. They will be started on the journey to China Monday.

The Population of Lexington.

Washington, Sept. 12.—The population of the city of Lexington, Ky., as officially announced Tuesday is: 1900, 26,369; 1890, 21,567. These figures show, for the city as a whole, an increase in population of 4,802, or 22.27 per cent. from 1890 to 1900.

Large Tobacco Crop.

Paris, Ky., Sept. 14.—The tobacco crop now being cut and housed is said by well-posted buyers to be the largest ever raised in this county. They say that the barns in the county will not afford half enough room for storing the crop.

Danville, Ky., Sept. 15.—Frank Montgomery, charged with grand larceny, was sentenced to the penitentiary for two years. John Harris, for malicious wounding, was given one year.

HOWARD JURY.

Men Selected to Try the Goebel Suspect—Ten Are Democrats and Two Republicans.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 14.—James Howard's case was called for trial Thursday morning. Bowman Gaines, whom the prosecution has designated as one of its chief witnesses, did not answer. He is sick, and a physician was sent to examine him, to ascertain when he will be able to attend.

At 10:30 the commonwealth announced that it was ready for trial, and Howard was brought into court. The defense announced that it also was ready.

Little, for the defense, filed a special demurrer to the indictment, but it was not passed on by the court at that time. All of the witnesses were then sworn and put upon their own recognizance to appear Friday.

The list of witnesses for the defense includes Green Golden, Wharton Golden, E. P. White, A. V. Hite, Robert Triplett, W. P. Hansford, William Birkle, J. F. Marcum, T. M. Pence, A. B. Eversole, James Young, W. W. Anderson, James Elbert, J. T. Robinson, "Dick" Fewell, jr., and D. F. Cundiff.

Howard was formally arraigned, Clerk Ford reading the indictment to him, to which the defendant answered: "I am not guilty," and a plea of not guilty was entered for him. The special demurrer of the defense to the indictment was overruled.

Ben Utterback, business man, democrat, was accepted as a juror, subject to peremptory challenge. Israel Allison and Wash Sudduth were excused. Rad Hawkins and James C. McDonald, farmers, democrats, were accepted. James Jones was excused. Wash Gratcher, Mason Lucas, Nick Moore and Colvin Hayden, farmers, democrats, were accepted. Robert Choate and Walter Bryan were excused. William Graham, who served on the grand jury which indicted Howard, was also excused.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 15.—The James Howard murder case was resumed Friday morning, and the selection of the jury was completed. It is as follows:

Rod Hawkins, farmer (D.); A. Duvall, country merchant (D.); Sam Lewis, farmer, (D.); William Baker, carpenter (D.); Marine Webster, farmer (D.); J. S. Wilson, farmer (D.); Wash Crutcher, farmer (D.); Daniel Cogswell, farmer (D.); Jerry Tracy, farmer (D.); Alex. Bacon, farmer (R.); Robert Magruder, farmer (D.); Frank Bacon, farmer (R.).

In his opening statement Attorney Williams, of the prosecution, claimed that Howard, while on his way to Frankfort, told various parties that Goebel was to be killed and that Taylor would pardon the murderer. He said he was going to Frankfort to take a hand in the prosecution himself. He traced Howard as far as the executive office the morning of the assassination, and said the murder of Goebel was fashioned after the assassination of Tom Baker in Clay county, which included the Baker-Howard-White feud.

Stopper Flew Out.

Taylorsville, Ky., Sept. 14.—Mrs. James Canady made preparations to wash some clothing, and for a moment left the room. Her infant child crawled over to the washing machine, and while there the heat caused the stopper to fly out of the drainage hole. The boiling water gushed over the child's head and body. The child was scalded so badly that its head cracked open and its brains came out.

Veteran Riverman Dead.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 14.—Capt. W. P. Dugan, the veteran ante-bellum steamboatman, died Thursday afternoon. It was announced Wednesday night that he was dead, his vitality having sunk so low that it could not be detected. Toward morning, just as preparations were being made to embalm him, he rallied, but it was only for a short time.

Fever in the Mountains.

London, Ky., Sept. 13.—Scarlet fever is raging in the mountains. Two cases are reported here, and a dozen country schools are closed in Bell county on account of the disease. The Pineville school closed Monday. There were 25 cases and six deaths in Bell county, and the disease is spreading.

Died in the Philippines.

Paris, Ky., Sept. 14.—Information has been received here by relatives announcing the death in the Philippines of James Manning, of this city, a private in Company B, 30th regiment, of dysentery. Manning enlisted at Lexington. He was a well-known city employe.

His Sister Killed.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 15.—While looking over the Galveston death list Charles E. Schumacher found the name of his sister, Mrs. W. D. Winscontte. He has not heard from his father, mother, another sister and two brothers who were living in the city.

Fire at the Louisville Gas Plant.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 15.—The meter house and coke crusher of the Louisville Gas Co. caught fire from an overturned soldering pot Friday morning and burned with $15,000 loss.

The Horseless Nightmare.

"Oh," she said, "I had such a terrible dream last night. It seemed that I had suddenly been deprived somehow of the power to move. All my limbs were paralyzed, and I lay right in the path of an automobile that I could see coming toward me at a terrific rate of speed, with the lamps at the sides blazing like the two eyes of some terrible monster. Nearer and nearer it came, and I, in fearful agony, tried to drag myself out of the way, but was unable to move. I tried to cry out, so that the man who was running the automobile might either stop or turn aside and avoid running over me, but I could not make a sound. On, on it came, as if imbued with life and in a fury of frenzy. I had just given up myself for lost when—"

"Yes," he interrupted, "then you woke up. But that isn't the important part of it. By your experience we know that the horseless nightmare has arrived."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Depreciation of Money.

In 1873 a silver dollar was worth one dollar and six-tenths in gold. In 1878, eighty-nine cents; in 1883, eighty-five cents; in 1888, seventy-two cents; in 1893, sixty cents, and in 1896 forty-five cents. Money may depreciate, but there is one standard stomach remedy, which has not changed in half a century, and that is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It always has been the one unsurpassed remedy for indigestion, dyspepsia, liver or kidney troubles.

Not a General's Egg.

The freshness of eggs is carefully graded in this country, but our distinctions are surpassed in delicacy by those formerly in vogue among the British residents in India.

A distinguished general once happened to stop in Calcutta. At breakfast the great man was served with boiled eggs. He took one, broke the shell, and dropped it with an air of disgust.

"Here!" he cried to his servant, "what do you mean by giving me a bad egg?"

The man hurried to his master, and examined the egg with the utmost seriousness.

"I entreat your forgiveness," said he; "but it's all a mistake. The stupid waiter has gone and brought you an aid de camp's egg by mistake."—Stray Stories.

A Child's Life Saved.

The following letter was received from Mr. John T. Moore, of 151 Vance Street, Memphis, Tenn.: "Last July my little son was terribly burned on his chest, arms and legs by boiling hot soup, but fortunately your Lotion was at hand and was promptly applied, which afforded almost instant relief, and the burned surface rapidly healed, leaving no scars." Palmer's Lotion relieves Burns instantly. Puffs under the eyes; red nose; pimple-blotched, greasy face don't mean hard drinking always as much as it shows that there is BAD IN THE BLOOD. It is the drinking and over-eating overloads the stomach, but failure to assist nature in regularly disposing of the partially digested lumps of food that are dumped into the bowels and allowed to rot there, is what causes all the trouble. CASCARETS will help nature help you, and will keep the system from filling with poisons, will clean out the sores that tell of the system's rottenness. Bloated by bile the figure becomes unshapely, the breath foul, eyes and skin yellow; in fact the whole body kind of fills up with filth. Every time you neglect to help nature you lay the foundation for just such troubles. CASCARETS will carry the poisons out of the system and will regulate you naturally and easily and without gripe or pain. TEETHINA was first used by Dr. Charles J. Moffett, a graduate of Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, Pa., in his extensive and successful treatment of children in Georgia in overcoming the troubles incident to teething and the hot summers.

TEETHINA (Teething Powders) counteracts the effect of hot weather and keeps the digestive organs in a healthy condition, and has saved the lives of thousands of all ages in the doctor's native state, where physicians prescribe and all mothers give it, and it is criminal in mothers of our section to allow their babes and little children to suffer and perhaps die when relief can be so easily obtained by giving TEETHINA. POLITICAL.

At the recent election in Vermont the Democrats gained 15 per cent. while the Republicans lost 10 per cent.

In 1896 Palmer and Buckner received only one single, solitary vote in Colorado. That was cast by P. Augustus Wilting, who will vote this year for Bryan.

J. W. Wolley, the Prohibition nominee for President, will make several speeches in Kentucky and Indiana early in October, traveling by special train.

Hon. George King, of Johnstown, Pa., one of the founders of the Republican party, who is now 90 years old, announces that for the first time he will vote the Democratic ticket.

Samuel A. Kingman, of Topeka, Kan., for ten years Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Kansas, a lifelong Republican and a pioneer of the State, announces his determination to support W. J. Bryan and the entire Democratic ticket.

F. C. Garrity, a salesman in the large dry goods house of Lord & Taylor, New York, tells a Kentucky friend that four years ago there was not a single Bryan man in that great house. There are 1,000 votes, and he says that Bryan will get over 500 of them this year.

Chairman Martin, of the Indiana Democratic State Committee, says he is confident that the Democrats will carry the State by a large majority. He claims that the laboring, farming and independent vote is for Bryan, and also that the gold Democrats will support the ticket.

Captain Garrett Howard, of Pineville, a life-long Republican, has declared for Bryan and Beckham and the reason for his change, he says is the letters he has received from his two sons, who are fighting in the Philippines. They have urged him to do all he can against the continuance of the unholy war.

Richard Croker, of New York, made the following predictions the other day: "They can't beat Bryan if they spend from the trusts ten million dollars. They can't buy this election. I feel it in my bones that it will be a sweep for Bryan. It will not be close. Bryan will carry New York, Maryland, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and other western states. He will get more electoral votes than Cleveland got in '92. The workingmen are not fools. They know that these gigantic trusts will soon root them out of everything comfortable in life. Their only hope is in Bryan, and I know that they are for him all over the Union. He is an honest man and a great man and the people believe in him and are as sure to elect him as the day of election comes."

Crop and Stock.

In Woodford county J. Cohen sold to W. T. McConnell 100 stock ewes at $3.50.

W. W. Goddard, of Mercer county, will clear $500 on a five-acre watermelon patch.

Van Nelson, of Woodford county, sold to J. C. Hardin, of Franklin, Ind., 104 heavy feeding cattle at 4¼ cents per pound.

In Boyle county M. J. Farris bought of Sam'l Cecil, ten head of two-year-old mules, nine of them mares, at $75 per head.

W. K. Cardwell, of Mercer county, sold to a Cincinnati firm 51 head of cattle, weight 1,000 pounds, for delivery October 10th, at $4.25 per cwt.

In Fayette county James McConathy bought from Redd brothers for Laurence Gentry one hundred ewes at $4.25 per head and three bucks for $30.

In Mercer county W. C. Carpenter bought of Morgan Arnold 16 black Poll-Angus yearling cattle, averaging about 700 pounds, at $4.50 per cwt for October delivery.

Mr. B. M. Arnett, of Jessamine county, sold fourteen acres of corn in the field at $1.65 a shock, and two and one-half acres at $1.10 per shock. At these rates it is estimated that it brought over $2 per barrel.

Louis Pfaelzer, of Chicago, the Western agent of Schwartzchild, Sulzberger & Co., Saturday bought of C. Alexander, Sr., of this city, 225 head of extra fine export cattle at the highest price paid any one this year. The cattle will be delivered in November and will be shipped from New York, Nov. 24th, in two fast freight vessels, as the cattle are especially for the Christmas market in London. This fine herd was bought and cared for personally by C. Alexander, jr., who has received many compliments for his fine judgment in handling and producing such a superior and select lot of big cattle. Mr. Pfaelzer also purchased of Thos. Henry Clay, of this county, 327 head of excellent [illegible] which will be delivered and shipped at the same time as the Alexander stock.

The above sales aggregating 852 head, are no doubt the finest large herds of cattle in the world to-day and Bourbon thus achieves an enviable world-wide reputation for big cattle, the product of the broad blue grass farms of the Alexanders and the Clays.—Kentuckian Citizen.

State News.

Two thousand miners of Laurel county are idle, awaiting a settlement of the wage scale.

Charley Bains, the fifteen-year old son of Mr and Mrs. James Bains, of Paducah, died of lock jaw, caused by an injured arm.

The Merrit Pants Factory at Mayfield has been in operation just thirteen months, and thirteen of the girl employes have married during that time.

In the Bullitt Circuit Court a jury awarded J. M. Carothers damages in the sum of $15,000 against the Louisville and Nashville railroad for the death of Mrs. Carothers in the Gap-in-Knob wreck last Christmas.

The tobacco worms have played havoc with some fine crops of tobacco in the past two weeks. One of the best crops in the county was on the Fleming creek farm of C. D. Armstrong, and it looks as if damaged 50 per cent, while there are others just as bad.—Flemingsburg Times Democrat.

Farmers are very busy and hands are very scarce. Any kind of hand is getting $1 per day and board now, and some $1.25 and $1.50. The tobacco is very heavy and a great deal of it damaged by too much rain; also by worms, which have been worse than usual this year.—Georgetown Times.

J. L. McDonald tells us that there is a boom in land in Mercer county. One man bought 150 acres two years ago, and sold it recently at $1,500 profit, after having raised two crops. Another party bought 160 acres on the 15th of last month and sold the land Monday at a profit of $1,600.—Cynthiana Democrat.

At Hopkinsville, L. C. Dewberry has filled suit jointly against the town of Gracey and Howard Dillard, the Town Marshal, for $2,000, alleging that one night in January last he was locked up in the town calaboose, without fire, and that his clothes, being wet, froze upon him, causing a long spell of sickness. Plaintiff also asks $1,000 damages from Officer Dillard's sureties.

Miss Varina Young, the fourteen-year-old daughter of the Rev. O. J. Young, of Bethel, Madison county, was painfully wounded in the leg by the accidental discharge of a rifle in the hands of a playmate. Another playmate was also slightly wounded. After being shot, the plucky girl called for a knife and extracted the bullet with her own hand before the physician arrived.

Oscar Downard, who was sent to the penitentiary for life, for the murder of City Marshal Voglesong, of Falmouth, while a Democratic Congressional convention was in session in that city nine years ago, has been released on parole. The killing was done under the cover of darkness, just as the marshal was entering his yard gate within a few feet of the front door of his little home.

The farmers are having a hard time saving their tobacco crop. It seems that it is bound to injure. It is burning badly in the patch whether on the stick or still on the stalk, and in the barns also. It is suggested that it would be a good plan to haul water and give the barn floors a good soaking in the evening, then close the doors and shutters for the night. If that isn't done there is danger that the tobacco will dry up instead of curing up. This week will measurably see the tobacco in the barn. The indications now are that it will be a big, mean crop.—Owingsville Outlook.

A swindle is reported from various parts of the country of which farmers will do well to beware. The agents offer a churn which they claim will largely increase the yield of butter from any given quantity of milk and they offer to prove this assertion. Chemicals, it appears, are slipped into the milk and cream when the purchaser's back is turned and the butter comes more quickly and in greater volume than it usually does on the premises invaded. Of course the resultant mass is not pure butter, but that agent collects his money and departs before the fraud is discovered.—Exchange.

A certain traveling salesman from the Bluegrass country was wending his way over the rocky roads of the southern part of the county to reach the store of a friendly merchant before night overtook him. As he was passing a log house near the roadside he heard a terrific noise, screams and yells, within, and rushing into the humble domicile, discovered a man whipping his wife. He seized the burly mountaineer and entreated him to desist, when the woman quickly turned to one side and grabbed a large earthern bowl of sour butter milk and dashed the entire lot all over the knight of the grip, who took to the creek near by as fast as his legs could carry him, with the faithful watchdog swinging to his coat-tail. The next time he says, that he runs up on a man and wife in a scrap he will let them fight it out.

F. C. Greene, who was defeated for the nomination for county judge in the recent Owen county primary election, gives the other defeated candidates this good advice in his paper, the Owen News:

"The many defeated candidates have spent much of their time the past week in squads around the court house trying to solve the problem as to how their defeat was accomplished. Brace up boys and dry up. The only solution is we didn't get enough votes. Why not say as did the confederate soldier as he started home from Appomattox in '64. "I am going home, kiss my wife and raise a crop and if the d—n Yankees fool with me, we'll whip 'em agin."

Endured Death's Agonies.

Only a roaring fire enabled J. M. Garretson, of San Antonio, Tex., to lie down when attacked by Asthma from which he suffered for years. He writes his misery was often so great that it seemed he endured the agonies of death; but Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption wholly cured him. This marvelous medicine is the only known cure for Asthma as well as Consumption, Coughs and Colds, and all Throat, Chest and Lung troubles. Price 50c and $1. Guaranteed. [Pendletonian.]

The citizens of near Pribble's Cross Roads, this county, are considerably excited over the causes which led to the sudden death of Mrs. W. B. Tomlin, in that vicinity last Friday morning. Mrs. Tomlin was the daughter of John H. Dunn and the wife of a well-to-do farmer. On Tuesday night last, between 9 and 10 o'clock, in the absence of her husband, a party of ruffians, called at her home and by acts of lawlessness and rowdyism, such as rocking the house and kicking on the door, so frightened Mrs. Tomlin, as to bring on a severe case of nervous prostration and heart trouble, which finally resulted in her death about 5 a. m. Friday. The same outlaws after leaving the Tomlin house took the ax from the yard and cut down three small hickory trees, then passed on to the home of Geo. Norris, where they again indulged in the pleasant pastime of rocking his house. Mr. N. went to look for his gun but found that he had no ammunition and when he returned the miscreants were gone. Just what their motive was is difficult to determine. There is a strong clue as to the guilty parties, and every possible effort will be made to apprehend them and bring them to justice. Mr. Tomlin, the husband of the deceased woman, was in town yesterday to consult the officials, and it is highly probable that a detective will be put on the case. Mrs. Tomlin, the woman whose life was thus sacrificed, was 34 years of age. She leaves a husband and five children, the oldest being 13 years of age.

The Bravery of Woman.

Was gradually shown by Mrs. John Dowling, of Butler, Pa., in a three years' struggle with a malignant stomach trouble that caused distressing attacks of nausea indigestion. All remedies failed to relieve her until she tried Electric Bitters. After taking it two months she wrote: "I am now wholly cured and can eat anything. It is truly a grand tonic for the whole system as I gained in weight and feel much stronger since using it." It aids digestion, cures dyspepsia, improves appetite, gives new life. Only 50c. Guaranteed. at McKim's, Burlington, Oelsner's, Florence, Crouch's, Union.

"The average girl of Owenton, as seen through the smoked glasses of the Prowler, is of few ideas and full of nonsense. She appeareth on the street clad in much fine raiment and hunteth up a beau at whose expense she drinketh soda water until the setting of the sun. She cheweth her gum in the morning, and when the evening approacheth, lo, she is still chewing. She getteth the notion into her head that she can sing, and warbleth until her father or brother becomes a habitual drinker, and the neighbors get out an injunction. She goeth forth to a party gowned in a dress that is too short at the top and too long at the bottom and giggleth until the night waxeth old. She lieth abed in the morning until the eleventh hour, while her mother humps around and doeth the work. She sigheth for a husband with a long mustache and plenty of money but finally marryeth some fellow who smoketh cigarettes and holdeth up two fingers to the barber whenever he gets shaved."

Last Saturday night a serious shooting occurred at Dry Ridge, Grant county. The injured are Charley Brown, shot in the mouth, Joe Stanley shot in the body, and James Henry, shot in the shoulder. It was the regular meeting of the Democratic club and the town was full of people. Brown, Stanley and Henry were all Democrats and members of the club, and had gone from the meeting into the saloon of Fred Hutchinson. Charley Winn, a Republican, was in the saloon. An old grudge of long standing existed between Brown and Stanley on the one side and Winn on the other. Just how the trouble started no one seems to know, but a quarrel arose which continued for several minutes, when Hutchinson ordered them from the saloon. In a minute a fusillade of shots came, and Brown and Stanley dropped to the ground wounded. A stray bullet struck Henry, who had not participated in the quarrel at all. Winn mounted his horse and sped away into the darkness of the night. Brown is a son of J. P. Brown, about 30 years old and married. His family is one of the best in the county and wealthy. Stanley, also prominent, about 28 years old and single. He and Brown are cousins. Winn is an orphan boy about the same age as Stanley, and has always been considered to be an excellent young man.

Later.—Stanley is dead. Winn surrendered and was allowed bond in the sum of $1,000

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1900. NO. 49

THE betting was in favor of Col. Berry. The friends of the other candidates were afraid to take much of the money offered on him as a winner.

D. LINN GOOCH won out in the Congressional campaign, leaving Col. Berry 500 and Rhinock, 274 votes behind. The vote will be counted at Walton next Saturday,

THESE close finishes in political contests are not at all pleasant. In a vote of 15,000 the winning man's plurality ought to be so pronounced as to leave no room for quibbling.

THE pace set by the candidates in the late Congressional campaign will make it hard on the purses of the county candidates in their approaching canvass.

President McKinley suggests there may be "tolerably" good trusts. Not so! Not unless there are also tolerably good eggs—which everybody knows is not the case.

ON and after the first of next month the postoffice at Utzinger will be known as Idlewild. Utzinger is a name not easily mistaken, and for that reason is a very appropriate name for a p. o.

IN both Michigan and Maryland, the peach crop has been enormous, but in neither state have the growers reaped the benefit, as the canning trust, which buys three-fourths of the output, refused to pay more than a bare starvation price for the fruit.

SENATOR HANNA declared in one of his speeches a few days ago that there are no trusts, and before he concluded his speech he charged that a certain prominent Democrat belonged to the cotton trust. To avoid contradiction the Senator would better write his speeches and have them revised before he delivers them.

British scientists say that the bubonic plague has undoubtedly been brought to the United States from one or more of the six points of infection with which it is now in regular communication but that it will lie dormant until next summer, when it will break out with virulence. It is to be hoped that the scientists are wrong.

Col. Roosevelt has once more shown his surprising versatility. At the very time that he was cavorting over Montana he was also as shown by the dates dictating his three column letter of acceptance at Oyster Bay. Possibly he used a long distance telephone and possibly he turned over the work to a syndicate selected by Mark Hanna.

SOME are censuring J. M. Lassing as solely responsible for the order under which the primary election was held Saturday, it being objectionable to them. Now the fact is Mr. Lassing did not make that order, it was made by the chairman of the several county committees in the Congressional District. He is only chairman of that committee. Give every man his dues.

Many of our Republican exchanges are using all the plate matter sent out by the state committee, regardless as to whether it is adapted in its entirety to their particular constituencies or not. Plate matter should be edited with as much discrimination as any other matter which goes into a paper.—Republican Ex.

The above is an admission that to hold Republicans in line they have to be taught differently in different localities—that unchangable principles will not do to depend on.

No list of newspaper curiosities would be complete that did not include the Kin-Pau of Pekin. Like most things in the celestial kingdom, it is easily first point of antiquity, for it has been published continuously for over 1,000 years. It began as a monthly, became a weekly in 1361, and since the beginning of the century has been a daily. It is now up-to-date, publishing three editions a day and, to safe guard the purchaser from wilys that are not altogether unknown to newsboys, each edition is printed on different colored apper, the first yellow, second white and last gray.

IF anti-election talk can be depended on the Gooch and Rhinock votes were larger and the Berry vote smaller, in this county last Saturday than anticipated by their respective managers.

THE RECORDER is not an "I told you so," and frankly admits that had it attempted, last week, to name the nominee of Saturday's primary it would have failed. There were many surprises in different directions in Saturday's voting,

OF the new editor of the Carrollton Republican the Carrollton News says:

Every fair-minded man must accede to every man "honesty of purpose." We are satisfied Mr. Masterson has not been in accord with the Democratic platform since it was framed in 1896. Soon after his return from the Consulship at Aden, Arabia, he announced himself as against numerous planks in the Democratic platform, and the editor of the News was surprised last fall when he accepted a position on the News to write Democratic editorials, but he advised us then that he would support Mr. Bryan, and before the county convention here a year ago last June he was a strong supporter of Mr. Goebel for the Democratic nomination for Governor, and after his nomination Mr. Masterson wrote some of the strongest endorsements of Goebel and the ticket that appeared in any paper in the district.

In his salutatory in the Republican last week he says: "We (meaning Mr. Masterson) are opposed to Goebelized Democracy in the State of Kentucky; we cannot endorse the Louisville convention. * * * We are opposed to the Goebel law.

This is what Mr. Masterson wrote of Mr. Goebel and the election law in October of last year.

"When we hear the Republicans talk so frantically of the Goebel Election Law we are reminded of that old saw,

"They don't need any medicine now; they are all well and upright, they are the high moral party that never thought of such a thing as putting restraints upon an open ballot and a fair count. What short memories parties, as well as individuals, have. They don't seem to remember anything about the odious Force Bill—a bill intended to disfranchise the voters of the South, that was so partisan and unfair that even some of their own party could not stomach it; they seem to have completely forgotten their rascality in that Returning Board Commission, that robbed Samuel J. Tilden of the Presidency and that turned that office over to Rutherford B. Hayes. And yet in view of their past record they go about complaining of the evident unfairness of our State election bill.

GOLDEN RULE JONES, of Toledo, Ohio, has declared for Bryan and Stevenson, which causes some uneasiness among Republican leaders in that State. It is believed by both parties that he will carry a strong vote with him into the Democratic fold.

A teaspoonful of salt in a glass of water, taken before breakfast, is said by people who have tried it to be a sure cure for hay fever. The remedy was suggested by a Cuban doctor who had been a sufferer for many years. With faith in its efficacy it was given a trial. At the end of a week all traces of hay fever had disappeared. The receipt was passed on to friends similarly afflicted and in no case has it failed. According to the physician recommending it, there is not sufficient salt in the system to kill the poisonous germs that exist wherever hay fever claims a victim, and when enough has been absorbed the sufferer is cured.—Dover News.

POLITICAL.

Just on the threshold of another presidential campaign, it will be pointedly interesting to exhume some of the musty "principles" of the grand old party, under whose auspices through the influence of the sainted Abraham Lincoln, the Chronicle was founded in 1861, within a month after Lincoln's arrival in Washington. It remains to be tested whether intelligent citizens who have formed convictions (as McKinley declared his views to be) can follow calmly and without a blush of shame this record of inconsistency, viz:

1888.

The Republican party is in favor of the use of both gold and silver as money.—From Chicago Republican National Platform.

I have always been in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of the silver product of the United States, and have so voted on at least two occasions during the time I have been in public life.....With me political and economic questions are a conviction.—From William McKinley's Letter to E. S. Perkins.

The American people, from tradition and interest, favor bimetallism, and the Republican party demands the use of both gold and silver as standard money.—From Minneapolis Republican National Platform.

1896.

We are opposed to the free coinage of silver except by international agreement with the leading commercial nations of the world, which we pledge ourselves to promote.—From St. Louis Republican National Platform.

We renew our allegiance to the principles af the gold standard and declare our confidence in the wisdom of the legislation.....by which ....s a gold basis has been secured. We declare our steadfast opposition to the free and unlimited coinage of Silver.—Philadelphia Republican National Platform — Washington Chronicle.

O. V. Thornton, of St. Louis, who travels for a large Connecticut house, has come to this conclusion from mixing with the people of the States named: "It is my opinion that Kentucky's going for Bryan is a foregone conclusion. Indiana, I believe, will go for him; Missouri, of course, and he stands a great show for Illinois, and will crowd McKinley in Ohio. I have no doubt of Maryland going for Bryan, and think he will carry Connecticut. Four years ago the President of the company I travel for, in Connecticut, was ardently and actively for McKinley, and said that he would like to have every man on the rolls of the company vote for McKinley. Some time ago, in June it was, he told me that he was just as strong for Bryan now as he had been for McKinley four years ago."

The Republican Liberty Club, of Indianapolis, an organization composed wholly of Republicans opposed to the imperialistic tendencies of the McKinley Administration, and who will vote for Bryan, is having a book printed for free distribution that will contain letters, interviews and other documents showing the Administration's tendency and the protests that prominent Republicans have made against it. Interviews with Gen. Harrison, ex-Attorney General W. H. H. Miller, W. A. Ketcham, Gen. Lew Wallace and others, showing their opposition to the Porto Rican tariff, will be reproduced; a chapter will be devoted to Gov. Mount's administration; another chapter to W. T. Durbin, Republican candidate for Governor, showing that he is a stockholder in the Strawboard Trust, and another to county politics, in which it will be shown that neither the old soldiers nor organized labor are represented upon the county ticket.

Walton.

The Intermeditat and Primary grades of the Walton Graded School at the old school house adjacent to the M. E. church, were dismissed last week on account of scarlet fever having attacked the little son of Mr. Grant Tomlin. He was a pupil in the Primary. It was thought also that the little son of Clay Baker showed symtoms of the same disease. If it was an attack of the dreaded scourge it was a very light one as both of the boys are convalescent. The correspondent of the Evening Post with the characteristic inaccuracy of his reports from this point, stated that the Walton free schools had been closed. He also stated that a child of H. M. Thomas was stricken. No such person lives here and a careful inspection of the monument and cemetery books shows never has lived here.

The school in all grades is fully attended today.

The primary election on Saturday was the most quiet and orderly coutest ever witnessed here. It was a steady, earnest fight from start to finish. The most of the voters came with their minds made up. In some cases consideration was given to the relative ability as to who was the strongest as against the Hon. A. S. Berry, and those who were in this quandary were subjected to batteries all along the line and heard all the arguments, reports and assurances that the devoted friends of Rhinock and Gooch fired at them respectively. It soon became apparent that Judge Westover's withdrawal was benefitting Mr. Gooch, but the Rhinock supporters gamely contested every point and stood shoulder to shoulder in battle array until the last minute. Of the prominent workers for Mr. Gooch the name of Andrew Ellis stands in the front rank. He had for weeks been canvassing the district in a quiet but earnest way, and when the polls closed he came and sat down in front of Diers' stable, where the Hon. Ed Baker and some others were guessing at the result. Taking a pencil he said he would come nearer to it than any of them and wrote, "Gooch 100; Rhinock, 45; Berry, 35." He came in one each of the Gooch and Rhinock votes and two of Berry's. The Rhinock men worked like beavers, and many, including the writer, thought the declination of Westover had apparently given him the nomination. The enthusiasm of both parties in regard to the shelving of the present congressman was too apparent to both the Gooch and Rhinock men.

At last an Editor has hit a big, rusty old nail a blow that ought to drive it out of sight for all time to come. The rusty old nail is the free advertisement of all the "blow-outs" that Cincinnati and Louisville people ask the country papers to publish when "business is slack," and something has to be done for the hotel and retail business to say nothing of the necessity of dealers pushing goods that are going out of style on the visitors at prices above what they are selling for at regular business times. The present is a dull season and some genius has broached the idea of a "Fall Festival." The railroads are always ready to make excursion rates and the "Festival" is on for the sucker who we are told is born every minute, and the history of excursions prove it. Will the rural population never learn what bunco is? The city sharper knows that if a crowd of people can be induced to flock to a city a great many will buy something for which they have no need merely to say they were in at "Catchemgwyne and Acomin's and bought such and such articles although they were really quite high." A young lady of this place was in the city at the beginning of the game (I mean the Festival) and in conversation casually remarked that "everything was high priced" and the reading of your paragraph brought on a train of thought.

At that time Craddock told Albert that he would kill him for saying it, and on Saturday evening he did it without any provocation whatever. Fullilove was a harmless, innocent young man and was generally liked. The citizens were congratulating themselves on having had such an exceptionally orderly election when the shooting occurred. Had they got hold of Craddock at the time there might have been another tragedy.

W. J. BRYAN'S LETTER

Formally Accepts Democratic Nomination for President.

APPROVES KANSAS CITY PLATFORM.

Candidate Pledges Himself Not to Stand for Second Term if Elected—Views on Finance—Other Issues Discussed.

Hon. James D. Richardson, Chairman, and others of the Notification Committee of the Democratic National Convention:

Gentlemen:—In accepting the nomination tendered by you on behalf of the democratic party, I beg to assure you of my appreciation of the great honor conferred upon me by the delegates in convention assembled, and by the voters who gave instruction to the delegates.

I am sensible of the responsibilities which rest upon the chief magistrate of so great a nation, and realize the far-reaching effect of the questions involved in the present contest.

In my letter of acceptance of 1896, I made the following pledge:

"So deeply am I impressed with the magnitude of the power vested by the constitution in the chief executive of the nation and with the enormous influence which he can wield for the benefit or injury of the people that I wish to enter the office, if elected, free from other servants of the state, except the desire to prove worthy of the confidence of my countrymen. Human judgment is fallible, even when unbiased by selfish considerations, and, in order that I may not be tempted to use the patronage of the office to advance any personal ambition, I hereby announce, with all the emphasis which words can express, my fixed determination not, under any circumstances, to be a candidate for reelection, in case this campaign results in my favor."

Further reflection and observation constrain me to renew this pledge.

The platform adopted by the Kansas City commands my cordial and unqualified approval. It courageously meets the issues now before the country, and states clearly and without ambiguity the party's position on every question considered. Adopted by a convention which assembled on the anniversary of the signing of the declaration of independence, it breathes the spirit of candor, independence and patriotism which characterizes those who, at Philadelphia in 1776, promulgated the creed of the republic.

Having in my notification speech discussed somewhat at length the paramount issue, imperialism, and added some observations on militarism and the Boer war, it is sufficient at this time to review the remaining planks of the platform.

Trusts.

The platform very properly gives prominence to the trust question. The appalling growth of combinations in restraint of trade during the present administration proves conclusively that the republican party lacks either the desire or the ability to deal with the question effectively. If, as may be fairly assumed from the speeches and conduct of the republican leaders, that party does not intend to take the people's side against these organizations, then the weak and qualified condemnation of trusts considered in the republican platform is designed to distract attention while industrial despotism is completed. The day of the trust monopoly has always been an outlaw. No defense can be made of an industrial system in which one, or a few men, can control for their own profit the output or price of any article of merchandise. Under such a system the consumer suffers extortion, the producer of raw material has but one purchaser and must sell at the arbitrary price fixed; the laborer has but one employer, and is powerless to protest against injustice, whether in wages or in conditions of labor; the small stockholder is at the mercy of the speculator, while the traveling salesman contributes his salary to the overgrown profits of the trust. Since but a small proportion of the people can share in the advantages secured by private monopoly, it follows that the remainder of the people are not only called upon to bear the benefits, but are the helpless victims of every monopoly organized. It is difficult to overestimate the immediate injustice that may be done, or to calculate the ultimate effect of this injustice upon the social and political welfare of the people. Our platform, after suggesting certain specific remedies, pledges the party to an unceasing warfare against private monopoly in nation, state and city. I hartily approve of this declaration, and I shall be my earnest and constant endeavor to fulfill the promise in letter and spirit. I shall select as my counselors those who will, without fear or favor, enforce existing laws; I shall recommend such additional legislation as may be necessary to dissolve every private monopoly which does business outside of the state of its origin; and if, contrary to my belief and hope, a constitutional amendment is found to be necessary, I shall recommend such an amendment as will, without impairing any of the existing rights of the states, empower congress to protect the people of all the states from injury at the hands of individuals or corporations engaged in interstate commerce.

The platform accurately describes the Dingley tariff law, when it condemns it as a "trust breeding measure, skillfully devised to give to the few favors which they do not deserve, and to place upon the many burdens which they should not bear." Under its operation trusts can plunder the people of the United States, while fair access to foreign markets with manufacturers of other countries is denied. To justify the general policy of protection will find it difficult to defend a tariff which enables a trust to exact an exorbitant toll from the citizen.

The Financial Plank.

The platform reiterates the demand contained in the Chicago platform for an American financial system made by the American people for themselves. The purpose of such a system is to restore and maintain a bimetallic level of prices, and in order that there may be no uncertainty as to the method of restoring bimetallism, the specific declaration in favor of free and unlimited coinage at the existing ratio of 16 to 1, independent of the action of other nations, is repeated. In 1896 the republican party recognized the necessity for bimetallism by pledging the party to an earnest effort to secure an international agreement for the free coinage of silver, and the president, immediately after his inauguration, by authority of congress, appointed a commission composed of distinguished citizens to visit Europe and solicit foreign aid. Secretary Hay, in a letter written to Lord Aldenham in November, 1898, and afterwards published in England, declared that at that time the president and a majority of his cabinet still believed in the great desirability of such an international agreement for the restoration of the double standard, but that it did not seem opportune to reopen the negotiations just then. The financial law enacted less than a year ago contains a concluding section declaring that the measure was not intended to stand in the way of the restoration of bimetallism, whenever it could be done by cooperation with other nations. The platform submitted to the last republican convention with the indorsement of the administration again suggested the possibility of securing foreign aid in restoring silver.

Now the republican party for the first time, openly abandons its advocacy of the double standard, and declares that monetary system which it has so often and so emphatically condemned. The democratic party, on the contrary, remains the steadfast advocate of the gold and silver coinage of the constitution, and is not willing that other nations shall determine for us the time and manner of restoring silver to its ancient place as a standard money. The ratio of 16 to 1 is not only the ratio now existing between all the gold and silver dollars in circulation in this country, a ratio which even the republican administration has not attempted to change, but it is the only ratio advocated by those who are seeking to reopen the mints. Whether the senate, now hostile to bimetallism, can be changed during this campaign or the campaign of 1900 can only be determined after the votes are counted, but neither the present nor the future political complexion of congress has prevented or should prevent an announcement of the party's position upon the subject in unequivocal terms.

The currency bill, which received the sanction of the executive and the republican members of the house and senate, justifies the warning given by the democratic party in 1896. It was then predicted that the republican party would attempt to retire the greenbacks, although the party and its leaders studiously concealed their intentions. That purpose is now plain and the people must choose between the retention of the greenbacks, issued and controlled in volume by the government, and a national bank note currency issued by banks and controlled in their own interests. If the national bank notes are to be secured by bonds, the currency system now supported by the republican party involves a permanent and increasing debt, and, so long as this system stands, the financial classes will be tempted to throw their powerful influence upon the side of any measure which will contribute to the size and permanency of a national debt. It is hardly conceivable that the American people will deliberately turn from the debt-paying policy of the past, to the dangerous doctrine of perpetual bonds.

Election of Senators by the People.

The demand for a constitutional amendment providing for the election of senators by direct vote of the people, appears for the first time in a democratic national platform, but a resolution proposing such an amendment has three times passed the house of representatives, and that, too, practically without opposition. Whatever may have been the reasons which secured the adoption of the present plan, a century ago, new conditions have made it imperative that the people be permitted to speak directly in the selection of their representatives in the senate. A senator is less the representative of the state because he receives his commission from the people themselves, rather than from the members of the state legislature. If a voter is competent to vote for a member of congress, for state officers and for president, he is competent to choose his representative in the senate. A system which makes the senator responsible for his election to the people, as a whole, and amenable to them if he misrepresents them, must commend itself to those who have confidence in the intelligence and patriotism of the masses.

Direct Legislation.

The platform indorses the principle of direct legislation. This is already applied to a more important question than in action, state and city. It rests upon the sound theory that the people can be safely trusted, and that the power over the government is to the will of the people the more free it will be from misuse and abuse.

Labor Question.

Several planks of the labor platform are devoted to questions which the laboring classes have an immediate interest, but which more remotely affect our entire population. When a court is generally known as government by injunction is at present directed chiefly against the employes of corporations, and arises from a disagreement between them and their employer, it involves a principle which concerns everyone. The purpose of the injunction in such cases is to substitute trial by judge for trial by jury, and the method is low at the jury system. The abolition of government by injunction is as necessary for the protection of the jurisdiction of the court as it is for the security of the citizen. Blackstone in defending trial by jury says:

"The impartial administration of justice, which secures both our persons and our properties, is the great end of civil society, but if that be intrusted entirely to the magistracy, a select body of men, and those generally bred to the profession of law, it is to be feared the dignity, the power and the emoluments of so distinct an order may tempt human nature that the few should be always attentive to the interests and good of the many."

If the criminal laws are not sufficient for the protection of property, they can be made more severe. Citizens charged with crime must have his case tried before a jury of his peers.

The Blacklist.

The blacklist as now employed in some places enables the employer to place the employe under practical duress, for the skilled laborer finds his employment gone when the employers can not only discharge him, but prevent his securing any similar employment. The blacklist enables employers to secure, by mutual agreement, that control over the wage earners which a private monopoly exercises without contract.

Arbitration.

The platform renews the demand for arbitration between corporations and their employes. No one who has observed the friction which arises between great corporations and their employes can doubt the wisdom of establishing an impartial court to which just and equitable settlement of disputes. The demand for arbitration ought to be anticipated as being by the public which now suffers inconvenience because of strikes and lockouts, and by the employers themselves, as by the employe. The establishment of arbitration will insure friendly relations between labor and capital, and render obsolete the growing practice of calling in the army to settle labor troubles.

Department of Labor.

I cannot too strongly emphasize the importance of the platform recommendation of the establishment of a department of labor, with a member of the cabinet at its head. When we remember how important a position the laborer fills in our economic, social and political scheme, it is hard to conceive of a valid objection being made to this recognition of his services. Agriculture is already represented in the president's official household; the army and navy have their representative there; the state department, with its consular service, and the treasury department, with its close connection with fiscal affairs, have each a special touch with the business and commercial interests. A cabinet officer truly representative of the wage earning class would be of invaluable aid, not only to the toilers, but to the president.

Chinese Exclusion.

The Chinese exclusion act has proven an advantage to the country, and its continuance and strict enforcement, as well as its extension to other similar races, are imperatively necessary. The Asiatic is so essentially different from the American that he cannot be assimilated with our population, and is, therefore, not desirable as a permanent resident. His presence as a temporary laborer, preserving his national identity, and maintaining a foreign scale of wages and living, must forever prove an injustice to American producers as well as a perpetual source of irritation.

Pensions.

The party expresses its pride in the soldiers and sailors of all our wars, and declares its purpose to deal generously with them and their dependents. A liberal policy is natural and necessary in a government which depends upon a citizen soldiery, instead of a large standing army. Self-interest, as well as gratitude, compels the government to make bountiful provision for those who, in the hour of danger, and at great sacrifice of business, health and life, tender their services to their country.

The pension laws should be construed according to the generous spirit which prompted their passage. The platform very properly reiterates the position taken in 1896, that the fact of enlistment shall be deemed conclusive evidence that the soldier was sound when the government accepted him. A certificate given now to the health of a person a year ago, or even if easily obtainable, should not have as much weight as the certificate of the medical officer who examined the volunteer with a view of ascertaining his fitness for army service.

Nicaragua.

The democratic party is in favor of the immediate construction, ownership and control of the Nicaragua canal by the United States. The failure of the republican party to make any progress in carrying out a pledge contained in its platform four years ago, together with the substitution in its latest platform of a plank favoring an Isthmian canal for a specific declaration in favor of the Nicaraguan canal, would indicate that the republican leaders either do not appreciate the importance of this great waterway to the maritime strength and commercial interests of the country, or that they give too much consideration to the interested opposition of transcontinental lines. The Hays-Pauncefote treaty, now before the senate, would, if ratified, greatly lessen the value of the canal, if it would not indeed convert it into a positive menace in time of war. The paramount interests of the United States in the western hemisphere, together with the obligations to defend the republics to the south of us, make it necessary that our government shall be able to close the canal against any hostile power.

Arizona, New Mexico and Oklahoma

Arizona, New Mexico and Oklahoma have long been ready to assume the responsibilities and enjoy the privileges of statehood, and it will be a pleasure, as well as a duty to carry out the platform pledge concerning them.

Alaska and Porto Rico.

There will be a popular acquiescence in the demand for home rule, and a territorial form of government, in Alaska and Porto Rico. Both are entitled to local self-government and representation in congress.

Cuba.

The recognition contained in both the democratic and republican platforms of the right of the Cubans to independence, removes the general principle involved from the domain of partisan politics. It is proper, however, to consider whether the accomplishment of this purpose can be safely intrusted to the republican party after it has yielded to the allurements of the colonial idea, and abandoned its earlier faith in the natural and inalienable rights of man.

Reclamation of Arid Lands.

The time is ripe for a systematic and extended effort to reclaim the arid lands and fit them for actual settlers. The last agricultural report estimates that homes can thus be provided for many millions of people. The impounding and use of the waters which are wasted in the spring would people the western states with thrifty, intelligent and industrious citizens, and these would furnish a valuable market for all the products of the factories. A small percentage of the money spent in a war of conquest would provide occupation and habitation for more people than would ever seek a residence in colonies within the tropics.

Foreign Alliances.

The reasons given by Washington, Jefferson and the other statesmen of the early days in support of the doctrine that we should maintain friendly relations with all nations, but entangling alliances with none, are even stronger to-day than they were a hundred years ago. Our commerce is greatly increasing, and we are brought into constant communication with all parts of the world. Even if we desired to do so, we could not afford to alienate many nations by entering into permanent alliance with a few. Our strength and standing are such that it is less necessary than ever before to lean for support upon the friendliness of a foreign power.

Monroe Doctrine.

The doctrine enunciated by Monroe, and approved by succeeding presidents, is essential to the welfare of the United States. The continents of North and South America are dedicated to the development of free government. One republic after another has come into existence, until to-day monarchial idea has barely a foothold in the new world.

While it is the policy of this country to interfere where amicable relations exist between European countries and their dependencies in America, our people would look with disfavor upon any attempt on the part of European governments to maintain or acquire by force or forcible sovereignty over the people living on this side of the Atlantic.

The position taken by the republican leaders, and more recently set forth by the republican candidate for the presidency, viz: That we cannot protect a nation from outside interference without exercising sovereignty over it, is a new and dangerous doctrine, for while this argument is at this time directed against the protection which we give the Filipinos both independence and protection, it is equally applicable to the republics of central and south America. If this government cannot lend its strength to another republic without making it a subject of the nation we must either withdraw protection from the republics to the south of us or absorb them. Under the new plea that the guardian nation must exert an authority equal to its responsibility, European nations have long claimed a similar right regards, and it is a significant fact that the republican party should accept the European idea of a protectorate, at the same time that it adopts a European colonial policy. To reject this idea is to abandonment of the American idea. We have maintained the Monroe doctrine for threequarters of a century. The expense to us has been practically nothing, but the protection has been beyond value to our sister republics. Should a European republic be erected upon the ruins of Spanish tyranny, its protection by us will be neither difficult nor expensive. No European nation would be willing for any other European nation to have the islands, neither would any European nation be willing to provoke a war with us in order to obtain possession of the islands. If we assert sovereignty over the Filipinos we will have to defend that sovereignty by force, and if we do not we will be open to criticism; if we protect them from outside interference, they will defend themselves and will be our friends. If we show as much determination in opposing the sovereignty of other nations as they have shown in opposing ours, other governments will not require much assistance from us.

Extravagance.

The republican party, drawing as it does enormous campaign funds from those who enjoy special privileges at the hands of the government, is powerless to protect the tax payers from the attack of those who profit by large appropriations. A surplus in the treasury offers constant temptation to extravagance, and extravagance, in turn, compels a resort to new means of taxation, which, in being kept in the background and out of sight, are none the less burdensome. The river and harbor bill, now before congress, is a fair illustration of the imposition which will be attempted when there is a considerable amount of money idle in the treasury. The rehabilitation of the merchant marine, laudable in itself, is made the pretext for expenditure of public money for the benefit of large ship owners, and in the interest of a transportation monopoly. The government being only the agent of the people, has no right to collect from the people taxes beyond the legitimate needs of a government honestly and effectively administered, and public servants should exercise the same degree of care in the use of the people's money that private individuals do in the use of their own money. With a restoration of foreign policy consistent with American ideas there can be an immediate and large reduction in the burdens now borne by the people.

Income Tax.

By inadvertence the income tax plank adopted by the democratic national convention, was omitted from the platform as read and adopted. The subject, however, is covered by the reaffirmation of the Chicago platform, and I take this occasion to reaffirm my belief in the principle which underlies the income tax. Congress should have authority to levy and collect an income tax wherever necessary, and an amendment to the federal constitution specifically conferring such authority ought to be supported by every those who may think the tax unnecessary at this time. In the hour of danger the government can draft the citizen; it ought to be able to draft the pocketbook as well. Unless money is more precious than blood, we cannot afford to give greater protection to the incomes of the rich than to the lives of the poor.

Imperialism.

The subjects, however, treated in this letter, important as each may seem in itself, do not press as imperatively for solution as the question which the platform declares to be the paramount issue in this campaign. Whether we shall adhere to or abandon those ideas of government which have distinguished this nation from its earliest days and given to its history its peculiar charm and value, is a question the settlement of which cannot be delayed. No other question can approach it in importance; no other question demands such immediate consideration. It is easier to lose a reputation than to establish one, and this nation would find it a long and difficult task to regain its proud position among the nations, if, under the stress of temptation, it should repudiate the principles and truths proclaimed by our heroic ancestors and sacredly treasured during a career unparalleled in the annals of time. When the doctrine that the people are the only source of power is made secure from future attack we can safely proceed to the settlement of the numerous questions which involve the domestic and economic welfare of our citizens.

Very truly yours,

W. J. BRYAN.

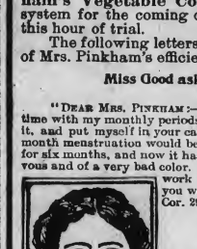
Every mother possesses information of vital value to her young daughter. That daughter is a precious legacy, and the responsibility for her future is largely in the hands of the mother. The mysterious change that develops the thoughtless girl into the thoughtful woman should find the mother on the watch day and night. As she cares for the physical well-being of her daughter, so will the woman be, and her children also.



When the young girl's thoughts become sluggish, when she experiences headaches, dizziness, faintness, and exhibits an abnormal disposition to sleep, pains in the back and lower limbs, eyes dim, desire for solitude, and a dislike for the society of other girls, when she is a mystery to herself and friends, then the mother should go to her aid promptly. At such a time the greatest aid to nature is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It prepares the young system for the coming change, and is the surest reliance in this hour of trial.

Miss Good asks Mrs. Pinkham for Help.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been very much bothered for some time with my monthly periods being irregular. I will tell you all about it, and put myself in your care, for I have heard so much of you. Each month menstruation would become less and less, until it entirely stopped for six months, and now it has stopped again. I have become very nervous and of a very bad color. I am a young girl and have always had to work very hard. I would be very much pleased if you would tell me what to do."—MISS PEARL GOOD, Cor. 29th Avenue and Yesler Way, Seattle, Wash.

The Happy Result.

February 10th, 1900.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough. It is just simply wonderful the change your medicine has made in me. I feel like another person. My work is now a pleasure to me, while before using your medicine it was a burden. To-day I am a healthy and happy girl. I think if more women would use your Vegetable Compound there would be less suffering in the world. I cannot express the relief I have experienced by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MISS PEARL GOOD, Cor. 29th Avenue and Yesler Way, Seattle, Wash.

CHRIST'S CHARACTER

Dr. Talmage Speaks of the Earthly Life of the Savior.

Christians Urged to Emulate Qualities Which Were Most Conspicuous—The Spirit of Hard Work.

[Copyright, 1900, by Louis Klopsch.]

In this sermon, which Dr. Talmage sends from Paris, he analyzes the character of the Saviour and urges all Christians to exercise the qualities which were conspicuous in Christ's earthly life. The text is Romans 8:9: "Now, if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of His."

There is nothing more desirable than a pleasant disposition. Without it we cannot be happy ourselves or make others happy. When we have lost our temper, become impatient under some light cross, we suddenly awaken to new appreciation of proper equipoise of nature. We wish we had been born with self balance. We envy those people who bear themselves through life without any perturbation and we flatter ourselves that however little self control we may now have, the time will come, under the process of years, when we will be mellowed and softened and the wrong things which are in us now will be all right, forgetful of the fact that an evil habit in our nature will grow into larger proportions and that an iniquity not corrected will become the grandfather of a whole generation of iniquities. So that people without the grace of God in the struggle and amid the annoyances and exasperations of life are apt to become worse instead of better.

Now, the trouble is that we have a theory abroad in the world that a man's disposition cannot be changed. A man says: "I am irascible in temper, and I can't help it." Another man says: "I am revengeful naturally, and I can't help it." A man says: "I am impulsive, and I can't help it." And he tells the truth. No man can correct his disposition. I never knew a man by force of resolution to change his temperament, but by His grace God can take away that which is wrong and put in that which is right, and I know and you know people who since their conversion are just the opposite of what they used to be. In other words, we may, by the spirit of God, have the disposition of Jesus Christ implanted in our disposition, and we must have it done or we will never see Heaven. "If any man has not the disposition of Jesus Christ, he is none of His."

In the first place the spirit of Christ was a spirit of gentleness. Sometimes He made wrathful utterances against Pharisees and hypocrites, but the most of His words were kind and gentle and loving and inoffensive. When we consider the fact that He was omnipotent and could have torn to pieces His assailants, the wonder is greater. We often bear the persecution and abuse of the world because we cannot help it. Christ endured it when He could have helped it. Little children who always shy off at a rough man rushed into His presence and clambered on Him until the people begged the mothers to take them away. Invalids so sore with wounds that they could not bear to have anyone come near them begged Christ just to put His hand upon the wound and soothe it. The mother with the sickest child was willing to put the little one in Christ's arms. Self-righteous people rushed into His presence with a woman of debased character and said: "Now, annihilate her, blast her, kill her." Jesus looked at her and saw she was sorry and repentant, and He looked at them, and He saw they were proud and arrogant, and He said: "Let him that is without sin cast the first stone at her." A blind man sat by the wayside making a great ado about his lack of vision. They told him to hush up and not bother the Master. Christ stooped to him and said: "What wilt thou that I do unto thee?" Gentleness of voice, gentleness of manner, gentleness of life.

We all admire it, whether we have any of it or not. Just as the rough mountain bluff and the scarred crag love to look down into the calm lake at their feet and as the stormiest winter loves to merge into sunshiny spring, so the most precipitate and impulsive and irascible natures love to think of the gentleness of Christ. How little we have of it! How little patience in treating with enemies! We have so little of the gentleness of Christ we are not fit for Christian work half the time. We do not know how to comfort the bereft or encourage the disheartened or to take care of the poor. Even our voice of sympathy is on the wrong pitch.

My sister had her arm put out of joint, and we were in the country, and the neighbors came in, and they were all sympathetic, and they laid hold of the arm and pulled mightily until the anguish was intolerable; but the arm did not go to its place. Then the country doctor was sent for, and he came in and with one touch it was all right. He knew just where to put his finger and just how to touch the bone. We go out to our Christian work with too rough a hand and too unsympathetic a manner, and we fail in our work, while some Christian, in the gentleness of Christ, comes along, puts his hand of sympathy on the sore spot—the torn ligaments are healed and the disturbed bones are rejoined. Oh, for this gentleness of Christ.

The dew of our summer night will accomplish more than 50 Carribbean whirlwinds. How important it is that in going forth to serve Christ we have something of His gentleness! Is that the way we bear ourselves when we are assaulted? The rule is an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, retort for retort, sarcasm for sarcasm. Give him as much as he sends! After awhile you look up into the face of Christ and you see His gentleness, and you say: "Well, now, I must do differently." Then your proud heart says: "Now you have your enemy in a corner. You will never get him in a corner again. Chastise him and then let him go." So we postpone the gentleness of Christ. Did you ever know any diligently to be healed by acerbity and hypercriticism? About 45 years ago the Presbyterian church was split into the new school and the old school. The chasm got wider and wider. The most outrageous personalities were indulged in. Good men on one side anathematized good men on the other side. Wider and wider the chasm got, until after awhile some good people tried another tack, and they began to explain away the difficulties, and soon all the differences were healed, and at Pittsburgh they shook hands and are one now to be one forever.

Did you ever know a drunkard reclaimed by animicry of his staggering steps, his thick tongue or his hiccough? No. You only madden his brain. But you go to him and let him know you appreciate what an awful struggle he has with the evil habit, and you let him know that you have been acquainted with people who were down in the same depths who by the grace of God have been rescued. He hears your voice, he responds to that sympathy and he is saved. You cannot scold the world into anything better. You may attract it into something better. The stormiest wind comes out from its hiding place and says: "I will arouse this sea." And it blows upon the sea. Half of the sea is aroused, or a fourth of the sea is aroused, yet not the entire Atlantic. But after awhile the moon comes out, calm and placid. It shines upon the sea, and the ocean begins to lift. It embraces all the highlands; the beach is all covered. The heart throb of one world beating against the heart throb of another world. The storm would not rouse the whole Atlantic; the moon lifted it. "And I," said Christ, "if I be lifted up will draw all men unto me."

Christ's disposition was also one of self-sacrifice. No young man ever started out with so bright a prospect as Christ started out with if he had been willing to follow a worldly ambition. In the time that He gave to the sick He might have gathered the vastest fortune of His time. With His power to popularize Himself and magnetize the people He could have gained official position. No orator ever won such plaudits as He might have won from sanhedrin and synagogue and vast audiences by the seaside. No physician ever got such a reputation for healing power as He might have attained if He had performed His wonderfuleures before the Roman arlstocracy. I say these things to let you know what Paul meant when he said: "He pleased not Himself," and to show something of the wonders of His self-sacrifice. All human power together could not have thrown Christ into the manger if he had not chosen to go there. All Satanic strength could not have lifted Christ upon the cross if He had not elected himself to the torture. To save our race from sin and death and hell he faced all the sorrows of this world and the sorrows of eternity. How much of that self-sacrifice have we?

What is self-sacrifice? It is my walking a long journey to save you from fatigue. It is my lifting a great number of pounds to save you from the awful strain. It is a subtraction from my comfort and prosperity so that there may be an addition to your comfort and prosperity. How much of that have we? Might not I rather say: "How little have we." Two children—brother and sister—were passing down the road. They were both very destitute. The lad had hardly any garments at all. His sister had a coat that she had outgrown. It was a very cold day. She said: "Johnny, come under this coat." "Oh, no," he said; "the coat isn't large enough!" "Oh," she said, "it will stretch!" He comes under the coat, but the coat would not stretch. So she took off the coat and put it on him. Self-sacrifice pure and simple. Christ taking off his robe to clothe our nakedness. Self-sacrifice. I have not any of it, nor have you compared with that. The sacrifice of the Son of God.

Christ walked to Emmaus. Christ walked from Capernaum to Bethany. Christ walked from Jerusalem to Golgotha. How far have you and I walked for Christ? His head ached, His heart ached, His back ached. How much have we ached for Christ?

The disposition of Jesus was also a disposition of humility. The Lord of earth and Heaven in the garb of a rustic. He who poured all the waters of the earth out of his right hand—the Amazon and the Euphrates and the Oregon and the Ohio and the Mississippi—bending over a well to ask a Samaritan woman for a drink. He who spread the canopy of the heavens and set the earth for a footstool, admitting that He had not where to lay his head. He whose chariots the clouds are, walked with sore feet. Hushing the tempest on Gennesaret and wiping the spray of the storm from His beard, then sitting down in the cabin beside His disciples, as though he had done no more than wipe the sweat from His brow in Joseph's carpenter shop. Taking the foot of death off the heart of Lazarus and breaking the chain of the grave against the marble of the tomb and then walking out with Mary and Martha without any more pretension than a plain citizen going out in the suburban village to spend the evening. Jostled as though He were a nobody. Pursued as though He were an outlaw. Nicknamed. Seated with publicans and with sinners. King of Heaven and Earth trailing His robes in the dust.

How much of that humility have we? If we get a few more dollars than other people or gain a little higher position, oh, how we strut! We go around wanting everybody to know their place and say: "Is not this great Babylon that I have built for the honor of my kingdom and by the might of my strength?" Who has anything of the humility of Christ?

The disposition of Christ was also the spirit of prayer. Prayer on the mountains, prayer on the sea, prayer among the sick, prayer everywhere. Prayer for little children: "Father, I thank Thee that Thou hast hidden these things from the wise and prudent and revealed them unto babes." Prayer for His friends: "Father, I will that they be with Me where I am." Prayer for His enemies: "Father, forgive them; they know not what they do." Prayer for all nations: "Thy kingdom come." How little of that spirit you and I have. How soon our knees get tired. Where is the vial full of odors which are the prayers of all the saints? Which of us can keep our mind ten minutes on a prayer without wandering? Not you, not I. Oh, that we might have the spirit of prayer which was the spirit of Christ. We want more prayer in the family, more prayer in the church, more prayer in the legislative hall, more prayer among the sick, more prayer among the aged, more prayer among the young. The great advancement of the church is to be in that direction yet.

While the council of Nuremberg was signing the edict that gave the church its freedom, Martin Luther was away off in a room by himself praying for that accomplishment. Though there was no line of communication between the place where the council was assembled and the room where Martin Luther was praying, Martin Luther suddenly rose from his knees and said: "It is accomplished; the church is free. Victory, victory!" Oh, for this direct line of communication with the throne of God, so that it may be said of us as it was said of Luther: "He got what he asked for!" We want, like Daniel, to pray with our face toward the holy city. We want, like Stephen, to pray gazing into Heaven. We want, like the publican, to pray smiting on the heart of conviction. We want, like Christ, to pray the Christ who emptied His heart of all its life-blood and then filled it with the sorrows, the woes, the agonies of all nations.

Cold mountains and the midnight air
Witnessed the fervor of his prayer.

The spirit of Christ, I remark lastly, was a spirit of hard work. Not one lazy moment in all His life. Whether He was talking to the fishermen on the beach or preaching to the sailors on the dock or administering to the rustics amid the mountains or spending an evening in Bethany, always busy for others. With hands, heart, head busy for others. Hewing in the Nazareth carpentry shop, teaching the lame how to walk without crutches, curing the child's fits, providing rations for the hungry host. Busy, busy, busy! The hardy men who pulled the net out of the sea filled with floundering treasures, the shepherds who hunted up grassy plots for their flocks to nibble at, the shipwrights pounding away in the drydocks, the winemakers of Engedi dipping the juices from the vat and pouring them into the goatskins, were not more busy than Christ. Busy, busy for others. From the moment He went out of the caravansary of Bethlehem to the moment when the cross plunged into the socket on the bloody mount, busy for others. Does that remind you of yourself? It does not remind me of myself. If we lift a burden, it must be light. If we do work, it must be popular. If we sit in the pew, it must be soft. If we move in a sphere of usefulness, it must be brilliant. If we have to take hold of a load, give us the light end of the log. In this way to Heaven fan us, rock us, sing us to sleep. Lift us up toward Heaven on the tips of your fingers under a silken sunshade. Stand out of the way, all you martyrs who breasted the fire! Stand out of the way and let this colony of tender-feeled modern Christians come up and get their crowns!

What has your Lord done to you, O Christian, that you should betray Him? Who gave you so much riches that you can afford to despise the awards of the faithful? At this moment, when all the armies of Heaven and earth and hell are plunging into the conflict, how can you desert the standard? Oh, backslidden Christian, is it not time for you to start anew for Heaven?

Now, I have shown you that the disposition of Christ was a spirit of gentleness, a spirit of self-sacrifice, a spirit of humility, a spirit of prayer, a spirit of hard work—five points. Will you remember them? Are you ready now for the tremendous announcement of the text? "If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of His." Are you ready for that statement? Can you stand up and say: "Yes, we have the spirit of Christ?" Not one of us can make that answer to the full question, yet I am to declare to you there is no discouragement in this subject for Christian people. You have the seeds of this character planted in your soul. "It doth not yet appear what we shall be." You might as well blame an acorn for not being an oak of a thousand years as to blame yourself because you are not equal to Christ. You have the implantation within you which will enlarge and develop into the grandest Christian character, and there is no discouragement in this text for you to try to love and serve the Lord. Aim high. Sheathe not your sword until you have gained the last victory. Climb higher and higher until you reach the celestial hills. Crowns bright and radiant for all the victors, but death to every deserter.

HE EXPLAINED IT.

The Man Who Doesn't Know Anything About Golf Defines a Term of the Game.

"What do they mean by 'two up' in golf?" she asked as she put down the paper she had been reading, says the Chicago Times.

"Huh!" he exclaimed, in a startled way, for he knew about as much about golf as he did about throwing the boomerang. Still, no man is going to show his ignorance of sports to his wife.

"What do they mean by 'two up?'" she repeated.

"Two up," he returned, "Oh, yes, of course. Well, you've heard of 'topping' a ball, haven't you?"

"Certainly."

"Well, when you 'top' a ball, naturally it's up."

"I don't quite see—"

"Don't see!" he interrupted: "The top is always up, isn't it? You never saw the top at the bottom, did you?"

"No-o-o."

"Well, there you are. It's plain as day. When you 'top' a ball it's 'one up,' and when you 'top' two balls it's 'two up.' Now, don't bother me any more."

"But what do you mean by a ball?" she persisted.

"Good heavens! how ignorant you are!" he exclaimed. "Why, 'topping' a ball is knocking it so high that it never comes down. I should think the expression 'one up' would make that clear to you."

Two Canals Binding Atlantic.

It is asserted that the future will see two canals binding the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean. The value of such connection cannot be too highly estimated. It will bring added prosperity to the nation, as surely as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters brings health to the dyspeptic. If you cannot get rid of your indigestion, constipation, dyspepsia or biliousness try the Bitters, and never accept anything in place of it if you wish to get well.

Fee for Bank Directing.

A stranger got off the car, and, accosting a newsboy, asked him to direct him to the nearest bank.

"This way," said the "newsie," and, turning the corner, pointed to a skyscraper just across the street.

"Thank you, and what do I owe you?" said the gentleman, pulling a penny out of his pocket.

"A quarter, please."

"A quarter! Isn't that pretty high for directing a man to the bank?"

"You'll find, sir," said the youngster, "that bank directors are paid high in Chicago."—Chicago Tribune.

Nearly Four Years' Suffering

relieved by two applications of Palmer's Lotion. C. B. Stone, of New York City, wrote: "Palmer's Lotion has cured me of a very distressing eruption on my scalp, of about four year's standing, which was accompanied with a terrible dandruff and a terrible itching. The itching entirely disappeared after one or two applications and a complete cure was effected in short time —all this after having been treated by various M. D.'s, and much money spent in other ways, but all the time growing worse rather than better. It Puzzles Everybody.

"I can't understand it," he said, with a hopeless little quaver in his voice. "I can't understand it. Why do the women have their skirts made ten inches too long, and hold them ten inches too high?"

What a Mogul Can Do.

That was a remarkable demonstration of what a Mogul can do, that occurred on the New York Central the other day, when engine No. 948, one of the new Moguls, hauled our train No. 11, the Southwestern Limited, made up of two mail cars, five passenger coaches and nine Wagner cars, sixteen cars in all. The total weight of the train was 1,832,000 pounds, or 916 tons, and the length of the train, including the engine, was 1,212 feet, or nearly a quarter of a mile. This engine made the running time of the train between New York and Albany, 143 miles, in three hours and fifteen minutes.

There is no railroad in the world which has a better roadbed, more skillful engineers, or better equipment, backed by loyal men always alert for the safety of their passengers, than the New York Central and Hudson River railroad. What road can match its corps of men, from President Callaway down the long line of employees, to the humble and faithful trackmen who watch their sections of rail through the long hours of the night and day, in order to safeguard the lives of the travelers on trains whirling by their humble shanties, many of which nestle closely to the rails under their guardianship.—Editorial from the Albany Times-Union.

was first used by Dr. Charles J. Moffett, a graduate of Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, Pa., in his extensive and successful treatment of children in Georgia in overcoming the troubles incident to teething and the hot summers. TEETHINA (Teething Powders) counteracts the effect of hot weather and keeps the digestive organs in a healthy condition, and has saved the lives of thousands of children in the debtor's native state, where physicians prescribe and all mothers give it, and it is criminal in mothers of our section to allow their babes and little children to suffer and perhaps die when relief can be so easily obtained by giving TEETHINA. Costs only 25 cents at Druggists, or mail 25c to C. J. MOFFETT, M. D., St. Louis, Mo.

To Be Concise

"Young man," said the editor to the budding journalist, who brought him a column story which could have been told better in ten lines, "when a man discovers his house is ablaze he doesn't go to the window and tell the passers-by that half an hour ago what threatened to be a terrible conflagration broke out in the upper story of the palatial mansion occupied by Mr. Jeremiah Dickens.' He simply rushes to the front, and shouts: 'Fire!' Be concise, young man."—St. Louis Republic.

For Homeseekers.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul R'y will sell regular Homeseekers' Excursion tickets to all points in South Dakota, at one fare plus $2 for the round trip, on October 2, 1900. This will enable parties to visit the Corn Belt Exposition to be held in Mitchell, S. D., September 26 to October 5, 1900, inclusive. This exposition is held to demonstrate the great agricultural resources, wealth and possibilities of this thriving state. The exposition is held in a gorgeously decorated corn palace which for beauty can hardly be excelled anywhere by a building of a temporary nature. There are thousands of acres of cheap lands left in South Dakota that will, under the present conditions in that state, rapidly increase in price, and the holding of this corn palace with its many attractions, that both amuse and instruct, should be an opportunity that all land and investment seekers should embrace.

For further information apply to any ticket agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul R'y, or address Geo. H. Heafford, General Passenger Agent, Chicago.

Charles Whitson, of Florence, was down, Saturday, and we are glad to learn that he and Joe have good jobs in the city, and are getting along nicely.

After inquiring around, we find that not more than one-half the tobacco crop of this section is housed. We supposed it was all in, but many farmers are taking chances on frost, and letting the cool weather thicken and give weight to the weed.

Granville Rouse has built about 700 yards of wire and plank fencing for James L. Huey, this season, we are told.

Mrs. Asberry (nee Laura Norman), of Mason county, has been visiting her parents near Union. She returned home one day last week.

It sometimes happens that a man grows whiskers that the cold winds of winter whistle through and ask in accents clear and keen, "where's your last summer's wages." Then it often happens that a man takes great pride in growing whiskers that the wind whistles through because his last summer's wages are treasured up in Klondyke, where winds never whistle and summer never comes. Then again there are men who raise whiskers that pierce the warbling winds of winter like a blizzard in August, and at harvest time on the night of September 19th, hang gracefully on a nail tied with a string in the town hall of Sugartit.

The editor of the Union Blade is a great lover of cake, and even goes so far in his passion for this indigestion and somnambulism manufacturer that he actually loves a cakewalk and will set up until "fair time" to see one. Only the other night did he buy himself four nice ginger cakes of normal size, covered all over with icing and other nice trimmings, at a late hour—say 9:30—ate all of them and went to bed. History goes to prove that trouble arose in the composing room soon after he returned, but no such thing as composure resulted from 10 to 12 o'clock. It was flop, flop. He flopped from the right side to the left (and got it, of course). Then he flopped from the side he left back to the side he began to flop from. As he flopped the cakes grew heavier and heavier until they grew to be so heavy that he could not flop, so he went to sleep. He had been rapped in the arms of Morpheus but a little while—you may call it sleep if you want to—but oh, my! A panorama of Flying Dutchmen, merry-go-rounds, cake-walks, climbing up the winding stairs, iron-bound buckets hanging on a favorite well, the old arm chair (Dr. Adams' dental chair) loomed up before him, and he declares now that before morning came the panorama was entangled until dental chairs became doughnuts; cakewalks turned into running races, and the "entrees" were ginger snaps, pound cake with English Pudding as a starter.

Miss Lou Williams is visiting in Cincinnati.

Uncle Dud Crigler has a vein of humor that age does not seem to chill, so he has as much fun as lots of young folks. Get him to tell you about uncle Robert Kizer and his apples, away up in Virginia.

Mrs. William Surface returned home Sunday from a week's visit to Indianapolis.

Cols. Jerry Blyth, David Castleman of Burlington, and Bruce Thornton, of Covington, were doing some tall electioneering in this section, last week.

Utzinger.

The protracted meeting will commence at Bullittsburg Wednesday, the 26th inst.

Tobacco is all cut and housed, and corn cut and the busiest season over experienced in this part of the county about ended, and many tired laborers are glad.

Assessor Willis and deputy started to work Tuesday last, the 18th.

Our future communications will be from Idlewild instead of Utzinger, the postoffice department having changed the name of our office. We were used to Utzinger and learned to like the name, but we can get use to anything and in time Idlewild will sound as natural as Utzinger does now.

J. C. Clore contemplates selling out and moving away in the near future. We feared that those frequent visits to Delhi would result in our losing him.

Miss Mollie Meeks, of Cleves, Ohio, and her friend, Miss Grace McMilton, of Clarksdale, Miss., have been the pleasant guests of Miss Meek's aunt, Mrs. John Wm. Acra, of Garrison Heights.

Assessor Willis informs us that he saved an abundance of seed from that tobacco that required no work, and any one wanting them will be supplied gratuituously. The assessor's tobacco like the old Bull Dog plug, gets there all the same.

Some of our items this week are a little stale, being held over from last week.

We should have written up the Cooking Club meeting, but expected to see it in glowing colors by the occasional reporter of social events, who was present. The last meeting was held at Mr. Legrand Gaines', and was attended by all the members except two, who were sick, and many welcome visitors. The next meeting will be held at Mr. Menter Graves', where everybody loves to go.

Mr. Nathan Walton and wife attended the opening of the exposition at Cincinnati last week.

The funeral procession of Mrs. Jas. Housden, who was buried in the cemetery last Friday, was one of the largest that has passed here for years.

We attended to the telephone a while Saturday night while "Billy" was busy, and could hear of "killing at Walton," "nothing new at Union," "scrapping at Utzinger," "Carlton precinct and Campbell county alike hard to hear from." "Immense laughing at Bullittsville." "Solon Early elected by a handsome majority at Petersburg." The situation seems "Goochy all around."

Miss Columbia, of Lawrenceburg, was the pleasant guest of Miss Beulah Gaines, Saturday night and Sunday.

Mrs. George Walton accompanied Miss Gordon, her boarder, the efficient teacher of the Terrill district school, to her home in Delhi to remain until Sunday.

R. C. Gaines has marketed and will market nearly 400 bushels of peaches this year, and has realized a handsome profit from his orchard.

The friends of the various candidates for offices of the Boone county Mutual Insurance Co., are busy getting proxies to vote for them at the election in October. The scramble for all kinds of office is immense.

Some of the boys about Utzinger Saturday night looked like they had been through a polkberry patch none foremost.

We have decidedly too many elections. They have a very demoralizing influence on the country.

Gunpowder.

A series of meetings will begin at Ebenezer church on Thursday night, the 27th inst., and will be conducted by Pastor Lentz.

There will be communion services at Hopeful the second Sunday in Oct., also preparatory service on Saturday afternoon preceeding.

A light shower of rain fell here last Saturday night but not enough to do much good in the way of filling cisterns or freshening the pastures, which are getting very dry. Stock water is getting a little scarce with some people.

Charlie Myers and wife passed through our burg Sunday evening.

The manner in which the campaign was conducted out somewhat of a figure in the election here last Saturday, but not in the direction that it was intended. Some of our most staunch Democrats were so disgusted that they did not go to the polls at all. We are certainly sorry this state of affairs exists, especially at a time when the party should be thoroughly united and all strife and discord cast aside. We believe the time is approaching when a man is a candidate for an office he will have to run on his merits, and his money will not be considered, and we hope it is not far distant.

E. H. Surface was the first in the neighborhood to sow wheat. He finished sowing the first of last week.

Mrs. R. O. Beemon received a telegram, a few days since, announcing the death of her brother in Missouri.

Willie Busby, after about three weeks' struggle with typhoid fever, is able to sit up, and unless he has a relapse will be able to be out in a few days.

Enoch Rouse bought of Robert Bradford, of Hebron, a new Keystone buggy, last week. He says he don't expect to speak to everybody he meets when he gets it.

Jerry Beemon and wife, of Limaburg, were guests of W. A. Tanner, last Sunday.

Mrs. Polly Bartell, after a visit of three weeks among friends here left, for her home at Junction City, last Monday.

Mrs. Sheily Tanner bresumed her school last Monday.

Corn cutting is about over and potato diging is on. The crop is not near what people were anticipating. I suppose it will not be much more than a half crop. They are of fine quality, but there are but few in the hill.

Florence.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Tanner entertained quite a number of relatives Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Tanner, Mr. and Mrs. Barlow, Mr. and Mrs. Mort Blankenbecker, and daughter, Maud, Mrs. Frances Tanner, Mrs. Frances Clutterbuck and children.

Mr. and Mrs. Rowland have returned home after a few days' visit with their daughter at Sherman.

Miss Annie Dulaney is attending school in Covington.

The Woolper Sabbath school has prospered beyond our expectations. Last year it closed its last quarter without reciting its review lesson. This year, before the present quarter has closed, it has voted almost unanimously, to have another quarter. If there are only a few present, we should not be discouraged. Bad weather is one means of trying your faith. If we go with the greatest number, we will go the wrong way. Christ is after the soul. The effects of this school will be seen for years to come.

Mrs. Lucy Wilson Tanceus.

Mrs. Lucy Wilson Tanceus was born February 15th, 1863, died Sept. 17th, 1900. She was married to John Tanceus, January 29th, 1890. In October, 1894, she united with the Christian Church at Bullittsville. A large congregation assembled in the Lutheran Church at Hebron, Tuesday afternoon, September 18th, to pay respect to her memory. There, the writer spoke a few flattering words concerning the hope that was hers, and of God's precious promises to those who love and obey Him. No eulogy was needed—she was a christian. Her eloquent life hushed the tongue of man. She leaves a husband and numerous relatives and friends who mourn her departure. She "rests from her labors."

Jesse H. Foster, Dead.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 15, 1900.
To the Editor of the Recorder:

Jesse H. Foster, formerly of Boone county, Ky., died Saturday, Sept. 1st, with paralysis. He was in his 76th year. Mr. Foster moved to Nashville, Tenn., in the spring of 1884, and since that time has made his home with his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Haley. Funeral services were conducted from the residence on Sunday afternoon by Eld. J. O. Martin, and the remains laid to rest in beautiful Mt. Olivet by the side of his daughter, Mrs. Lallie E. Brown. His death was not sudden and unexpected. For more than a year he had been a confined invalid. He was a member of the Campbellite Christian Church, and until his last illness, a regular attendant at Sabbath worship.

His passing away was indeed entering into rest, rest for which by grace he had been "prepared to be a partaker;" that rest that is a part of the "inheritance of the saints in light." He was ready, willing and even anxious to go, and so expressed himself a number of times. While we could find in Mr. Foster something to criticize, we could always find much more to commend and admire. His life was one of toil and sacrifice, and of patient endurance; he was a man of characteristic modesty, and multitudes adorn more conspicuous stations in society than he ever wished for or sought. He was a good man and the writer will ever cherish fondly his sacred memory.

Among his immediate relatives, he leaves a wife, son and daughter, two brothers and two sisters. May the God and Father of us all, comfort and sustain us, and bring us at last to meet him in the mansions prepared.

The primary election passed off here last Saturday without any serious trouble, although some of the boys had it up their snoot considerably. About the usual vote for a primary election was cast.

It was not long after the polls closed that the vote from each of the precincts in the county, except Constance, Bellevue and Rabbit Hash, was received. Constance finally came in from Hebron and Bellevue by messenger. Rabbit Hash was sent in from Petersburg. By 8 o'clock it was known what Boone had done, and news from the other counties was anxiously awaited.

A. B. Rouse and Edson Riddell had arranged a canvass in front of the telephone office for the purpose of displaying the returns. In front of this a considerable crowd congregated as soon as it was dark, with pencils and books, ready to keep tab. The first message to appear on the canvass was, "Old man Oelsner says, 'Berry will win.'" It was not long after this that some figures were received from outside of the county, but they came in slowly, and, to entertain the crowd, the boys manipulating the lantern displayed comic pictures on the canvass occasionally. As returns favorable to a candidate were received, his friends would make the welkin ring. The Gooch crowd was getting the best of the returns at first and was in high glee, but finally Rhinock took a bulge and showed surprising strength in unexpected quarters, and the Rhinock followers came to the front and were having things their way, but it was not long until enough returns had been received to indicate a very close finish, and the reports from that time on only served to shroud the final result with doubt, and after nine o'clock but little interest was manifest, and most of the crowd had dispersed, having heard nothing beyond this county that was satisfactory.

	Berry.	Gooch.	Rhinock.
Constance.....	10	38	28
Florence	43	42	79
Walton.....	33	99	46
Union.....	73	25	34
Bullittsville ...	99	79	15
Rabbit Hash...	54	44	14
Big Bone.....	33	61	35
Bellevue	39	52	12
Beaver	23	40	17
Petersburg.....	167	46	7
Verona.....	16	112	17
Burlington.....	36	119	43
Total.....	626	757	347

Westover received 1 vote in Florence, 1 Walton, 2 in Union, 5 in Rabbit Hash, 1 in Big Bone, 1 in Beaver, 2 in Burlington.

For Justice of the Peace Solon Early received 123 and C. H. Acra, 53 votes in Petersburg. In Bellevue Early received 23 and Acra, 62 votes. Early's majority, 31. Ennis Nixon was nominated for Constable. Moses Scott was nominated for Justice of the Peace in District No. 3.
